Presidential Moving Days

President and Mrs. Orze complete their move from Massachusetts to their new home here. Northwestern's 15th president officially took office on June 1. The photo illustrates that even university presidents have to endure the drudgery of moving day. Welcome to NSU.

Orze Airs Views

Northwestern's 15th President, Dr. Joseph Orze officially took office on June 1. The following is an interview conducted with the new President.

Many people think there has been too much emphasis on athletics at NSU. How do you feel about that?

It's been proven that when you have a winning football team you have a bigger enrollment the next year. It's probably the biggest recruiting tool you have.

Do you plan to make anymore cuts in the athletic department?

I don't plan to cut the athletic department at all because it's such an important department, and the way people see it is a direct reflection on the University.

Do you plan any other personnel changes in the faculty?

I didn't come here with the idea of firing anybody. With Coach Williams, I felt it was necessary in order to give the people involved fair notice.

On a KNWD talk show you said that your Massachusetts campus had just instituted a Pub on campus. How would you feel about a Pub at NSU?

We found it was a far better situation with a Pub on campus in a controlled atmosphere. It was a beer, wine, and pizza situation. It has a lot of advantages. There may be some political and religious problems to overcome, but it is my personal feeling that I'd rather have them (students) on campus, than being somewhere and driving home drunk, maybe wrapping their car around a tree.

Many students are concerned with what the administration is doing to keep them after they enroll. Also, what is being done to recruit new students?

I intend to have an active recruitment program, in and out of the state. Retention is the other side of the coin. The biggest thing is having people who are interested and concerned and who express it. NSU is not unique in this problem. Less than 40 percent of kids who enter college graduate within five years. We have to address the problem and face it as best we can...A real problem is campus enrollment. The largest enrollment is off campus, and we need to bring on campus enrollment up, while keeping off campus enrollment up. We are going to have to develop a rather intense recruiting program. The key to monies is the key to what you can and can't do, and students determine that.

What about the 'Good Ole Boy'? Many people say that is what kind of politics we have here.

What's best for the University is what is going to be done. Everything else comes second. I'm a very easy going person, but I have no difficulty making tough decisions. I don't expect a bunch of yes men, because they're not going to help me.

I realize that with responsibility goes authority, I hope I have the wisdom to quickly realize who can and who can't handle it.

I've just started my eighth year as President. I have enough battle scars so that I no longer worry about the little things. As president there is always somebody to be shot at, and they always shoot at the top.

There are two words that I like to use; excellence and integrity. You have got to get people to strive for excellence, whether athletic or academic, but achieve it so that you're not only excellent, but you're proud of it.

Many people are optimistic about you and expect to see great things at this University.

Well, keep the high hopes. But as an individual I can't do anything but become an effective leader. In order to do that, I must find ways of getting people to do what they want to do. If everybody wants to see this University succeed, then we can succeed.

So you aren't God.

No, I can only walk across water if there are enough rocks.

Sights, Sounds, History of Louisiana Slated For Folk Festival

So you thought the summer in Natchitoches would be dull! Where else but Natchitoches can you hear folk music of the quality of the old Louisiana Hay Ride days, or see a craft that represents every ethnic region of Louisiana? The answer is right here at NSU at the third annual Natchitoches Folk Festival in Prather Coliseum on July 16-18.

Hundreds of folk musicians, craftsmen and storytellers will share centuries-old folkways with more than 20,000 visitors to the campus from around the nation.

The Festival is produced by the Louisiana Folklife Center at NSU and is committed to documenting and preserving our rapidly disappearing cultural heritage.

The 16-18 is the nucleus of the "biggest entertainment weekend in the 267-year history of Natchitoches." Music shows will feature Blues, "Honky Tonk", Bluegrass, Cajun and 14 other music groups.

For those students interested in working in Louisiana's industry, this year's festival focuses on the gigantic oil and gas industry. A special exhibit features tools, photographs, and artifacts that date from Black Gold's beginning.

By the way, NSU's students should fit right into the festivities. Festival Media Relations Director Jim Johnson says, "That's why we put this show on ... to get the young people."

The Festival has been nationally acclaimed by organizations and publications for its efforts to preserve the state's music and musical styles, foods and ways of cooking, as well as old-time crafts, folk narratives, tools and machines. The sights, sounds and history of Louisiana's folk arts can be enjoyed during the Festival's four sessions.

Good food, good music, and interesting exhibits, this could be a NSU student's dream come true. The best part is that admission is $4 for adults, $2 for students, and children under 10 are admitted free. Ticket books offering savings are $10 for visitors and $6 for students.

Editor's Notes

Stuff

By Joe Cunningham

This summer NSU seems to be full of new faces. There's a new face in the President's office, and even the Current Sauce has a new face, for that matter, a whole new bod. I hope that you enjoy the new look, and I'll let you in on a secret. This is a unique opportunity for you as students to make your very own newspaper. We will be trying different styles, as well as different columns. So if you see something you like, or even something you don't like, drop us a line. Remember we are short on space with only three issues this summer, so make the letters short and sweet.

The optimism seems to be high on campus, and the Current Sauce is on a natural high also. We have a great staff, and we're looking forward to the best summer in the Sauce's history.

Something to look forward to is the Sauce's hand in recruiting. Next issue will include a High School tabloid, which will be sent to high school students around the state. This modest effort in attracting new students is being done by the J-305 class. All the student organizations will want to be sure and get an ad in this special edition.

Remember, no trip to the Complex is complete without the SAUCE.

The news of the termination of A.L. Williams' contract as head football coach and athletic director at NSU came as no surprise to anybody who knows anything about local politics. Everyone even remotely associated with the situation just knew that as soon as NSU got its new president, Williams would be looking for a new job. Well, it happened, and folks, that's Louisiana politics.

A.L. Williams was not fired because of his record here. A.L. Williams' contract was terminated because he didn't pass around the money dish like some people thought he should.

Now I'm not going to pretend to think that I know all of the facts here. I don't. But several people in the athletic administration felt that they weren't being given a fair shake with the money situation, and this ultimately brought about the end of A.L. Williams' career here.

The spring sports staff was especially discontented. Maybe they had a right to be. NSU's tennis team has consistently ranked among the very best in the South and this year were invited to a prestigious post season tournament in Monroe.

Radical Rag

He - Boy it's really hot. I'm almost tempted to jump into the lake.

She - You must be hot. In fact your brain must be fried to even think of jumping into the 'sludge swamp'.

He - It really is too bad we can't swim in here. I heard that they used to swim right about where the water treatment plant is dumping. Even Mayor Joe said he swam here.

She - What a change, first he swam in it, now he dumps in it.

He - Give the man credit. He did try. It's just that nobody seems to be able to do anything more than try. Year after year the dumping goes on.

She - Hey, maybe the new President can get something done. They say he is a real doer, what was that he said a few months ago, "Reach for the stars and maybe you can get to the moon". A man like that could get them to stop.

(Scene fades to two passengers in a car. Massachusetts license plates identify the travelers as newcomers.)

She - I really am excited about our new home. I know I'll just love the people and the town and most of all the house.

I can just imagine the southern scenery. And our home will be right in the middle of it all, a part of everything.

The track team has been ranked in the top twenty in the nation for the second year in a row, and coach Jerry Dyes has produced 10 All-Americans in that time. This is good publicity for the University. But, there's one underlying fact centering around all of NSU's spring sports, including the aforementioned; they don't bring NSU any more money. And isn't money the very root of the problem anyway? How ironic!

A.L. Williams, like all good businessmen (and believe me, an athletic director IS a businessman) invested his money where it could make the most return. If more money was dished out to the football team, it's because they bring in the most money back to the athletic department. And as proud as we are of the NSU track team, and their coach, how many of us have ever PAID to get into a track meet?

Everybody around the state of Louisiana knows that Northwestern is short on money. And the athletic department more so. I wonder how many people know that the athletic department got nothing (zero, zip, the big goose egg) from the $200,000 given to us as part of the deal for playing Northeast on T.V. two years ago?

All that money went to paying off a debt that the school owed. A.L. Williams had no control over that. This decision was made over his head and there was nothing he could do about it.

He - Well, dear, I've been meaning to talk to you about that. The scenery I mean. You see, well, I mean...

She - What is it? If it's the house we can fix it. A little paint, a few flowers, that can do wonders for the looks of a place.

He - It's not actually the house. It's the lake. There's a lake across the street.

She - A lake. Is that all? I know, swimmers at all hours of the night, flooding in the winter. Right, that is it isn't it dear?

He - Well actually it isn't the lake that is the problem. It's what's in it. And island, there's an island in the lake.

She - How quaint. The kids can swim over and have picnics on it. Why were you worried...

He - No! No swimming to the island. It isn't your everyday island, this one is made out of sludge.

She - Sludge. Suddenly I hope sludge is a southern type of dirt.

He - No, it's sediment from a water treatment plant across the lake.

She - Sewage. Oh Lord, we're living across from a sewage island.

He - Not sewage, sediment.

She - Sediment, sewage, it's all the same thing. How can we live with a sewage island right in our front yard? We'll just have to move because I refuse to send postcards back home showing the beautiful southern sewage

The athletic department never has had the money necessary to satisfy every change he wants. A.L. Williams was fighting a losing battle all along. But he had too much character to quit.

And at the risk of sounding knowledgeable beyond my years, I feel compelled to make this comment. I've been around and subjected to all kinds of coaches in my young life. From little league baseball when I was four, to church league basketball to high school football and adult league softball as a player; to covering NSU sports as Sports Editor of the SAUCE, to being taught by them in the classroom and on the field. I've known them as friends, and of course, as enemies. And I swear, I've never known a finer man, or a classier person than A.L. Williams.

When reporters from Channel 3 in Shreveport came down and put the lights on him, A.L. Williams didn't shy away and give them a "no comment". He looked right into the camera, didn't point an accusing finger at anybody, he just said that while he was here, he enjoyed it.

I sincerely hope that in his last year at the helm of NSU football, A.L. Williams takes the Demons to a Number 1 ranking in NCAA Division 1-AA. I hope the Demons are 14-0 with playoff wins. And I hope most of all, that the people who were responsible for A.L. Williams' departure, are sorry as hell that they didn't keep him.

islands we live in. I can see it now, "Having a wonderful time, wish you were here. The large island in the background is not sludge".

He - We can't move. I'm the President, and that is the President's house. How would you feel about Reagan if he refused to live in the White House?

She - Well then you'll have to ask them to pump somewhere else.

He - Nobody else will let them pump around them. Would you want them to pump in your backyard?

She - Better their backyard than my frontyard. What can we do?

He - Well, the mayor had a great plan to keep the sludge in tanks and then bury it, but the state wouldn't give them the funds to do it. I figure that the Governor's election is only a few years away, and since I hear a Democrat is a shoe-in for the job we're home free. A democrat will give them the money, and good-by island. She - A few YEARS? Can't you just call the mayor and ask him to stop making islands in our front yard?

He - It isn't that easy. Let me think about it. I'm sure there must be some solution...

(Scene fades...)

Welcome home, President Orze. We wish you the best. In fact we're counting on it.

Turnover In Administration

The count is up to four NSU administrators who have officially announced plans to leave NSU, in the wake of the new President's first two weeks in office. Leaving are Director of Athletics A.L. Williams, Vice-President of University Affairs Morris Bass, Dean of Business David Townsend, and Director of the Lignite Institute John Wascom.

Head football coach and athletic director A.L. Williams announced last week that his contract would be terminated in July of 1983. President Orze said the decision was made because it was in the best interests of the university "to resolve the athletic situation..."

During Williams five year term as head coach, Northwestern has had an overall record of 32 victories and 41 losses.

In other announcements, Vice-President Morris Bass resigns effective on July 16, after a two year service.

Bass said he is resigning "for personal reasons" and will return to his homestate of Tennessee. The resigning vice-president plans to become Business Manager for the Shelby State Community College in Memphis.

When asked why he chose to resign at this time, Bass said, "It was just a good time."

Dean David Townsend announced his retirement as Dean of the College of Business as of July 1. Townsend said his retirement from the Louisiana Teaching System is "a personal decision, basically a result of the most generous retirement system in the country."

Townsend plans to serve as professor of economics at Sam Houston University in Huntsville, Texas.

The 18 year Business Dean of NSU said he was optimistic about the college of business growth in the university. Townsend said he felt the new administration would have a leaner, more cost-effective budget which would allow for a raise in faculty salaries, greatly aiding the business college.

Townsend said the business college had been hurt in the past because the salaries had not been attractive enough to hire doctorate faculty.

Townsend came to NSU in 1963 and became the Dean of Applied Arts and Sciences, which then included a business department, industrial science, agriculture, and home economics.

Townsend said the college of business has grown rapidly, almost doubling its undergraduate enrollment within the last nine years.

"I guess I've been the only dean of the college of business because I was here when it was formed," said Townsend.

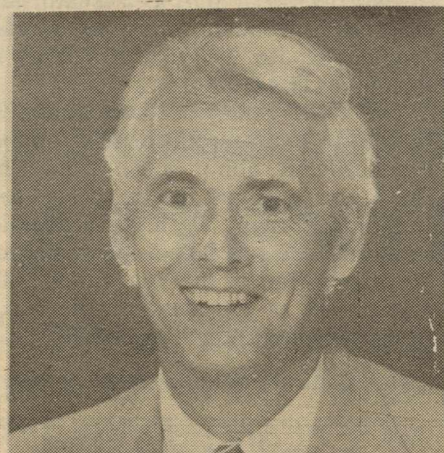

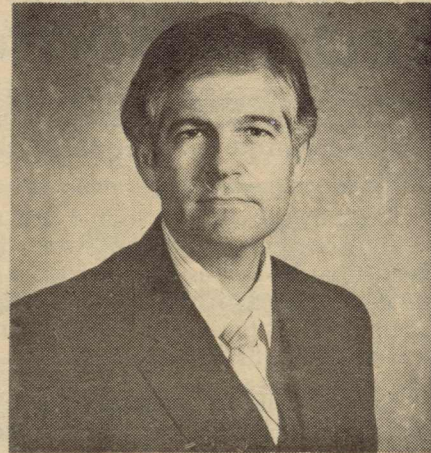

Townsend returns to teach in Texas after a 20 year absence. The dean said, "I guess I received my baptism to higher education in Texas." He taught at Stephen F. Austin University, University of Texas, and University of Houston before teaching at NSU.

The last official retirement, that of Lignite Institute Director John Wascom, becomes effective June 30.

"My retirement has nothing to do with the new president," said Wascom, adding, "If I were going to continue to teach, this is where I'd stay."

The retiring director of the Lignite Institute said he felt, "Students over the years can inject less than when I started teaching, they have less of an interest in learning, but there has been no lack of intelligence."

Wascom stated his plans to continue traveling this country and Canada, speaking on the subject of parenting. The director also said he may open a Geophysical and Geological firm.

The Lignite Institute, which was set up two years ago by Wascom is a first at NSU. The Institute has since entered a consortium with Louisiana Tech, Northeast, and Grambling. Wascom said the consortium is "a first as sciences are concerned."

No replacement has yet been named to the Institute.

Wascom expressed concern with the education system, but said the fault was with parents, not with universities. He added, "They (universities) are too concerned with their own survival and not primarily with students, although you would have difficulty in getting anyone to admit it."

In Wascom's 18 years he served as head of the only department of Geology ever on campus from 1967-72, had a four year research contract with NASA, headed the department of Agriculture and Geological sciences from 1977-80, and directed the Lignite Institute from 1980-82.

Askew Named Officer of the Year

Walter Askew Jr., a member of the Northwestern State University campus police force, has been selected as the Louisiana University Police Officer of the Year.

Askew, who was chosen earlier this spring as the University Police Officer of the Year at Northwestern, will attend the LUPA convention July 29-30 in Lake Charles, where he will receive the plaque and cash award that accompany the statewide honor. A rotating trophy to be placed in NSU's police department for one year will also be presented during the convention.

The Louisiana University Police Officer of the Year Award was established in 1981 in an effort to upgrade university police personnel across the state. The 1983 competition will be hosted by Northwestern.

Askew, who was on active duty with the U.S. Air Force from 1967 to 1976, joined the University Police force at Northwestern in 1976. He was a line officer for four years and has been shift supervisor or officer-in-charge of special assignments for the past two years.

A native of North Carolina, Askew is currently enrolled in the law enforcement curriculum at Northwestern. He will earn an associate degree in law enforcement next fall.

The movies for this summer are-as follows:

June 18 Dogs of War
June 25 The Spy Who Loved Me
July 9 True Confessions
July 16 Caveman

Adopt A Gorilla?

"Man has so rapidly altered the environment that animals rarely are able to change and adapt to these new conditions." But through man's compassion and support, the world's animals will be able to take refuge in naturalistic homes in zoos such as Audubon's. In order to provide homes for these endangered animals, Audubon Zoo is launching an Adopt-An-Audubon-Animal program, explained Audubon Park Director L. Ronald Forman.

As in similar programs in other zoos around the nation, donors are able to provide for the general support of their adopted species through contributions ranging from $15 for animals such as tree shrews or rabbits, to $5,000 for a gorilla.

A tax-deductible adoption fee gives Zoo-Parents a choice in adopting an Audubon Animal for a year. The fee helps the Zoo provide for the special diet and care the animals need.

When a person adopts an animal, the individual's name will be placed on the Zoo-Parents Honor Roll plaque, located on the Zoo grounds. They'll also receive a personalized Adoption Certificate for their animal, a Zoo-Parent bumper sticker, and an iron-on Zoo-Parent T-Shirt emblem. Zoo Parents can exercise their visiting rights each Fall during a special Zoo-Parents Party.

Individuals, as well as civic groups, businesses, school groups and community organizations are invited to participate in this program. Adoptive parents will learn about individual species and play a vital role in conserving endangered animals threatened in the wild.

Mumps Vaccine Now Available

There has been a limited amount of mumps vaccine made-available for all age groups. This vaccine will be administered on a first come first serve basis.

Usually mumps is a mild disease. However, it may occasionally be severe and produce serious complications.

Past Governor Heads Program

Former Governor Jimmie H. Davis will headline a country music program at Rebel State Commemorative Area on Saturday, June 19. The program, which begins at 6:30 p.m., is cosponsored by the Louisiana Office of State Parks and the Rebel Memorial Committee in Many.

Committee Chairman and Program Coordinator Robert Gentry said that the event will also feature the Birdwell Brothers from Marthaville, the Lightfoot Gospel Singers of Many, and the group God's Country from Leesville.

He added that a concession stand with food and soft drinks will be available. Admission will be $3.00 for adults and $1.00 for children under 12.

Rebel State Commemorative Area is located 25 miles west of Natchitoches on Louisiana Highway 1221. It will eventually contain Louisiana's country music museum which is set to open in 1983. Rebel is also the site of the grave of the Unknown confederate Soldier.

"We are anxious to learn where all the living POTPOURRI editors are as quickly as possible, so we can begin to give the details of the special event and special edition."

Dupuis, a pre-dental student, is busy this summer with plans for the execution of preparations to publish the 1983 yearbook, the 75th anniversary edition.

He said all former POTPOURRI editors and other alumni can write him or the staff adviser, Ezra Adams at NSU Box 5245, Natchitoches, La. 71457. His office phone is 318-5026, and Adams can be reached through 318-357-4586.

Rogers Review

Fall Recruiting in Question

While everybody has been talking about the firing of NSU Head Coach and Athletic Director A.L. Williams, I wonder one thing: Has anybody really sat down and thought what Northwestern will do next fall when recruiting time comes around? How can you hire a new head coach before recruiting starts with him not knowing a thing about the players or what the team will need? People need to start thinking about these last two questions, they are important to everyone concerned.

A lame-duck head coach can be compared to a lame-duck President of the United States, you are just biding time. A lame-duck coach makes no big decisions. This makes recruiting a little bit harder because everyone knows the present coach will not be there, but they don't know who will be.

How can a football player coming out of high school make a decision on going to college when they don't know who the head coach is, or what kind of program he will institute? The last question that comes to mind is: Is Coach Williams the only one fired or are all the assistants gone also? No one knows this answer but Dr. Orze and maybe the assistant coaches. This would add a little more to the problem of recruiting, during the 1982-83 football season.

My advice to everyone is, let's just sit back and see how all involved in the Northwestern State Football program come out of this one. Who knows, we might all be surprised

Demons Place In Nation's Top 20

News Bureau LA--For the second straight year the Northwestern State track and field team placed in the top 20 in the nation after scoring 24 team points while placing in four events at the NCAA national meet last week in Provo, Utah.

The Demons tied for the 20th spot with the University of Arizona after placing 11th in the nation last Spring. This year the Demons claimed a second place in the 400-meter relay, a fifth place in the shot put and 11th place finishes in both the javelin and decathlon.

The relay team did not defend the title it won a year ago, but it wasn't because of a lack of effort. The Demon foursome set a school and a national meet record until Houston won the finals with a record time of 38.53.

Also for the second straight year Northwestern had five athletes earn All-American honors. Senior Mark Duper and sophomore Mario Johnson both earned All-American status for the second straight year as members of the relay team. Freshman Edgar Washington and sophomore Ray Brown both earned the honor for the first time. Sophomore John Campbell also earned All-American status for the first time with his fifth place finish in the shot put.

Campbell was sixth in the qualifying for the shot put finals and then moved up to the fifth spot with a school record throw of 65-8½. The fifth place finish was an improvement for Campbell over his ninth place finish earlier in the year at the indoor championships.

"I thought John Campbell came a long way this Spring," added Dyes. "He's still just a sophomore and he improved with just about every meet. He wanted to get to 66 feet at the nationals, but he did very well for his first outdoor championships."

Sophomore Steve Stockton placed 11th in the javelin competition with a throw of 245-10 to place in the national finals for the second straight year. Last Spring Stockton earned All-American honors by placing third in the national meet with a school record 252-10.

The big surprise for the Demons came from Rick Schweitzer in the final two weeks of the season. The junior from Deridder qualified for the decathlon just one week before the national meet and then placed 11th in the nation to score two team points.

"Rick did very well at the end of the season," said Coach Jerry Dyes. "It was a great effort for him to qualify for the national meet. But then he just didn't have the time he needed to be rested. On the second day at the NCAA meet you could see the fatigue."

Overall Dyes was fairly pleased with the results of the Demons at the NCAA meet. "I didn't really know how we would do out there," stated Dyes. "The relay team ran well and the time was great. The kids were really down after placing second because they all thought they would win. But later they realized they had done their best and really ran well."

The NCAA meet ended the year for all but two of the Demons. Campbell will compete in the shot put at the Athletic Congress national meet June 18-20 at Knoxville, TN and Schweitzer will compete in The Athletic Congress national decathlon competition on those same dates in Baton Rouge.

Thomas, Frey Attend Nat'l Finals Rodeo

Brian Thomas of Natchitoches and Mark Frey of Morganza will be in Bozeman, Mont., June 15-19 to represent Northwestern State University in the College National Finals Rodeo.

Thomas and Frey will compete in the team roping competition at the CNFR, which is sponsored by the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

The national finals include three long go-rounds and a nationally televised finals.

A junior agri-business major, Thomas qualified for the CNFR by finishing second in team roping at the end of the NIRA Southern Region's regular 12-rodeo season. He is the first intercollegiate rodeo contestant from Northwestern to qualify for the prestigious Finals Rodeo. This was NSU's first year of team membership in the NIRA.

Thomas selected Frey, an NSU sophomore who has been his intercollegiate and professional team roping partner, to compete with him at the CNFR. Frey was 11th in Southern Region team roping this year.

The top two individuals in each event plus the top two all-arounds and the first two teams in the men's and women's division of each of the NIRA's 10 regions qualify for the College National Finals Rodeo.

At the CNFR in Montana, Thomas will handle the heeling, and Frey will be roping the steers. During the 1980-81 season in the Southern Region, the Thomas-Frey team roping combination won the long go-round at Tyler Junior College in Tyler, Tex., and at the University of Southwestern Louisiana in Lafayette; was fourth in the long go-round at Navarro Junior College in Corsicana, Tex.; finished sixth in the long go-round at Southwest Texas University in San Marcos, Tex., and was eighth in the long go-round at Stephen F. Austin State University in Nacogdoches, Tex.

Williams Terminated As A.D. Bengals

Head Football Coach and Athletic Director A.L. Williams has announced that his contract will be terminated at the end of the 1982-83 fiscal year.

Dr. Joseph J. Orze, Northwestern's president, stated the decision was made, "because it was in the best interests of the university to resolve the athletic situation at this time but still allow A.L. time to relocate."

Orze said he felt a change in NSU athletics, "was necessary, but I also wanted to be fair to Coach Williams, and I will provide all of the support possible to assist him in having a successful season and in leaving Northwestern as a winner."

Yates Signs Big Man

Northwestern State basketball Coach Wayne Yates capped off a successful recruiting year Monday afternoon by signing Robert Garris of Pine Bluff, AR to a basketball letter of intent.

Garris is a 6-11½, 210-pound center from Pine Bluff High School and is the seventh recruit to sign with the Demons. Of those seven recruits five will be freshmen at Northwestern in the Fall.

Garris got a late start on his basketball career as this past season was his first full season. Garris did not play basketball until his sophomore year and then missed his junior year due to illness.

"Robert has excellent potential and will fit into our program real well," said Demon Coach Wayne Yates.

"We have high hopes of Robert developing into a strong player. He has great size, is a good shooter and is a standout in the classroom as well."

This past season Garris helped his Pine Bluff team to a 13-10 overall record and to third place in the district behind Little Rock Hall High. In two games against all-stater Anthony Walton Garris held the high-scoring Walton to just four points.

"For us Robert was a rebounder and shot blocker," said Pine Bluff Coach Joe Ball. "This was really his only season of basketball because he never played until the 10th grade. I really feel Robert is a diamond in the rough."

Garris is a member of the National Honor Society and scored a 27 on his ACT exams.

"Robert is the fifth high school senior we have signed and we feel this gives us an excellent freshman class for next season," said Yates, who guided the Demons to a 19-9 record this past year. "Four of these prep players were all-state players and with our two junior college recruits we feel we have signed some top notch basketball players that can help us right away."

Others to sign with the Demons this year include guards Brian Jolivet and Robbie Brown from Holy Rosary in Lafayette, forward Donald Mays from Logansport, guard DeShon Jenkinb from Jena, forward Robin Grays from Tyler Junior College and forward A.J. Culbreath from Panola Junior College.

Williams, whose contract will expire on July 1, 1983, has served as head coach at Northwestern for seven seasons, compiling a record of 32 victories and 41 losses. He has been athletic director for five years and served one season as an assistant.

"I feel we have made progress in football," Williams said. "I am disappointed that some of the goals we had set were not reached. After the 8-3 season in 1980, we felt the football program had reached the point where we wanted it to be, but a lot of injuries last year set us back."

Williams went on to say, "I feel that the athletic program is in overall much better shape now than it was when I came here, but I don't have any bad feelings. I have had too many great relationships with athletes here to be bitter."

Williams best year came in 1980,

In Second Round

Dolphins Draft Duper

Wide receiver Mark Duper of Northwestern State was selected in the second round of the National Football League draft by the Miami Dolphins.

Duper was the 52nd player selected in the annual draft and the second player from Louisiana taken. LSU wide receiver Orlando McDaniel was the 50th player selected.

Duper is the second Northwestern player in two years to be selected in the second round as last season Joe Delaney was selected in the second round and went on to earn UPI Rookie of the Year honors for Kansas City.

Duper, who is a track All-American at Northwestern, caught 24 passes this past season for 592 yards and seven touchdowns. Duper averaged 24.7 yards per catch and tied a school record with three touchdowns in a season-ending 41-9 win over Northeast Louisiana.

when the Demons won eight games, for only the third time in history, and were ranked eighth in the final I-AA poll. The 1980 season was highlighted by a 13-10 victory over McNeese in Lake Charles, which snapped a two-year regular season winning streak for the Cowboys.

While at Northwestern, Williams has put several players in the professional ranks, these include Sidney Thornton of the Steelers, Petey Perot of the Eagles, and Joe Delaney of the Chiefs. Four others—Mark Duper, James Bennett, Carlton Finister, and Darrel Toussaint—will join pro teams this season.

From the 1981 season Northwestern will return 15 starters, and Williams said he is "optimistic that we will have a successful year. My objective is to have the best football team possible."

"I'm happy, I'm glad to be going to Miami," said Duper after the selection. "I thought I had a chance to go in the second round but I wasn't sure. Miami wasn't one of the teams that showed alot of interest, but I'm very happy to be drafted by the Dolphins."

Tab Bennett In The Ninth

James Bennett has become the second Northwestern State wide receiver to be picked in the National Football League draft as he was taken in the ninth round by the Cincinnati Bengals.

Bennett, a native of Shreveport who prepped at Woodlawn High School, follows teammate Mark Duper in the draft. Duper was selected by Miami in the second round.

Bennett led Northwestern receivers in receptions this past season with 28 catches for 489 yards. Bennett scored three touchdowns and averaged 17.5 yards per catch. For his career Bennett had 69 receptions for 1,185 yards and 11 touchdowns. As a sophomore Bennett led the team with 10 punt returns for 57 yards.

"James has worked extremely hard during his career and being drafted is a just reward," said Demon head Coach A.L. Williams. "James has the finest pair of hands of any receiver I have ever worked with. He is so fluid that sometimes you just can't believe how well he can catch a football."

Alost Named Director

Dr. Robert Alost, dean of the College of Education since 1975, has resigned from his position at Northwestern to accept the position of director of the new Louisiana School for Math, Science and the Arts.

Alost has been unanimously appointed director by the board of directors for the school, who met at Northwestern on Friday and Saturday. Some 80 applicants applied for the directorship of the school, which is scheduled to open in the fall of 1983 on the campus.

"I really think this will be a tremendous thing for the state of Louisiana and certainly for Northwestern and the Natchitoches area," said Alost, referring to the gifted and talented school. Alost said that the school is the first of its kind in the nation, in that it will house both talented and gifted children in a residential setting. The newly appointed director felt the school was one of the most exciting things to happen at Northwestern and added, "It's one of those things that makes you want to get out of bed in the morning and go to work."

Governor David Treen, who was at Northwestern to dedicate the new school, said the school is "an opportunity to challenge every bright mind in our state."

The school will bring 11th and 12th grade academically gifted or artistically talented high school students to live on the NSU campus, in Bossier and Prudhomme dormitories. "Both dormitories and the old Natchitoches High building, as well as the gymnasium behind the school are scheduled for a complete renovation," said Alost.

A member of the Northwestern faculty since 1963, Alost served as head of the Department of Health and Physical Education for 12 years before becoming dean of the College of Education, one of the largest colleges on campus.

Before working at NSU, Alost taught for one year at Alexandria Junior High School and two years at Central High School of Baton Rouge and was a teacher and coach at Istrouma High School of Baton Rouge for three years.

Alost is a graduate of Bolton High School of Alexandria, received bachelor and master's degrees from Northwestern and earned the doctorate degree in education from Louisiana State University.

Former president of the Louisiana Association for Colleges of Teacher Education and the Louisiana Council of Deans of Education, Alost is a member of the Governor's Advisory Committee on Education of Handicapped Children and the Joint Legislative Committee on Teacher Education Programs.

During his tenure as NSU's dean of education, Alost has established the Center for the History of Louisiana Education, the North Louisiana Professional Development Center and the Distinguished Faculty Chair at Northwestern.

A frequent speaker for education meetings throughout the South, Alost has published articles in numerous professional journals, including "Louisiana Schools," "LAHPER Journal," "The Boardman," and "Louisiana Education Research Association Journal."

Active in civic activities in the Natchitoches area, Alost is a former president of the Natchitoches Parish Chamber of Commerce and the Natchitoches Lions Club. He has served on the board of directors of the Natchitoches Recreation Association and is on the Board of Deacons of the First Baptist Church.

No replacement has yet been named as dean of the College of Education," said Alost.

$125,000 Cutback At Northwestern

Northwestern will see a $125,000 cutback in Federal financial aid dollars in the fall and spring of this year, says Assistant Director of Financial Aid Terry Faust. "This is just a trend that seems like it's going to continue," said Faust.

"Every school was cut a certain percent of what they received," said Faust. He added that a Federal bill has been proposed to put $25,000 back into the college work study program, but that nothing would be known about the bill until August or September.

"The best thing we can hope for is to keep our funding at its present levels," commented Faust. He added that Northwestern has had to make some cutbacks to accommodate the lost Federal aid dollars. "We are rewarding those students who make satisfactory grades with financial aid," said the assistant director of financial aid.

"Rewarding" students who make satisfactory grades is another way of saying that the requirements for Financial Aid at NSU are being tightened, and those who do not make the grades will find themselves out of financial aid monies.

The new standards for receiving financial aid are that a student must have an overall 2.0 GPA in the four major subjects in order to be in good academic standing to qualify for financial assistance as a Freshman. To continue receiving financial assistance a student must make satisfactory academic progress. This calls for a student to maintain 1.5 GPA the first year in college. The second year a student must maintain a 2.0 GPA to continue receiving financial assistance. If a student fails to maintain the required GPA (in order to continue receiving financial assistance), he or she will not receive financial assistance for the following semester. The student must make a 2.0 GPA and enroll in the same number of hours as the previous semester in order to make satisfactory progress and receive financial assistance the following semester.

Transfer students are required to comply with the above standards of satisfactory progress in order to receive financial assistance at NSU.

A student may receive financial aid for a maximum of five years (ten semesters) in order to complete a four year degree program.

Faust felt the tougher standards for aid will remain as long as Republicans are in office. He added, "Students are going to have to make good grades to get funding."

Radical Rag Retention Is The Word

"NSU is the place for you" is being backed by Mayor Joe Sampite and Natchitoches friends of Northwestern again this fall. The administration and faculty at NSU are pleased that the city supports us so wholeheartedly.

Unfortunately the general feeling among the campus is that the body race is on. The "beef up the enrollment" policy comes across as propaganda that leaves the students who enroll semester after semester out in the cold.

Consider for a moment the scholarship situation. Through no fault of the admissions office, there are no graduate student scholarships available, and very few scholarships are ear-marked for upper class students. It is these students who come back semester after semester to pay their money to NSU.

It is these students who have proved that they are indeed serious about being in college. But instead of encouraging these students to continue in their studies, the system leans toward an incoming freshman who has never paid fees to NSU, and may not even be in college over one or two semesters.

Another point to ponder are the campus dormitories. The problems of empty dormitories is a large one, even the governor has addressed. But out of all the dormitories, the ones designated as freshmen dorms are the newest and most modern ones on campus. An upperclassman who wishes to have upper class privileges must brave the scalding showers, leaky roofs, pitiful heating systems, and generally run down and out-dated conditions in the dorms designated "upperclass". Is it any wonder the upperclassmen don't want to live on campus?

Inside View, designed exclusively for freshman, not only allows the new faces to get a sneak preview of NSU, but also allows them to pre-register. For two years now the students have asked for pre-registration, the Student Government Association has passed bills calling for pre-registration, but still the students cannot pre-register.

Incoming freshman are given a privilege previously given only to seniors, a right not given to sophomores, juniors, and graduate students.

The bulk of the problem of enrollment at NSU is not with obtaining freshmen, it is with retaining the students who return semester after semester.

Instead of catering to one shot students, the state Board of Regents, the city of Natchitoches, and most importantly, the Northwestern administration must move with the times and support the people who continue to support NSU.

This does not mean that we should not be concerned with recruiting new students. It simply means that keeping the students after they are recruited is only common sense.

Dear Editor,

It's time to give the city a break over the Chaplain's Lake affair. If Mayor Sampite had the money I am sure the lake would be cleaned.

A major part of the problem is the legal right to who owns and can use the lake. The city has a contract or something that permitted them to deposit their sludge. But what of the homeowners that dump their raw sewage into the lake. During a recent drive along the lake I counted at least 10 sewage drain lines emptying into the lake. One home is owned by a NSU professor. So while the mayor is working on getting funds to clean the lake, the students should work to stop the other sources of pollution.

By the way, in regard to the use of the lake, it seems that local towns people can fish on the lake but students can't picnic there as a result of an order by President Orze.

Winding Down The Summer

...A few pot shots as the slow summer session winds down to a finish, and my grade point winds down to where I'll be finished.

...It's official, Governor Dave Treen has officially signed Natchitoches and Northwestern up for the new Gifted and Talented High School. This will sure be a tremendous boost for everyone here in Natchitoches, including NSU. Enough just can't be said about our local legislators down in Baton Rouge, Senator Don Kelly and Representative Jimmy Long who worked tirelessly on the issue.

...How about that Folk Festival. It is just amazing how Dr. Don Hatley and Jim Johnson have built that thing up to what it is today. If you've been by either man's office in the last couple of weeks, it would be hard to get in to see them without tripping over envelopes, folders, letters, or some other Folk Festival paraphanelia. They've done for this festival what legislators Long and Kelly have done for the G'T School. And did you notice how many people were there and all of the different crafts. Personally, I liked the duck carvings. Some of those were so real looking you half way expected them to reach their necks up and quack once or twice.

...And while we're on the subject of people doing outstanding things for NSU, how about a plug for all you sports fans out there. NSU basketball star Wayne Waggoner was recently selected in the 6th round of the NBA draft. The NBA's Dallas Mavericks selected the 6-3 sharpshooter from Shreveport who was the Demons leading scorer and All-Conference the past two years.

Over on the astro-turf, three NSU football players have been selected pre-season All-America's in the SPOR-TING NEWS pre-season Division 1-AA Football Checklist. Reasons was named to the Kodak first team All-America squad last and Hebert was an honorable mention selection two years ago. Oatis set a school record for receiving yards last year.

...Well, that's about it, hope you're summer was (is) as good as mine. Hope to see you all back in the fall, same time, (Tuesday afternoon) same place (your friendly neighborhood SAUCE box), same station (NSU). Have a good summer, and try not fail those finals.

Dear Editor,

I just wanted to write and express my opinion on last years POTPOURRI. I feel that this was the best book that Northwestern has had in a long time. It seemed to be very well planned and layed out.

Over the past years, the quality of the POTPOURRI has not been up to par. Every year they have had an overwhelming budget, but the quality of the book was lacking. This year they were on a very tight budget, and suprisingly enough, they produced a quality book.

I just wanted to compliment the editor and his staff on a job well done. I only hope the quality of next years POTPOURRI will equal the quality and workmanship of the 1982 POTPOURRI.

Thank you,
J.D. Williams

Wester Lists Scholarships Available

If you are an upperclassman or a transfer student and you want to apply for a scholarship, your chances of receiving one are slim, reports Director of Admissions Curtis Wester.

"There are not many scholarships for a continuing or transfer student," said Wester. Wester said a junior with a four point grade average who had never applied for a scholarship before would have more trouble than an incoming freshman who applied for a scholarship.

"Most of the scholarships we deal with are for incoming freshmen. Unfortunately there are not very many, if any scholarships for out of state students," said Wester. Wester said that scholarships are used as a recruiting tool, with the idea that NSU can attract good students and hopefully those students will keep their scholarships for a few years.

Wester said upperclassmen do have a chance to pick up a scholarship if a recipient with a four-year donation loses theirs for any reason.

The office of Admissions has recently developed a form that students can fill out to apply for all scholarships, according to Wester. He added that in the past, students have had to apply for a specific scholarship, and there was no central list available.

If you want to apply for a scholarship, Wester advises you take these steps:

- Go to the Registrar's office and obtain a student copy of your transcripts.
- Pick up an application and scholarship list from the office of Admissions.
- Find a scholarship that relates to you, or that you are qualified for.
- Fill out the application and turn it in to the Admissions office, with a copy of your transcripts.
- Go to the college or department that is donating the scholarship, and advise them that you are applying for a scholarship. (The Admissions office will have this information, if you are not sure who the donor is).

Below is a list of scholarships available to students, as compiled by the office of admissions. The list is 90 to 95 percent complete, reports Wester. The deadline for applying for all scholarships has been set at March 15 by the office of Admissions. The number, amount and requirements for each scholarship are given, if the donor supplied it to the office of admissions. If you are interested in a scholarship that has incomplete information, check with the admissions office for who to contact for the complete information.

Package Trip To Game Available

The San Angelo Extravaganza, a weekend trip to the Northwestern State vs. Angelo State football game on September 11, is now open for reservations at the Northwestern State athletic department.

There are two separate packages available for the trip, which is being sponsored by the NSU athletic department.

Renovations To Begin On Natatorium

McInnis Brothers, Inc., of Minden has been awarded a $689,081 contract to completely renovate Nesom Natatorium, the indoor swimming and diving facility at Northwestern State University.

Loran Lindsey, director of the physical plant at NSU, said renovation work began this week and is scheduled to be completed by March of 1983. This is the first major renovation to the natatorium since it was constructed in 1938.

The project will include making the swimming pool more accessible to handicapped persons, installing new pool service equipment and renovating the existing building.

Lindsey said the natatorium's glass roof will be replaced, new lighting will be installed, and the pool and decking will be refinished with new ceramic tile and outdoor carpeting.

Walls and ceilings in the pool area, which is 121 feet by 52 feet, will be refinished with ceramic tile, and new aluminum steps will be added to the pool.

The basement of the 14,326-square-foot building will be renovated as an equipment and storage area, and new heating, air-conditioning and ventilation systems and Operable windows will be installed in the building.

Library To Sponsor Microcomputer Workshop

Northwestern State University's Eugene P. Watson Memorial Library and the Louisiana Association of School Librarians will sponsor a workshop on microcomputers in education Tuesday, July 27, at NSU.

Sid Agent of the Tandy Corporation in Dallas and Shirley McCandless, administrative officer of instructional computers for the State Department of Education, will be the consultants for the workshop.

Scheduled from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. in Room 240 of the NSU Student Union Building, the workshop is being coordinated by Watson Library Director Dr. William C. Buchanan and Dr.

Rebecca Lawrence, head of the university library's media division.

Buchanan said the one-day workshop at Northwestern has been approved for four Professional Improvement Program credits.

The microcomputer workshop is designed to provide "hands-on" experience. Other areas of microcomputer interest to be included in the program are the status in Louisiana, utilization and selection of microcomputers.

For additional information, call 318-357-4403 or write Dr. William Buchanan, Director, Eugene P.

NSU Hosts Miss Drill Team Camp

Dance Camp Instructors

...step hop, step kick, turn 2, 3, snap...Can you guess what this is? If you guessed girls learning a dance routine, you're absolutely correct.

Ten high schools and junior high schools from throughout Louisiana, Arkansas, and Texas attended the Northwestern Miss Drill Team World dance camp held July 11-15. Many routines, techniques, and drills were learned during this five day session.

Instructors of the camp were Jamie Wilkins of Peoria, Illinois; and Pam McElroy of Houston, Texas.

Miss Wilkins attends Indiana University where she is a senior majoring in Marketing Management with a emphasis in Computer Technology. Jamie, the former Miss Drill Team World Illinois 1979, is a member of the "Red Steppers".

Miss McElroy attends the University of Houston. She is pursuing a major in Dance and Physical Education. Pam is the former Miss Drill Team USA of 1980. She judges and teaches internationally as well as helps direct the Miss Drill Team USA Pageant.

Jamie and Pam have directed camps all over the United States.

NSU instructors were: Dwanda

Smith, Houma; Vaneesa McGaskey, Provencal; Brenda Goleman, Natchitoches; Stacey Baumgardner, Natchitoches, Monique Esquireux, New Iberia.

On Sunday the squads gathered in Keyser Auditorium for their first session. They were given a schedule of the weeks activities and learned routines. Afterwards, cookies and punch were served.

During the week, the squads watched a film on "Miss Drill Team USA". A pizza party was held after the film.

Each school received a trophy. Oak Forest High School received the Teachers Award. This award went to the squad who showed the most enthusiasm, spirit, and performance. Some of the girls received ribbons for individual achievement.

The highlight of the camp was the crowning of "Top of the World" girl. The winner was Dede Duncan, a 16-year-old senior from E.D. White High School. Dede is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Duncan. "This was a great experience for me," said Dede. "I've enjoyed the camp very much and had lots of fun," she continued.

For Summer Orientation

Inside View Welcomes Freshmen

Every student who attended Inside View truly got a taste of college life. Inside View was the summer orientation program designed for incoming freshmen. It was sponsored by High School Relations.

Ten college students, called Insiders were selected to be counselors. Their job was to make every freshman feel relaxed and welcome at NSU.

From the moment of registration until the end of the farewell ceremony, each student was exposed to many different aspects of college life.

The entire program began with the opening ceremony conducted by the ten Insiders. They set a very comfortable atmosphere by dancing, and singing songs about NSU. After their presentation, Dr. Joseph Orze, President of NSU, welcomed the students to Northwestern. "Your class will be very special to me. We both will be starting off at the same time, and I'm looking forward to many great years here at NSU."

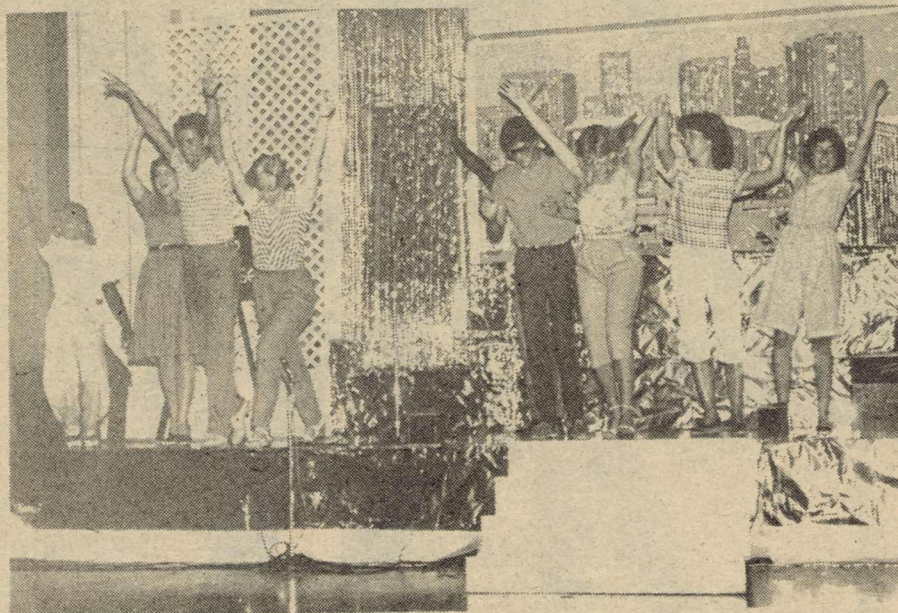

The students were then divided into ten separate groups, with an Insider leading each. During their stay, each freshman was required to take the English placement test. This test helped their advisers in preparing the students' schedules.

A Parents' Program was provided for those parents wishing to attend. This was indeed a fine program where many parents learned a lot about Northwestern. They (parents) had a panel of people to answer any questions that they had concerning NSU.

On the second day, the Insiders presented skits to inform the students of the various programs and services offered to them. The United Ministries of Higher Education provided cokes during a short break in the students' busy schedule.

The Organizational Potpourri also took place on the second day. Its main purpose was to expose the freshmen to the many organizations at Northwestern. Tables were decorated and set up around the Student Union Ballroom. Students were able to go from table to table and see what each organization offered. Many clubs had applications available, making this a great opportunity to get the freshmen involved.

The highlight of Inside View was the Cabaret. At eight o'clock on the second night, students entered the candlelit nightclub-type atmosphere of the ballroom. Excellent entertainment was provided by several NSU students.

Inside View Staffers

Following the entertainment and singalong the lights were lowered and the dance began.

On the final morning, students were required to eat breakfast with their advisers. This gave them a chance to get to know their advisers better.

The main advantage of Inside View was, of course, early registration. On the third day, each student pre-registered for the fall semester.

In only two and a half days, these freshmen met new people, experienced dorm life, made new friends, and basically got a positive overall view of NSU.

Degree in Photography Approved by Board of Trustees

Photography at NSU has recently received two major boosts through the renovation of the Photo Lab and the Board of Trustees; approval for a bachelors degree in photography.

According to Nolan Bailey, Instructor of Photography, the curriculum is set up to train students in the methods and techniques of professional photography. Courses to be offered will involve instruction in such areas as black and white, portrait, film making, color, photojournalism, and color slide.

To accommodate the expected increase in student use of the laboratory facilities, the Photo Lab's large printing room has been divided into a printing darkroom and a print washing/drying room. Bailey said this would allow a larger number of students to use the laboratory at the same time. Each student will also have more time individually, thus preparing their photos and slides more efficiently.

Included in the Photo Lab renovation was the purchase of over $20,000 of photographic equipment for use in the basic classes. Students working in the lab will have access to six new enlargers, a print washer and dryer, a water chiller for processing film, seven Olympus cameras and lenses, eight Vivitar flash units, and four Yashica Mat cameras.

Bailey said plans are being made to add portrait and commercial studios, as well as processing areas for color and black-and-white film. He expects the program to attract many interested students from throughout the state.

Inside Viewers Participate in Intramural Half-Niter

With names like Crown Royal, Budweiser, the Hell Raisers, and the Jama Holics, there has got to be a fun time. That is just what the new incoming freshmen, participating in the Inside View program had Sunday night.

The Intramural Department hosted the Inside Viewers with a Half-Niter. The Inside View teams participated in 10 activities during the evening with the finale being scooter races. The 10 teams competed against each other in such games as darts, football pass, horseshoes, frisbee throw, and home run derby.

If the enthusiasm the freshmen showed that night is anything like what it will be in the fall, student participation should be on the rise.

Beauty on NSU's Campus Award Winners Named During Basketball Camp

Linda Grayson of Campti and Shantell Hardison of Natchitoches were the only double award winners at the Northwestern State University annual Lady Demon summer basketball camp.

IS NSU THE PLACE FOR YOU?

ANSWER THESE QUESTIONS FIRST!

-  DO YOU want a quality education without having to promise to give up your first born child in order to pay for it?
  -  DO YOU want to go to a school where classes are small and personal and you can actually visit with the professor when you want to?
  -  DO YOU want to go to a school where you are a name and not a number and where university correspondence is not addressed to an SS No.?
  -  DO YOU like trees and flowers more than concrete parking lots where the thrill of victory is finding a parking place?...And you are more often faced with the agony of defeat and a parking ticket?
  -  DO YOU want to go to a school with a fine athletic tradition (8-3 football season in 1980 and an NCAA championship track team)?
  -  DO YOU want a front row seat for the greatest Christmas Spectacular in the country?
  -  ARE extra curricular activities important to you? Do you want the opportunity to become involved in student activities, fraternities and intramurals?
  -  DO YOU want access to the finest student recreation complex at any university in the state of Louisiana (golf, tennis, swimming)?
  -  ARE YOU looking for friendships that will last a lifetime?
- THETA CHI FRATERNITY believes that if you answered these questions "YES," then you belong here at NSU and that you belong in a fraternity. THETA CHI is one fraternity that will assure that you take full advantage of the opportunities at NSU. So come to NSU this fall and come to the THETA CHI HOUSE as well.

*FRATERNITIES AT NORTHWESTERN*

Each fraternity is different since each is based on different precepts and principles. Generally, however, a fraternity is a group of men joined together as brothers, working as a group, socially, academically, athletically, and as friends. Northwestern presently the home of several national fraternities, each with its own individual characteristics.

Perhaps the greatest thing about the Northwestern campus is its size. Here you are an individual, not just a student number. In THETA CHI that individuality is enhanced as you become an integral part of a working (and playing) group. Although we are all brothers united in ideals and friendship, we are also individuals. This experience is invaluable during and after your college days.

Since its founding on April 10, 1856, THETA CHI has grown until it has more than 155 chapters throughout the United States and Canada. Presently there are over 100,000 living THETA CHIS and our numbers increase by over 2,500 each year. Nationally THETA CHI is one of the most respected fraternities and has continually ranked in the top five.

Fraternities seek new members in a college ritual called "rush." At Northwestern rush week lasts from Sunday, August 22, through Monday, August 30. During that time you will have the opportunity to visit all the fraternity houses at NSU and learn about each fraternity. THETA CHI encourages you to make the best of this time, for this is when you meet the brothers of each fraternity and they meet you. On Sunday, August 29, each fraternity will meet and decide to whom they wish to extend "bids." A bid is an invitation to become a pledge. We at THETA CHI believe that your decision to accept the bid of a fraternity should be based on a rational and careful comparison of each fraternity at NSU. We are proud of the fraternity system here and feel that each of the fraternities has many positive attributes, but we are also proud of our own fraternity. Look at the others and then look at THETA CHI. You be the judge.

The decision you make that week will affect your life for the next four years and beyond. Your college years will be among your most treasured memories. We believe that you will want THETA CHI among them.

Greeks Help 'Liven-up' NSU College Life

College is hard tedious work that can sometimes drag you down and make you wonder why you came to school. Sometimes you ask yourself why you just didn't fail your Senior year so you could stick around the "easy" stuff. Well, there is good news for you. NSU can give you the opportunity to party and mingle as much as you want by joining a Greek fraternity or sorority.

There are five fraternities and four sororities at NSU that will give you the chance to meet as many people as you want and be as active as you want. The Greek chapters focus on individual educational achievement, spiritual and social development as well as a lot of fun and friendships that will last a lifetime.

Every fall at NSU the Greeks play a special rush week so that incoming freshmen can learn about each organization and decide which group they would like to join. The fraternities at NSU are Kappa Sigma, Kappa Alpha, Theta Chi, Sigma Tau Gamma and Tau Kappa Epsilon. The sororities include Delta Zeta, Phi Mu, Sigma Kappa and Sigma Sigma Sigma.

August 22-28 is considered Rush Week and various parties are planned at the Greek Houses for all Rushees. During the first night of Rush the fraternities have open house and all male freshmen are invited. During the week the fraternities have theme parties such as: Jungle Party, Casino Party, Toga Party and Red Beans and

Greeks Enjoy Theme Party

Rice Party.

Likewise the sororities have open house the first night of rush. During the rest of the week the girls are invited back to visit the various sorority houses and attend theme parties.

Both groups are governed by special boards which help set regulations and rules for Rush as well as year round activities. Fraternities are represented on the Interfraternity council and sororities are represented on Panhellenic.

Fraternities and sororities at NSU are very active in civic activities and raise money every year for various charity groups. They sponsor many worthwhile service projects and help with various hosting duties at NSU.

Greeks are just a part of NSU organization life and it is not an absolute necessity to join one to have a good time but they can be a valuable dimension to college life that will help you form lasting friendships and good times that can never be replaced.

Dance Camp

The winner of the Top of the World award is eligible to compete in the Miss Drill Team USA International Pageant to be held in Los Angeles, California.

Vicki Parrish, director of the camp, said, "The trend for high school dance lines today is to incorporate jazz dance techniques into precision movements. Whereas, ten years ago, dance lines were more concerned with precision movements of the arms." Ms. Parrish added, "Today they create movements which include leaps, jumps, and splits, as well as the traditional high kicks."

A senior from East St. John High School stated, "I like the styles of dances we learned. I also had a lot of fun."

Ms. Parrish, coordinator and choreographer of Cane River Belles, said, "As a continuation of Northwestern's services to high school students involved in the 'peparts', we will once again host the Miss Drill Team Louisiana Pageant to be held December 11, 1982 on the NSU campus. The winners of this will be able to attend the national competition held in Los Angeles, California in February 1983." She concluded, "Dancelines are not the only 'peparts' to compete. There will be categories for cheerleaders, twirlers, flag corps and rifles."

All sessions of the camp was held in the Dance department HPER building. The squads were housed in Rapides dormitory.

Treen Signs Bill for Gifted and Talented School

NATCHITOCHES--Gov. Dave Treen has signed the bill passed by the House and Senate during this year's legislative session officially establishing a school for gifted and talented 11th and 12th grade students on the Northwestern State University campus.

Legislative acts named the institution the Louisiana School of Math, Science and the Arts, specified Northwestern as the location for the school and provided operating funds and allocations for renovation of facilities to house the unique school.

The legislature appropriated a first-year operating budget of $439,800 for salaries, operating expenses, professional services and other "start-up" costs for the facility, which will open in the fall of 1983.

This year's capital outlay budget includes $2.4 million in priority one and another $5 million in the priority two category for planning and renovation of three buildings on the Northwestern campus that will be used for the residential school.

Classrooms, administrating offices and laboratories will be established in the former Natchitoches Central South Campus classroom building, a three-story, 69,000-square-foot structure that will accomodate a student body of 750. The old Natchitoches Central gymnasium will also be renovated for intramural and physical education programs.

Bossier and Prudhomme Hall dormitories at Northwestern will be renovated to house students at the school, which will have an enrollment of some 700 by the beginning of the 1986-87 academic year.

The legislature also established a 23-member board to govern the Louisiana School of Math, Science and the Arts, and 18 of the board positions have already been filled. Board members will be on the Northwestern campus Friday and Saturday to tour facilities, interview applicants for director of the school, develop budgets and establish fund-raising programs.

Under the board structure, the governor has eight appointments, the superintendent of education has two, and 13 are appointed on the basis of their positions as elected officials and education leaders.

The 18 members already appointed to the board are Jack Pellegrin, president of the Board of Elementary and Secondary Education; Kelly Nix, superintendent of education; Dr. William Arceneaux, commissioner of higher education; Dr. Pat Cooper, assistant superintendent for special education; Dr. John Dupree, assistant superintendent for academic programs; Sen. Don Kelly and Rep. Jimmy Long of Natchitoches; Sen. Cecil Picard of Maurice; Rep. Jesse Deen of Benton; Wendell Hall of St.

Francisville, president of the Louisiana School Superintendents' Association; Kay Coffee of New Orleans, president of the Louisiana Association for Gifted and Talented; Dr. Robert Alost, dean of the College of Education at Northwestern; Mimi Sumrall, a legal researcher from Covington; Barbara Miller, supervisor of gifted and talented for Jefferson Parish schools; Ruth Castille, director of gifted and talented programs for the State Department of Education; Mattie Braden, a New Orleans classroom teacher; internationally-renowned pianist Van Cliburn and Natchitoches businessman Ben D. Johnson.

Rep. Long, who has worked for establishment of the school for the past two years, said the board will "establish policies on certification and tenure for faculty and will develop a system for admission of students."

NSU Education Dean Alost, also active in the planning and development of the school, said admission will be based on population, with students selected from all 66 public school system in Louisiana. "If a school system has two percent of the state's population, then it is hoped that the system will provide two percent of the students for the new school," he said.

Admission will be based on SAT test scores, academic records, a battery of special examinations and interviews to be conducted in Natchitoches. Testing will be conducted at regional centers.

Alost said it is anticipated that some 300 students will be interviewed in the process of selecting the first 200 students for the school. He said the school will "seek students from every section of Louisiana and from every strata of society."

The Northwestern dean also explained that the original proposed name of the school--The Louisiana School for Gifted and Talented Students--was changed in the legislature "to enhance the possibilities of receiving funding from private and public sources."

He added, "It was felt that the name Louisiana School of Math, Science and the Arts might make it easier for the school to obtain grants from industries, the arts and other sources."

Fees, tuition, room and board and other costs to students enrolled in the School of Math, Science and the Arts will be paid by the state. Alost said the cost of operating the school, including salaries, tuition for students and other expenses, will be some $5 million annually.

The school's staff will include a director and deputy director, coordinators for student life, performing arts, Curriculum, administration and external affairs and some 47 teachers. The faculty-student ratio will be 1 to 15.

Harvey, Mouton Named Captains

NATCHITOCHES--Harlan Harvey of Natchitoches has been selected as captain and Melinda Mouton of Lafayette co-captain for Northwestern State University's 1982-83 cheerleader squad.

Harvey will be serving for the second consecutive year as captain of NSU's cheerleader squad. In the fall, he will begin his third year as a Northwestern cheerleader.

A native of Jonesboro, Harvey is a junior public relations major. He is the son of Julia K. Beal of Natchitoches and Harlan Harvey Sr. of Prince George, Va. Harvey is a graduate of Jonesboro-Hodge High School, where he was a varsity cheerleader for two years.

Lentini Advises Veterans On Insurance Plan

Veterans who now hold a National Service Life Insurance renewable term policy should seriously consider converting it to a permanent type of plan, advises Anthony R. Lentini, Director of the New Orleans Veterans Administration Regional Office.

Major reasons for converting a term policy to permanent, he said, are that each time it is renewed it costs more and, if the policy is discontinued, the veteran receives nothing.

With a permanent-type plan, there are certain guaranteed values which make the policy more valuable the longer it is held. For example, a $10,000, five-year renewable term policy taken out at age 40 would cost a veteran $2,928 over a period of 20 years. Conversely, a whole life or permanent-type policy (ordinary life) kept for the same period of time would: Cost the veteran $6,676 but provide him with a cash or loan value of $3,834, or provide a paid-up insurance policy for $5,751, or provide a paid-up insurance policy for $5,751, or provide for $10,000 in extended insurance coverage for 13 years plus 165 days in paid-up premiums.

A veteran should not wait too long if he or she expects to convert term insurance. That is because the premiums paid for a permanent-type plan depends on age. So the longer the veteran waits to convert term insurance, the more expensive it becomes to do so.

If you have a question concerning veterans benefits or need information or assistance, call the Veterans Administration Regional Office in New Orleans using the toll-free telephone line to get the answer.

Toll-free telephone service is now available in all 50 states providing direct access to Veterans Administration Regional Offices, Anthony R. Lentini, Director of the New Orleans Regional Office, said today in reminding veterans and their dependents of the service which is available from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Because the service is so popular, Lentini said veterans should have at hand as much VA-related information about themselves as possible when making a call.

Lentini pointed out that VA counselors can provide faster service when the veteran's claim number, military serial number or Social Security number is provided.

The following toll-free number is provided for use by veterans and their dependents in the State of Louisiana in need of assistance from the Veterans Administration Regional Office in New Orleans: 1-800-462-9510.

The telephone number can usually be found in the U.S. Government section of local telephone directories under "Veterans Administration--Benefits Information and Assistance," Lentini said. In cases where a U.S. Government listing is not contained, telephone operators can supply the number.

SAGA Loses Bid

SAGA food corporation, NSU's official food contractor, will be replaced by Professional Food Managers (PFM) effective September of 1982, according to Mike Bales, SAGA Food Service Director.

SAGA, which has had the contract at NSU since 1968, has lost the contract on two previous occasions, and both times have regained the contract for NSU the following spring, said Bales.

"We are concerned that there was so much difference in the bids," said Bales. He stated that PFM bid some $59,000 lower than SAGA. Bales estimated that the contract would go back to bid next summer.

Bales accounted for the large difference of money PFM underbid only speculatively. "It was either because they didn't have all the facts to bid on,

"Everytime we have lost the contract, we have come back to take it up again, and we hope to do it again," concluded Bales.

The University Student Publications Committee will meet Friday, July 23, 1982, 3:00 p.m., in the N-Club Room, NSU Coliseum, according to Jim Johnson, Chairman.

Applications for the position of Current Sauce Editor should be submitted directly to Jim Johnson in the News Bureau at the Coliseum by noon, Thursday, July 22, 1982.

Applications should be accompanied by letters of intent, stating the student's reasons for wanting to be editor, experience, and examples of work done in the past, is possible.

Governor Appears At Folk Festival

Governor Dave Treen made an appearance at the third annual Natchitoches Folk Festival, which promises to break last year's attendance records.

The festival attracted capacity crowds in Prather Coliseum this weekend. The authentic down home Louisiana cookin', the real old fashioned rock and roll, and various crafts to marvel over, all were exhibited in an attempt to preserve the culture of our Louisiana heritage.

The governor added a little light-hearted humor to the festivities by asking world-renowned fire-fighter "Red" Adair to "come down to Baton Rouge and put out some of those fires in the Legislature."

"Red" Adair to "come down to Baton Rouge and put out some of those fires in the Legislature". The governor was on hand to dedicate the new gifted and talented school, and didn't miss the chance to do a little politickin' and kiss lots and lots of babies.

Festival Assistant Director Jim Johnson did not have the exact figures, but said, "It was much larger than last year, I know that it was a super show".

Johnson said the attendance figures should be in by mid-week.

Of all the exhibits to see, Rick Bryan of Pineville with his carved duck decoys, and George Allen with his authentic deerhide tanning were among the best. But whether your fancy was taken by the weavers, or the stonegrinders who ground corn into meal, the age old arts of Louisiana were preserved, and what better place than in the oldest city in the Mississippi Valley.

Whatever your favorite sight or sound was, the appreciation definitely should go to those who gave their time and efforts to make the festival a success.

One couple said they drove six hours to get to the festival. When asked if they were selling any of their exquisitely carved ducks, they explained that if they sold the ducks, they would never have any to show at the many festivals they participate in. "They pay some of our expenses, but we really end up losing money when we do these. It's just that you hate to tell these people no when they ask you to come", said the woman.

From Arkansas Slim and his Louisiana Honkytonk music to the Acadian Playboys, the cultures of Louisiana were tied up in one air-conditioned Coliseum for all who had the price of admission, or in the case of students, just a little time to spend. Whether the cultures were preserved or not, the Natchitoches Folk Festival drew large crowds, and those crowds brought with them the dollars that permit a fourth and fifth Folk Festival.

Review

After a one week layoff, this editor has got some more scoop for the readers. As you remember this summer Northwestern lost its track coach to its biggest rival, Louisiana Tech. The reasons are too numerous to even begin to mention.

Now that Coach Dyes has left NSU for Ruston, so has one of the Demons All-Americans. Northwestern's best shot putter John, Campbell has now decided that life at Tech will be much better for him. Campbell told the papers that his reasons for leaving Northwestern is to follow his coach.

In losing Campbell, the Demons have lost one of the best shotputters in the nation. The Demons, have more than likely also lost Campbell's little brother Andy, who is one of the best high school field men in the sport. One reason Campbell came to Northwestern was because of Coach Dyes, who has a reputation of being one of the best track coaches in the nation. Now it looks like Northwestern has not only lost a fine track coach, but also a good recruiter in Jerry Dyes and a great shot putter in John Campbell. (See related story in Sauce)

Campbell Heads to Tech

Northwestern State All-American shot putter John Campbell has been granted a release by NSU President Dr. Joseph Orze and will move to Louisiana Tech and join former Demon track and field coach Jerry Dyes.

Campbell requested a release from his scholarship commitment to Northwestern around his plans to transfer to Tech, where he will have two years of collegiate eligibility after sitting out the 1983 season.

Lady Demon All Stars

LA.--Northwestern State University will be well represented at the annual state all-star games to be held in Lafayette on Saturday, July 31.

Northwestern will have three future Lady Demons in the girls all-star game that starts at 1:30 on July 31 in Southwestern Louisiana's Blackham Coliseum. The boys all-star contest, which takes place at 3:00 p.m., in Cajun Stadium, will have four players who have signed to play for the Demon football team.

The four football players who have signed with Northwestern will all compete for the West team in the all-star contest. They include Robert Moore, a running back and defensive back from Captain Shreve High in Shreveport; Freddie Smith, a linebacker and fullback from Haughton; Odessa Turner, a tight end and defensive back from Wossman High in Monroe and Earnest Crittendon, a linebacker and end from Haynesville High.

Mavericks Sign Waggoner

NATCHITOCHES, LA.--Northwestern standout Wayne Waggoner was selected June 29 by the Dallas Mavericks in the 6th round of the National Basketball Association draft.

Waggoner, a 6-3, 170 pound guard, was the leading scorer for the Demons last season with a 17.6 average. He also led the team in free throw shooting percentage by hitting 86.5 percent from the line. For his efforts last season, he was ranked in the top five in the Trans America Conference in four statistical categories and was ranked 16th in the nation in free throw shooting.

Waggoner, a prep standout at Logansport High, was a two-season starter at Centenary College in Shreveport before joining the Northwestern team in 1980. In his two-season career with the Demons, he combined for 165 assists and 939 total points. His career field goal percentage was .54 percent and he shot 85.4 percent from the charity stripe. He had a career total of 142 rebounds while at Northwestern.

Waggoner was a starter in every game the Demons played the last two seasons. He was named to the first team all-conference team last year after earning second team honors as a junior. Waggoner led the team in scoring and free throw shooting the past two years.

A business major from Logansport, Waggoner said the move to Dallas will be a good one for him. "I just wanted a chance to play," he admitted. "It looks like a pretty good situation for me going to Dallas--I'd rather be going there than Los Angeles or Philadelphia or somewhere like that because it would be harder for me to beat out someone for a position."

Waggoner, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Waggoner of Logansport, has been staying with his sister in Shreveport and working out this summer while waiting for the draft. He is not sure when he will be called to report to the Mavericks.

First Baseman, Pitcher Sign With NSU

A power-hitting first baseman from Glen Oaks Junior College in Michigan and a pitcher from Harper Junior College in Illinois are the latest signees to ink with Northwestern State baseball Coach Herbie Smith.

Robbie Moreno is a first baseman who played at Glen Oaks Junior College in Centerville, Michigan.

Moreno last season was second in the nation in junior colleges with 12 home runs. Moreno carried a batting average of .390 this past season and collected 36 runs batted in.

In his second year at Glen Oaks Moreno also had seven doubles while being named to the all-conference team. Moreno claimed the team batting title for the second straight year and was the Glen Oaks MVP for two seasons. In his first season Moreno hit .402 with seven homers and 34 RBIs.

As a prep player at North Liberty High School, Moreno lettered three years in baseball and two years in basketball. Moreno was an all-conference choice in his senior season.

Moreno is 6-0, 250-pounds bats and throws right handed. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Moreno of North Liberty, IN.

The latest pitcher to sign with the Demons is John Kolwalski, a native of Des Plaines, Illinois who attended Harper Junior College in Palatine, IL for the past two years. The 6-0, 180-pound right hander attended Forest View High School in Des Plaines.

Kolwalski compiled an 18-6 record in his two years at Harper JC with an earned run average of 2.50. Kolwalski was named to the all-conference and all-district team in each of the past two years.

As a prep Kolwalski had a 10-8 record during his final season and was named to the Mid-Surabab League all-conference team. He also led the league in strikeouts with 85 strikeouts in 65 innings. Kolwalski also participated in wrestling while at Forest View High.

Kolwalski is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kolwalski of Des Plaines.

The number of Demon recruits now stands at six. Those to sign earlier were Warren Bean and Billy Stevenson of Bossier City, David Reynolds of Huntsville, TX and Doyle Potts of Cumby, TX.

TAAC To Lose Playoff Bid

The Trans America Athletic Midwestern Athletic Conference was among four leagues representative that would have to give up their automatic qualification for the 48-pre-tourney elimination round would team NCAA tournament under a new be the ECAC Metro South, the format unveiled in Mission, Kan., by Midwestern City Conference, the Ivy the Division I Basketball Committee League and the East Coast Conference.

The Southwestern Athletic Conference The winners will join 20 other Conference would also lose its conference champions or post-season automatic berth, and instead of an tournament champs as automatic automatic bid as both the TAAC and entrants in the tournament. The SWAC had for the past two years, the other half of the field will be made up champions of those two conferences of at-large entries.

Under the new plan, the TAAC want in this conference is the right to and SWAC champs would meet in a play in the NCAA Division I doubleheader at a neutral site that championship. This does not take would also include a game between that away. We still have that opportunity.

Pre-Season All-Americans Three Players Chosen

Northwestern State had three football players named to The Sporting News' pre-season Division I-AA All-American Football Checklist which appeared in the most recent edition of the national publication.

Those Demons named were wide receiver Victor Oatis, quarterback Bobby Hebert and linebacker Gary Reasons.

Reasons, a 6-4, 230-pound junior, was named to the I-AA Kodak first team All-American squad last year after leading the Demon defense in tackles. Reasons is a native of Crowley, Tex., and has been a starter for NSU since midway through his freshman season.

Oatis led Demon receivers a year ago with a school record 687 yards on 26 receptions, an average of 26.4 yards per catch. Oatis' longest catch was for a 94-yards touchdown against Angelo State, and the senior speedster had five touchdowns last year.

Hebert was an honorable mention All-American as a sophomore when he passed for over 1,800 yards and gain 2,099 yards in total offense. Last season Hebert was injured on the second play of the fifth game and missed the rest of the season with a knee injury.

The pre-season checklist listed eight wide receivers, five quarterbacks and nine linebackers among its 60 players. Three of the five quarterbacks named were from Louisiana as Northeast's John Holman and Stephan Starring of McNeese State joined Hebert on the list.

Other players from Louisiana schools listed on the team include offensive lineman Ronald Motton of Nicholls State, running back Buford Jordan and defensive back Leonard Smith of McNeese State and defensive lineman Robert Smith and wide receiver Trumaine Johnson of Grambling.

Frey, Thomas Receive Scholarship

Northwestern State University has received a $300 scholarship from the Copenhagen-Skoal College Rodeo Scholarship Program administered each year in conjunction with the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

The scholarship was awarded to NSU in the names of Brian Thomas of Natchitoches and Mark Frey of Morganza, Northwestern students who recently won the second go-round of team roping at the NIRA's College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont.

Walt Garrison, western marketing representative for Copenhagen-Skoal, said the scholarship is to be used exclusively for the education of a participant in the intercollegiate rodeo program at Northwestern.

More than $125,000 is awarded to college students each year through the Copenhagen-Skoal College Rodeo Scholarship Award Program.

Established in 1974 to help young people receive a higher education, the program has awarded almost half a million dollars to thousands of students who participate in intercollegiate rodeo.

The scholarships are given out on both regional and national levels. Over $93,000 is presented to regional winners, and more than $32,000 is awarded to winners at the College National Finals Rodeo.

SGA Plans Semester Events

The outlook is optimistic for Northwestern's Student Government Association this year. According to SGA President Joe Stamey, the SGA has been making big plans for upcoming events including Homecoming, State Fair Week and the Distinguished Lecture Series.

Although the State Fair activities are tentative as of now, various events have been slated for Homecoming Week, September 20-25.

These events include Fun Runs of one mile and of 5000 meters (3.1 miles) on Monday of Homecoming Week. Slated for Tuesday September 21 is the Miller Tug-Of-War which will be held behind Iberville Cafeteria. On Wednesday, there will be a "Meet the Team" and Homecoming "Laffer's Curve" was the party at the NSU Recreation Complex from 8-11 p.m. featuring the NSU Entertainers.

Thursday is designated as "Spirit Day" and all students are urged to wear Northwestern t-shirts. Plans are being made with area merchants to give discounts on Thursday to students wearing NSU tees who present their university identification. Friday will see Northwestern's annual Homecoming Parade. This year, the parade will begin on the river bank at 6:00 p.m. and will wind up in front of Prather Coliseum where a pep rally and street dance are planned.

Two guests are scheduled to appear this semester in the SGA's Distinguished Lecture Series. They include Pulitzer Prize-winning author Jonathan Kozel on October 13 and Dr. Arthur Laffer whose economic policy on November 16.

Stamey stated that there had been numerous applications from NSU students, especially freshmen, expressing interests in SGA committees. "These committees are each chaired by an SGA senator" and NSU students may join as many committees as they like and may do so at any time, Stamey said. Applications are available at the SGA office in the Student Union.

Student government officers have been elected at both Shreveport nursing campuses, according to Stamey. ADOS officers are: Bridget Evans, president; Richard Treadway, vice-president; Mary Hefington, secretary; and Carol Anderson, commissioner of elections. Officers at Warrington are: Sharon Chaney, president; John Russell, vice-president; Nancy Hensley, secretary; Pauline Soileau, treasurer; and Andrea Baumgardner, commissioner of elections.

Hix Appointed Dean College of Business

Dr. John L. Hix, marketing professor in Northwestern's Department of Business Administration and Economics since 1968, has been appointed interim dean of the NSU College of Business.

For the past 12 years, Hix has also served as director of research for the College of Business and as director of the Masters of Business Administration degree program which is offered through the Department of Accounting and the Department of Business Administration and Economics.

Northwestern President Dr. Joseph J. Orze announced Hix's appointment this week following approval by the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities. Hix succeeds Dr. David Townsend, who retired this summer as NSU's Dean of Business.

Hix became director of graduate studies in business administration in 1970. Since he assumed the position, the Masters of Business Administration degree program at NSU has experienced exceptional growth.

More than 80 graduate students are enrolled in Northwestern's MBA program, which the university offers at three different locations. The complete MBA sequence program offered by Northwestern is available at Fort Polk, Louisiana College in Pineville and at NSU in Natchitoches primarily as an evening schedule for business people.

Although his field of expertise is marketing, Hix also has extensive experience as a management consultant and researcher. For six years, he was one of the management consultants for the First-line Supervisors Seminar sponsored by Centenary College in Shreveport. He was also a major consultant for the 18-month supervisory techniques training program conducted for Riley-Beard, Inc., employees in Shreveport.

The NSU professor has presented supervisory seminars for the Veterans Administration Hospital in Pineville and for management personnel at Fort Polk.

Author of several publications on management, Hix is one of the investigators in a new research project to determine non-financial rewards in supervision and motivation.

Name of Check Forger to Be Disclosed

A federal judge has ordered the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to disclose to Northwestern the name of an individual holding Social Security number 437-25-0517.

That number was used in cashing an apparently forged check at the university in Natchitoches.

U.S. District Judge Frank Polozola earlier ordered the government agency to provide the information or show cause why it wouldn't.

The government responded that it would "if so ordered by this court." Polozola issued an order Monday.

He said that under the Privacy Act a government agency may disclose information for bona fide law enforcement purposes or if ordered by the court.

Polozola gave the government 15 days to tell a law enforcement officer or official of the state or Northwestern, upon proper identification, the name of the individual holding the Social Security number.

Homecoming Elections Wednesday

Dr. Joseph Orze Enters First Year As President of NSU

By Pat Skidmore
Co-Focus Editor

Dr. Joseph J. Orze, Northwestern's 15th president, officially took office on June 1, 1982. He had previously served as president of Worcester State College in Massachusetts since 1975.

A native of Exeter, PA, Orze holds bachelor and masters degrees from Syracuse University and a doctorate in higher education from George Peabody College. Some of his accomplishments include his having served as a professor dean, department chairman and treasurer at universities in New York, Tennessee, Connecticut and Massachusetts as well as having delivered major addresses at various programs across the nation and being the author of several articles for professional and scholarly journals. He also has an active part in community affairs and other organizations.

In an interview conducted for the SAUCE, Orze said that he likes NSU and the Natchitoches community very much and that he has really enjoyed talking with the students he has met; he then stated, "I also like the fact that students are so concerned about the institution."

Interestingly enough, Northwestern's professor/student ratio is the lowest in Louisiana. Orze commented, "Fortunately, the state provides us money to operate in the way we do."

Feeling that people would probably be surprised about the number of scholarships available to upperclassmen as well as freshmen (who may have earned several upon high school graduation), he emphasized the fact that "schools, in most instances, play a big part in giving out scholarships" and mentioned that some local organizations also award deserving students.

The NSU Foundation, located in Caldwell Hall (1st floor), is a good place to secure information pertinent to this, he said.

Judging from present enrollment figures, Orze anticipates that the number of full-time undergraduates will be much higher than in recent years. There has been a real population growth on off-campus sites in the last few years, says Orze, because our extensions are so convenient for people and this accounts for much of the large number of part-time students. The NSU-Shreveport campus, for example, had such a record enrollment that "we approved an evening division (of classes)...we can handle more people this way," states Orze. He further mentioned that adjunct professors were hired on all of the NSU campuses, too.

Orze said that a strong athletics program is an asset at any school because they are such a vital "part of the university situation" and certainly a "most visible aspect" but he stresses the academic aspect too believing that Northwestern is an outstanding academic institution.

One of Orze's long-term goals is "a major reorganization of the university's organizational structure, both academically and administratively," and said that it will take time, thus the change would be a gradual one. He has encouraged input from university personnel.

Orze also said, smiling, "I'm very pleased to be here, and I look forward to working with everyone and getting to know them in the process." He then added, "I would like to see the university attain the excellence it can have that would place it among the best in Louisiana, the south, and the nation."

Same Old Faces In La. Congress

By The Associated Press

(From wire reports)
Louisiana's congressional delegation will have a familiar look next term: the same six democrats and two republicans. And, as usual, there will be a Long--eighth district representative, Gillis Long--and a Boggs--Congresswoman Linda Boggs in the second district. The six incumbents on Saturday's open primary ballot easily won re-election, five of them by margins of 3 to 1 or better. The exception was Long, who survived a scare from a conservative two-term state senator, Ned Randolph, to gain his seventh term. Winning re-election and avoiding November run-offs were, in addition to Long and the 66-year old Mrs. Boggs, Republicans Henson Moore and Bob Livingston and Democrats John Breaux and Jerry Huckaby. Two democratic incumbents, Billy Tauzin and Buddy Roemer, drew no opponents and were re-elected without appearing on the ballot.

In the Alexandria mayor's race, incumbent Carroll Lanier faces another runoff against the man he ousted in 1973, John Snyder, after a virtual deadlock in Saturday night's primary race.

Snyder collected 4763 votes or 32.5 percent, to Lanier's 4660 votes or 31.8 percent, in unofficial returns, Snyder, a 59-year old promotions consultant, attempted to regain his office four years ago, when the 55-year old Lanier beat him again in a runoff. Three other candidates trailed the two front-runners.

Sixty-three-year old Champ Baker had 17 percent and 44-year old Charles Bollinger got 14 percent. Charles Ray Sweazie, the only black in the race, had four percent.

Hinckly: Leave The Insanity Plea Alone

By The Associated Press

The man who shot President Reagan says America should "leave the insanity defense alone." In a letter to "Newsweek" magazine, John W. Hinckly Jr., writes that abolishing the defense would be "a travesty of justice." Hinckly was found innocent last June of shooting Reagan by reason of insanity.

In his regular Saturday morning radio chat, Reagan said he was proposing changes in the laws that allow insanity to be used as a defense. But Hinckly writes that the laws shouldn't be changed, and that society should "show some compassion for its disturbed outcasts."

Tornado Destroys 12 Homes in Concordia

By The Associated Press

A tornado destroyed 12 homes and torrential rains forced the evacuation of several hundred residents Sunday, as the remnants of tropical storm Chris howled across northeast Louisiana.

Officials speculate that inland damage will exceed the damage along the coast, where the storm hit Saturday. No injuries were reported in either the tornado that demolished a series of homes between Clayton and Ferriday or the deluge that filled the streets of Delhi and Tallulah.

Concordia Parish Sheriff John Patrick says the tornado touched down along U.S. 84 shortly before 1:00 a.m. and paralleled the highway for about a mile, demolishing a dozen houses. He says in most cases, the wind just lifted the roof right off the house. In Delhi, water flowed several feet deep along downtown streets after more than nine inches of rain fell Saturday morning. Mayor Mike Thompson estimates losses in the millions of dollars, and says most businessmen in the upland city did not carry flood insurance. About 400 Delhi residents were evacuated.

Water was draining from the streets by mid-afternoon, and Thompson says most residents probably would be able to return home before evening.

By afternoon, the severe thunderstorms accompanying the dying storm had moved into northwest Mississippi, where officials posted flood warnings.

Zappa Heirs Follow Daddy

By The Associated Press

Moon Zappa isn't one of the pretty boys. She's a 14-year-old girl--with her first hit. It's called "Valley Girl"--and, admittedly, it has a lot to do with Moon's father, Frank Zappa.

Frank created some background music--and then got Moon to record a monologue in what you might call "Teenspeak."

A few samples are in order: The next time you want to say that something is cool or hip, try "Tubular." Or if something's gross or disgusting, you might say it was "Grody." And be sure to throw in the word "Totally" whenever you're in need of some verbal filler.

Those marvelous elocutions are what help Moon Zappa describe such important teenage events as a trip to the shopping mall--a "Tubular" experience--or having to do the dishes--definitely "Grody."

Moon says that she herself is not a Valley Girl. "Valley" refers to the San Fernando Valley near Los Angeles--and the Zappas live in Laurel Canyon. Anyway, she says the whole thing was her Father's idea.

So, by the way, is her name. In full, it's Moon Unit Zappa. Explains Miss Zappa: "Unit is probably because I'm the first unit in the Zappa family, kidwise."

Namewise, it could have been worse. Before his daughter was born, Frank gave his pregnant wife a choice between "Moon Unit" and "Motorhead." She made the decision. But now Moon and her brother Dweezil may be getting some revenge. They're recording a song called "My Mother Is A Space Cadet."

Tomorrow is the big election day for the 1982 Homecoming Court. It sure seems redundant to say this, but everyone, PLEASE make an effort to vote. Tomorrow 16 girls names will appear on a ballot, and it is up to you to make sure which of these Northwestern ladies will represent us at our own Homecoming game.

And while we are on the subject of this particular election, it seems that there are a few rather unfortunate circumstances that do need to be pointed out about this selection (not election, the selection).

It seems rather unfortunate, but to some, this is not an election of honor, it is an election of necessity. Let me explain.

It seems that a small number of girls, every time an election of this sort rolls around, feel as though they must campaign, albeit secretly of course, but campaign nevertheless for a position on one of the courts. Before I go any farther, let me say that this is a small number, and should not be indicative of the whole court. But, this small percentage of girls feels compelled to "trade", "exchange", or manipulate enough votes so that they are put on the ballot. The "deals" that are made are sometimes unbelievably humiliating, at least from an outside viewpoint, but then again, in this case, what's a little foot kissing (to put it mildly) when something as big as college court is concerned.

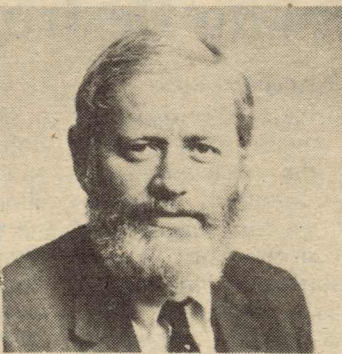

Let us interject one more thing. Let's don't put any of the blame on the SGA or their system. Their system of open nominations and then a secret election is as sound as can be. No argument there. The problem lies with the two or three girls who each year slither around, trying to find that elusive "fifth" nomination that puts their names on the ballot.

When you go to the polls Wednesday, do yourself and the vast majority of the nominees a favor. Vote for the girls who best represent NSU and not those that put on the best campaign. To be nominated and then elected to the Homecoming Court should be an honor, not a reward for a good two weeks of hard politicking. And another thing, when you step into that booth, remember the girls who have been friendly and warm ever since you have known them and who have not put on any special charms in the last week and a half to try to win your vote.

In closing, I'd like to direct this comment to the vast majority of girls who were put on the ballot and who didn't solicit the nominations. It is indeed an honor for you to have been nominated for the Homecoming Court. You know that you haven't made any deals for any votes, and so do most everyone else. And I hope, just like everyone else, that it is you girls who really consider it an honor, not a social necessity, will win the election and be counted as members of Northwestern State University's 1982 Homecoming Court.

But Maybe He Should Have

Reagan Hasn't Sold Out

John Hess

John Hess is a syndicated columnist of the United Feature Syndicate

"President Reagan is seeking to raise taxes in order to cut spending further."—White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III.

I know it's sinful of me but I'm getting a charge out of politics such as I haven't enjoyed in decades.

Ronald Reagan whooping it up for the biggest tax hike—a.k.a. revenue increase—in history and promising to whup those Republican jackasses in Washington.

Lyn Nofziger, Reagan's Chuck Colson, petitioning him not to do it, then switching sides and threatening those renegades with "hardball" punishment at the polls...

Anne Gorsuch taking space in The New York Times to tell how she's turned into a defender of the environment...

And the radicals of the Right accusing them all of selling out to the Eastern liberal establishment...

I love it.

Reagan has, of course, not sold out at all. He just had the hard luck of winning an election and carrying out his radical program.

In his first year, he pushed through tax cuts of $750 billion and increases in military spending of $1.5 trillion for the remainder of his term. He and his fellow supply-siders said the tax cuts would set off a boom that would balance the budget.

After the euphoria of those early months, sophisticated conservatives began tiptoeing toward the exit. First out were Northern boll weevils like Sen. Moynihan and Mayor Kick of New York. Then a trickle of publicists of the New right like Kevin Phillips and Rudolph Penner of the American Enterprise pegged Reaganomics as a bust. Lately, it's become a rout.

George Will admitted that, if not the rats, at least the hamsters were deserting the ship. Whatever they are, they are not lemmings. Survival, not suicide, is their game.

Recent issues of The Conservative Digest and the neo-conservative Policy Review suggest to me that the radicals want to put distance between them and Reagan so as not to be caught in the whirlpool as the ship goes down.

This may be intelligent, but it's hardly fair. Reagan has been a true heir to the Goldwater wing of the party. Barring a few compromises such as any politician must make in a still democratic state, such as fulfilling his promise to lift the grain embargo, he has carried out the plan, in spades.

He has been as hard-nosed as anybody but a total madman could wish toward the Russians, the Third World and our allies; he has deleted human rights as a factor in foreign policy and stalled progress toward arms control. The trouble is, the world has not responded as it was supposed to.

He has lathered the rich, Watted the environment and made war on the welfare state.

Trouble is, the economy hasn't responded as it was supposed to, and the country is resisting further assaults on the old, the sick and the poor.

In truth, the thunder from the right has been more of a screech. To call Republicans liberals because they once supported George Bush is to abuse the vocabulary.

It may indeed be silly to raise taxes during a recession, but that is a Keynesian argument, not a supply-side one.

(It's not my argument, either. The only solution to the deficit lies in halting a runaway military budget. Besides, the new bill complicates the tax code further, instead of simplifying it. But that's another story.)

Never mind. The radicals want to break with Reagan, and this is as good a handle as any.

Me, I'm like the legendary mountain woman watching her husband chasing a bear, or vice versa, around a tree: Got it, husband; go it, bear. It's a lovely fight.

President Orze Comments

In the past week or so several people have commented to me that Fall was in the air. Although I could feel no change in the air or the weather in general, I have felt the excitement of Fall since the last week in August when the semester started. The students and all the activity that is associated with them is what put the feeling of Fall in the air for me.

The University is once again a teeming vibrant ecological system. The campus environment awakened to life and action by the return of the students. Students are the raison d'être of the University, its reason for being. Without students there is no university; only a campus exists, a collection of buildings on an expanse of land peopled by faculty, administrators and staff without a reason for being there without students to teach, to counsel, to mentor, to work with, to serve.

Northwestern State University prides itself on being a friendly and caring institution. It needs to continually strive to make what is a motto into an ever stronger reality. Friendliness is a pervasive quality, and when you give a smile you always get at least one back.

I am pleased to be a part of Northwestern State University and to experience my first Fall on campus. Let us work together to make this the start of a new and vital future for the University. I look forward to that opportunity.

Best wishes for a great year. Enjoy yourselves!

Guest Editorial

By Julio A. Aguirre
Mr. Aguirre is a graduating senior majoring in Political Science

Summer in New York
On May 16, I left NSU for the "exciting" life in New York city, of course, it was to be "exciting" along with some studies done there. During the Spring Semester 82, I was "tired" of the "quietness" that surrounds this beautiful city of Natchitoches. What was then left for this NSU student? Nothing else but to go to New York city and enroll in one of the many university it offers.

I always have been attracted to the studies of Political Science with special emphasis in International Relations. Since the United Nations Headquarters is in New York City, I was on my way to enjoy the many sessions that are open to the public. Especially, the United Nations Security Council on the Falklands Islands War. As you may recall that was one of the main international conflicts at that time. Later, of course, came along the audacity of Menachen Begin and Ariel Sharon (Prime Minister and Minister of Defense of Israel respectively): The invasion in Lebanon. The invasion of Israel into Lebanon immediately made the Falklands Islands War a relic of the past.

At the United Nations one sees an ego contest that reveals the dichotomy of human nature: Representatives from different nations become personal friends, yet each longs for the defeat of the other.

The "Big Apple," as New Yorkers call their city, not only has the United Nations Headquarters, but the "Big Apple" offers from the greatest things to the not so great. I did not enjoy the latter, and there was plenty of it.

As soon as I had arrived, I attempted to enroll at Columbia University. "No problem" said the administrator at the Registrar's Office at Columbia University, since I had permission from the Dean of my school. But when I found out that in order to take six "units" (I'd have to pay $218.00 per unit), it was going to be $1,308.00. "Oh no," I said, "with that much, I can certainly study one regular semester at NSU. And that includes a nice soft bed in Rapides Hall and three robust (I said robust, not tasty) meals every day of the week at the Ibeville Dining Hall.

So, I tried Fordham University. Perhaps, I thought, it is less expensive. It was. Still, it wasn't within my budget. Per unit cost at Fordham University was $120.00. "Oh no," I said again, "with that much, I can study a Summer Session at NSU, including room and board."

I continued my adventure in the "jungles" of that beautiful city of New York. Meanwhile, I had received so many letters from Winnfield, from the person I care so much. One of those letters suggested that I should have gotten a job. But since it was supposed be a studying vacation, why spoil it?

Finally, I arrived at the City University of New York. This university charges $60.00 per unit. "Hey, that is only $360.00, I am here to stay madam." I said to the lady at the Registrar's Office. Well, I came to New York City and I have conquered it, I thought.

To find an apartment in New York City is an ordeal. I came close to a nervous breakdown, when they told me the prices for renting an "apartment" that one could possibly have found in the entire universe.

By now, all my thoughts were back at NSU. How lovely NSU is I began to realize. How I missed the friends I had left behind. Most of all, I missed so much, the person whom I love.

My final exams were on Monday, August 2, Tuesday, the very next day, at six o'clock in the morning, I was at La Guardia Airport. I was rushing back to Natchitoches to see this beautiful NSU and, to see the girl who means a lot to me.

Of all the places tht I have been, to me, the most special place has become Natchitoches. Since I love the old, I love Natchitoches. To live in Natchitoches is to live that in order to take six "units" (I'd have to pay $218.00 per unit), it was going

SGA Minutes

August 30, 1982
The Student Government Association was called to order by Stacy Soileau at 6:00 p.m. Troy Davidson said the prayer and Eileen Haynes led the pledge. Absent were: Scott Repp, Ernie Cole, David Deville, Don Stacy, Ed Wartelle, Kristi Heyd, Noel Nicolle, Peyton Cunningham and David Saylor.
OFFICER REPORTS
Joe Stamey announced the Parliamentary Procedure class will be held on Wed. at 2:00. At that time, there will be a different time announced for the class.
Joe said that he met with the Warrington-ADOS representatives in Shreveport where they told him their major concern was their continued problem with parking on campus.
Joe also asked for some recommendations for Homecoming and State Fair chairmen. He reminded the senators of the next SGA meeting, Monday, Sept. 6, at 6:00. He told the senate to start having their committee meetings.

Stacy Soileau thanked the senators for the good attendance at the Fall workshop. Absent from the workshop were: Ernie Cole, David Deville, Ed Wartelle, Dean Napoli, Kristi Heyd, Noel Nicolle, Peyton Cunningham and David Saylor.
Stacy also asked the senators for some suggestions for Parliamentarian.
Larry Hall told the senators that nobody is to charge anything to the SGA without Joe, Larry, or Allison's permission. He also announced that SGA ended up the summer in good financial standing. Larry also announced that the SGA budget committee will begin reviewing the budgets of the other student fee receiving organizations.
Harlan Harvey announced that Sept. 15, 1982 will be the date for the Homecoming Elections. Notices of intention for senator are now available in the SGA office. He also said that Sept. 29 will be the Senator elections, with the runoff elections Oct. 6.

Dear Current Sauce

NSU worries about financial trouble when it's sitting on a gold mine. I know of a roch farm that buys roaches at a reasonable price. "Profit", for lab study. How many times have you come in from going out and turned the light on in your dorm room and wondered if the bed was still there. I had the pleasure of staying in Natchitoches dorm this summer. Now I know why I live in Rapides. It

Dear Editor,

I always enjoy driving through the NSU campus whenever I am in Natchitoches. The campus is pretty and, for the most part, the architectural style and landscaping go well with each other and with North Louisiana in general. One glaring inconsistency has bothered me year after year, however, and that is the Library and its front lawn. The boxy concrete building is relieved only by a square awkward fountain that never has water and ugly concrete benches that no one ever sits on. Wouldn't the area facing College Ave. be much nicer if it were planted with pines, dogwoods, and crepe myrtles? This would make a worthwhile project for someone with instant and obvious results.

The Sisters of Sigma Kappa would like to express our appreciation to the people of the City of Natchitoches, the NSU Cheerleaders, the Student Government Association, and the Students of Northwestern for hosting such an exciting pep rally on Front Street before the NSU-Mississippi College football game Saturday, September 4, 1982. We would like to encourage all NSU students to go out and support the Demons. We would also like to say "good luck" to Coach A.L. Williams and the Demons for a successful football season. Sigma Kappa says "Fork 'em Demons!"

Sincerely, The Sisters

might be a rat hole, but I don't have to bolt or tie down all of my belongings so roaches don't walk away with it. "C.S." the office with the initials of many names is back on campus with full force. You'd think it was Christmas the way they were handing out the little orange greeting cards. It's a pleasure getting tickets for parking in student parking lots. This might help you offer whoever, turn your map right side up, its easier to read where the student and staff zones are. Do you want me to continue? On a roll. Boy and we thought Saga was bad. I come to realize that SAGA was like eating at the Hilton compared to PFM (serving America's Finest Students) which won't be for long. Don't they say good nutrition leads to keener thoughts.

Have you started to notice the Dha's around campus. If we're not careful it can break out into epidemic proportion. Does PFM have a contract with businesses in town, around lunch and supper. That's on their parking lot, you see alot of NSU stickers. The town doesn't mind. Come on Linda and everyone in charge (name unknown) we pay the same as last semester, let's see some of the same quality that SAGA got us accustomed to. It wasn't like home, but no whereas near a now, Kal-Can even looks good. If not my food will end up on the floor where it belongs.

Hi, Housing it's mission impossible thanks for the Baby Blue Room.

Demons Ease By Choctaws

The Demons opened up their 1982 football season with a 24-20 comeback win over the Mississippi College Choctaws. In the win Northwestern did not look that impressive.

Possibly the only bright spots for the Demons, if there were any, was shown by tailback Leroy Ellis, the receiving unit and the Demon defensive secondary.

Northwestern rolled up 342 total yards while Mississippi College had a total of 289 yards. The Demon passing attack was again in tune, with quarterback Stan Powell throwing for 259 yards on 38 attempts with 20 completions and no interceptions. Powell also threw touchdown passes of one yard and the game winner of 13 yards to Victor Oatis with only 59 seconds left in the contest.

Dale Quickel was for 3 for 3 in extra point conversions and 1 for 3 on field goal attempts. Mississippi College placekicker Jim Turcotte was 2 for 4 on field goal attempts.

Johnson Named Track Coach

Leon Johnson, has been named Northwestern State's new track coach for the upcoming track season.

Johnson has been track and field coach at DeRidder High School since 1974. He guided the DeRidder track team to the state 3-A title this season and was named state Coach of the Year. While at DeRidder, Johnson twice coached cross country teams to second place finishes in the state meet.

From 1965 through 1974, Johnson coached at Opelousas High School. During that time, Opelousas finished as champion or runner-up in the Quad-A state championship from 1970 to 1974, and in 1971 and 1972 won the state titles.

'We feel very fortunate to get a person that is familiar with our system,' said Northwestern State Athletic Director A. L. Williams. 'Leon is an enthusiastic person totally dedicated to athletics, we know he will do a very fine job for us.'

At Northwestern Johnson will take over a track program that has placed in the top 20 in the nation at the Division I national championships each of the past two years, including an 11th place finish in 1981 when the Demons claimed the national title in the 400-meter relay.

The Choctaws were lead offensively by running back Darrell Posey, who scored the only two Choctaw touchdowns. Posey also lead the Choctaws in rushing with 82 yards and receiving with 51 yards on 4 catches.

Northwestern's defense looked good in spots, but lacked the consistency that the Demons need for a good season. David Grappe lead all tacklers with 10, while Red Richardsn had six tackles and one interception. The Choctaws did a good job holding NSU's number one receiver Victor Oatis to only 3 catches for 53 yards and one touchdown. Victor's touchdown catch was the winning touchdown for the

Thinclads Meet SLU

The Northwestern cross country team, under new head Coach Leon Johnson, will open its 1982 season Friday afternoon at Southeastern Louisiana.

The Demons have eight meets on the 1982 slate, including the Trans America conference championship, which will be hosted by Northwestern. The NSU squad will also host a high school meet to be run in Natchitoches on September 25.

After the opening meet at Southeastern the Demons will take part in the McNeese Invitational and the Louisiana Tech Invitational before hosting their first meet on Saturday, Oct. 2 when Centenary and Stephen F. Austin both visit.

The Demons have finished second in the conference championships in each of the past two years and the champion in each of those years; Northeast Louisiana, is no longer a member of the league.

Also for the first the Demons will run their home meets at the NSU recreation complex and will run a distance of 10,000 kilometers in all events except one.

'The recreation course gives us a nice place to run and will be good for meets,' noted Johnson. 'It is pretty much wide open where spectators can view almost the entire race.'

As far as the schedule for this Fall, Johnson admits it is an ambitious one. 'We do have a strong schedule,' admitted Johnson. 'Three or four of the meets will have outstanding competition. But Demons.

The touchdown was set up by a clutch fourth down catch by wide receiver Jerry Wheeler, who had 3 catches for 59 yards. Another clutch catch was made by underrated wide receiver Perry Jo Ramsey from Winnfield. Ramsey's catch came on a third down play to keep the Demon drive alive.

Northwestern's Head Coach A. L. Williams was pleased to have the win under his belt, but he was not pleased with the overall play of the Demons. Northwestern must get better defensively and offensively moving the ball or this could be a long season for the out going Head Coach and all Demons fans.

we are in those meets for the experience and the competition. We are aiming at the conference title and will work to reach our peak for the conference meet.'

There are two returning runners on the team from last Fall and the eight-man squad is composed of four freshmen, three sophomores and one junior. The returning runners are sophomore Andy Nelson and junior Brian Barrios.

Demons Face SFA

Northwestern's Demons will be on the road again this week after a disappointing 29-16 loss to San Angelo State. Northwestern travels to play the Stephen F. Austin Lumberjacks.

The Demons and Lumberjacks will be playing for Chief Caddo. Stephen F. Austin should be hungry for a victory over the Demons, because they have not beat the Demons since 1975, that is a six year dry spell for the Lumberjacks. The Axemen are coming off a loss to Lamar, which could have easily been won, with a couple of good breaks. Northwestern is coming off a disappointing 27-16 loss to San Angelo State.

In the Demons loss the defense looked good, but the offense is still sputtering. If the Demons are to win this week, they must have a good performance from all involved. For those students, that are not doing anything this weekend, why don't we all go over to Stephen F. Austin and support the Demons.

P.P. Staff Undergoes Massive Redisorganization

In one of the major news stories that took place over the summer while most of you were gone, the Current Sauce Porker Picker staff went through an almost total reorganization.

Three regulars are gone off of last year's panel, and only one starter returns from a panel that hit a new high in all-time lows last year. For the first time in recent memory of the P.P. staff, a graduating senior of the P.P. staff actually graduated with a grade point average.

David Stamey, the Highman Trophy winner of two years ago was kicked out into the real world following a third place finish last year. After almost an eternity laboring under the books at this institution, Stamey finally got out when it was discovered that he had actually earned all of his hours over three years ago. Unfortunately, faulty advising by then Sports Editor Bob Sjoberg, who had advised him that he still had 48 semester hours left, had detained the former P.P. star.

As for Sjoberg, he mysteriously disappeared from town on a lonely, misty, and very cold night last February. He hasn't been heard from since, but frankly, no one cares.

Dr. Ray Baumgardner, who became the first faculty selector in P.P. history to win the Highman Trophy (annually awarded for the overall best record in the regular season plus the bowl games) was given his unconditional release by Sjoberg, just a week before he disappeared. Rumor has it that Bob is now a pickled specimen in the Biology department.

The only returning member of the forum this year is Joe Cunningham. Why that is, is anybody's guess, but inside source's reveal that Cunningham is the only one with a master schedule of football games of various powers like Salisbury and Frostburg St.

Joining Cunningham on the staff this year will be former Barnum and Bailey midget and most recently, the man who starred as E.T., Roger "Dodger" Reynolds. Reynolds' assumed the position of Sport's Editor this year almost by default when Sjoberg failed to show up this August.

Taking over the second spot this year will be John Cunningham, (no relation to Roger Reynolds) who was a high school All-America for the Natchitoches-Central Chieftain newspaper football predictions staff.

The fourth member of this year's staff, is Alison Breazeale. Alison is the only two time guest selector and she has compiled a remarkable 14-6 record. After her 8-2 week last year, the 21 year old blonde co-ed from Natchitoches demanded a regular spot on the P.P. staff. After a brief contract hassle, Alison was placed on the staff at a record salary level of $3.95 per week, making her the highest paid P.P. member in the history of organized predictions.

Late last night, it was announced that the three male members of the staff would stage a walkout at the end of the third week of the season if their contractual demands weren't met. Fred Garvey (no relation to Ron Cey), acting as the legal council to the displeased triumvirate, stated that the prognosticators demanded at least 55 percent of the total gross of the P.P. staff's revenues.

It was at this point that Perry Mason (no relation to Marcia Mason), stepped in and announced that the P.P. Panel was actually losing money, and this year, its members would probably have to pay that loss out of their own pockets.

The three gentlemen members of the P.P. staff have temporarily called off their threatened walkout and have planned a car wash instead at the Discount Package Liquor and Spirits store on the strip. All proceeds will go directly to the P.P. Pension fund.

In other P.P. news, this week, the first three guests of the new season have shown their many talents to the P.P.

Strike May Be Averted

(Minneapolis)--NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle says he thinks there is a good chance a strike by the players can be averted.

Rozelle believes owners have made some "solid movement" in their latest offer to the Player's Association. As Rozelle put it, "it demonstrates the sharing principal. It told the players they are entitled to more money."

The commissioner, however, says he supports the owners' refusal to meet the Players Association demand for 55 percent of the team's gross revenue. And Rozelle says he'd like to see both sides cooperate to reach a fair settlement.

Obstacles Nearly Overcome In Bike Path Plan

Northwestern's Recreation Complex on the Highway 1 Bypass may soon become more accessible to NSU students without automobiles who do not wish to walk or bicycle to the complex on the streets.

During the past few months, the idea of a pathway had been discussed by numerous students leaders but problems arose concerning the path's location which would pass through the NSU Agriculture Department's dairy pasture. The Agriculture Department had argued that students trekking through the pasture to the complex had already been seen bothering the livestock and allowing a bicycle path through the pasture would only endanger the students.

SGA Senator-at-Large Perry Anderson organized a committee consisting of Dr. Jack Pace of NSU's Agriculture Department, Dean of Students Fred Bosarge, L. Gene Knecht - NSU Coordinator of Plant Maintenance Janice Duggan-Chariman of the SUGB's Research and Development Committee. The committee met several times and discussed the pathway.

The Agriculture Department's ultimate proposal accepted by the committee called for a fence separating the 1/2 mile pathway from the pasture, gates linking these pastures for maintenance purposes, and cattle-gaps at either end of the pathway.

A motion by Anderson was passed during the September 13 meeting of the SGA. The motion stated that for increased student enjoyment of the Recreation Complex and for student safety, Northwestern should allocate $3,000 towards the path's construction. The proposal also received favorable reviews by the Student Union Governing Board.

According to Anderson, the $3,000 pricetag includes the cost of materials needed for the project - "posts, wire, gates, etc." - Labor costs are not included.

The proposal will go to President Orze for approval.

And watch out for Sharks! Scattered debris, a few puddles and this sign are all that's on the pool floor of Nesom Natatorium which is currently being renovated. Photo by Allen M. Ford

Local Bank Establishes NSU Scholarship Fund

The Northwestern State University Foundation has received a $10,000 contribution from the Peoples Bank and Trust Company of Natchitoches to establish a scholarship fund that will benefit academically-talented high school students from Natchitoches Parish.

Bill Cross, director of development and alumni affairs at Northwestern, said the interest the NSU Foundation will earn from investing the bank's contributions will be used to provide a $1,000 scholarship for a Natchitoches Parish student to enroll at the university as a freshman.

Cross said the Peoples Bank and Trust Company Scholarships will be given primarily to Natchitoches Parish students pursuing degrees in the College of Business.

It may also be awarded to students in other areas of academic interest.

He said scholarship applications must be submitted by March 15 each year. A faculty committee from the College of Business at NSU will select the recipient, and a representative of People's Bank and Trust Company will present the scholarship to the student during the high school's spring commencement or academic awards programs.

"Substantial outside support like the contribution we have received from the Peoples Bank and Trust Company of Natchitoches helps Northwestern maintain a margin of excellence in its academic programs," said Cross.

He added, "This new scholarship fund will help attract quality high school resources to maintain its position of scholastic excellence."

Herzog DeBlieux, chairman of the board of directors for the Peoples Bank and Trust Company, said the contribution represents an extension of services the bank provides Northwestern and the people of Natchitoches Parish.

"We established this scholarship fund," said DeBlieux, "for the purpose of encouraging young Natchitoches Parish students to go to Northwestern and to work toward obtaining university degrees."

Bossier Students NFL Strike May Cause Withdrawal Symptoms

Sent Home

The principal of Greenacres Junior High School in Bossier Louisiana, ordered nearly 100 students to go home because they showed up at school wearing bizarre facial makeup, multicolored hair and punk rock clothes.

Principal Oscar Killen sent the kids home because he did not realize their weird getups were for a football Pep Rally.

Killen says it was "A mixup in communications" --- A teacher okayed the strange dress but didn't tell the principal... who sent the students home because they were dressed in a manner-- "Not conducive to an educational environment."

Orze to Be ### Inaugurated

on November 5

The inauguration of Dr. Joseph Orze as NSU's fifteenth president will highlight the 1982-83 academic year. The inauguration has been scheduled for 10 a.m., Friday, November 5, 1982.

In commenting on the event Ms. Maxine Southerland, chairman of the Investiture Committee, said, "We have tried to involve all of the NSU people, and, of course, people from the community. The success of this important event depends on the participation of people from the town and the university."

Guest speakers at the inauguration will include Dr. Willim Junkins, Dr. William Arceneaux, Mr. Raymond Arthur, Dr. Maxine Southerland, Mr. Joseph Stamey, Dr. Allen Ostar, and Mr. Wiley Sharp.

A large number of special events have been scheduled around the inauguration. A reception for NSU faculty will be held on Thursday evening from 6:00 to 9:00 p.m. in the Varnado Drawing Room. Preceding the inauguration on Friday morning at 8 a.m. there will be a special mass for Dr. Orze and his family in the Immaculate Conception Church.

Family Day has been scheduled for Saturday, November 6, and Dr. Orze's Investiture will end with a football game on Saturday evening. A special art exhibit will run throughout the weekend.

Although all of the events have been planned, some specific locations will be identified later.

A psychologist says the more zealous pro football fans being forced to go "Cold Turkey" from their pigskin habit due to the strike by players in the national football league may show distinct withdrawal symptoms.

Douglas Bernsein, associate head of the Department of Psychology at the University of Illinois, says pro football addicts may suffer mild stress... and their spouses might find them difficult to live with.

Bernstein says some fans may become slightly disoriented or irritated during last year's baseball strike... and he predicts counterparts.

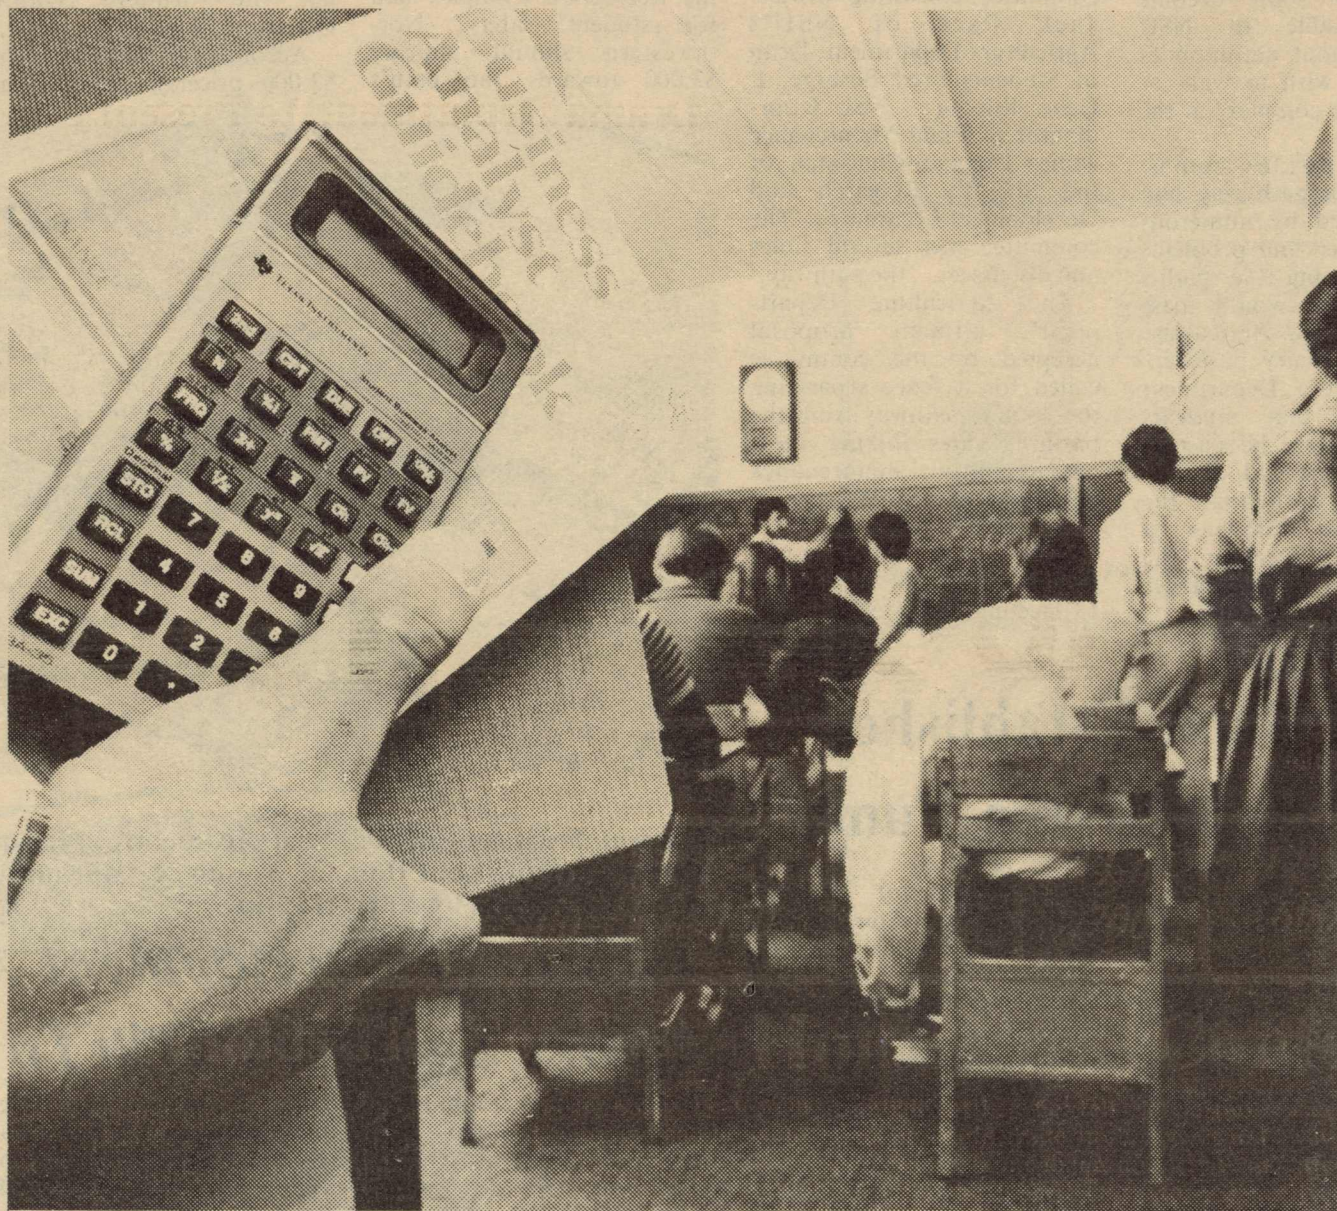

The problem, he said, is the more that people are used to doing something in a regular way and the more they look forward to doing it, the more disturbing it may be to have that something taken away.

But Bernstein says he's confident most pro football fans have the capacity to adapt. He observed that

Whose Brains?

Police in Champaign, Illinois, say they don't know who is the lawful owner of 22 human brains found at a University of Illinois fraternity house.

Police detective Gary Wright says the brains, embalmed in formaldehyde, were probably stolen from a cadaver room. He described "obviously we can't return these to their original owners but we are looking for the rightful owners."

Ms. Bebe -- More Than A Secretary

Ms. Adkins has been through two presidential transitions at NSU. Prior to becoming Dr. Orze's secretary, she worked under the administration of former president Rene Bienvenu from 1978 to 1982. "I worked with Dr. Bienvenu when he was Dean of the College of Science and Technology from 1969 until 1978. Then I moved to the President's Office."

She calls these transition periods "very busy times. In a way, it's exciting. Change is always welcome - sometimes we need it. And with a twinkle in her eye, she admits that she "hopes there isn't another transition anytime soon."

"I'm a switchboard operator, a typist, and an information outlet. Then, of course, I'm also a secretary", says Bebe Adkins, secretary to Northwestern's president, Dr. Joseph Orze.

Acting as a sort of "buffer for the president", she "soothes angry nerves, steers phone calls, people, and pieces of paper that really should go somewhere else" to the proper places. "You have to know the structure so you can get it to the right places."

"I get bawled out a lot," she adds. "It used to bother me, but now I find it amusing." Consistency and equal treatment to all, she claims, are her keys to a smoothly running office.

And what does she consider the most enjoyable part of her occupation? "Oh, to watch good things happening - seeing the changes that bring them about."

Drama Department to Present Play

"El Grande de Coca Cola" is a zany musical centering on a Honduran family who puts on shows to raise money. NSU actors will help evolve their own unique script based on their various talents and abilities.

Paul Rath To Be Featured In Annual Outdoor Pops Concert

Natchitoches--The Natchitoches-Northwestern Symphony Orchestra's 11th annual outdoor pops concert Tuesday, Oct. 5, on the NSU campus will feature Paul Rath of the university's vocal music faculty as piano soloist.

Rath, who toured three years with the internationally-acclaimed Norman Luboff Choir as baritone soloist before coming to NSU this fall, has played the piano for 20 years and has extensive experience as an accompanist.

He will be at the piano when the local orchestra, conducted by Dr. J. Robert Smith, performs selections from the Academy Award-winning movie, "Chariots of Fire." The film score by Vangelis also won an Academy Award this past year.

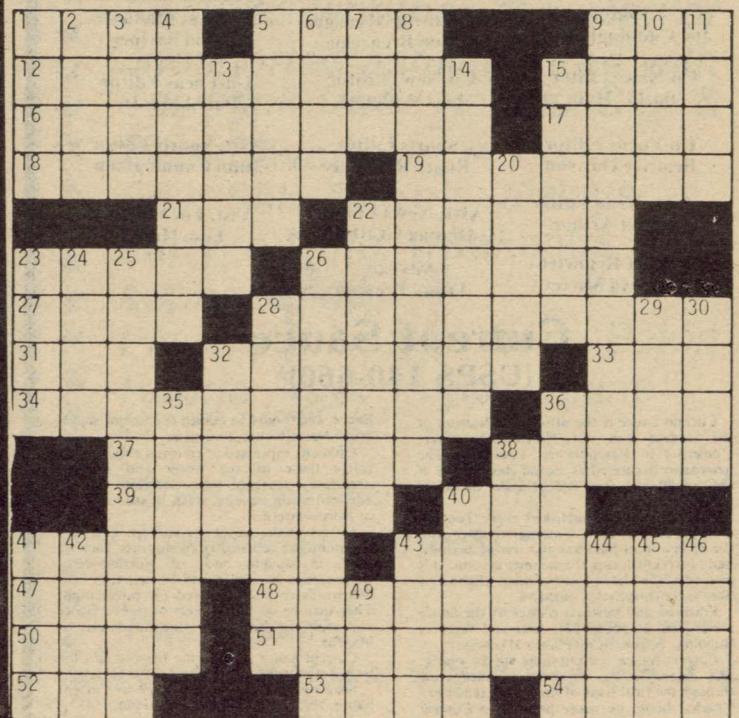

"Chariots of Fire" is one of several major pictures and famous Broadway shows whose musical themes will be performed during the free outdoor pops concert. It begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Esplanade Theatre, the outdoor performance area at Northwestern's new A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts.

Well-known tunes by Gershwin and music from such hit movies as "Star Wars" are also included in the program. The public is requested to bring lawn chairs or blankets, because seating is not provided at the university's outdoor theatre.

Featured productions for the spring semester are "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" written by Edward Albee and directed by Ray Schexnaider and "Music Man". "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" will run from March 14-19 and "Music Man" will be presented April 21-23.

Picking The Right One

Once again, we here at good ole NSU are blessed with election time. It seems that just about every time you look around, there's another election.

This time it's for class Senators for the SGA. Now there's nothing new about voting for class senators. It's been done for a long time. But whoever first thought it up must have been ahead of his time.

Through the years here at Northwestern, our Senate has undertaken that same responsibility, albeit, sometimes not successfully, but generally very well.

I personally think that in the last three years, (that's as long as I've been at NSU) that the SGA has made great strides forward. Now, it's time for a fresh infuse of new meat to get in and try to make NSU the place for you.

I constantly wonder though, if our candidates are running for the SGA because of a genuine concern for their fellow man, and NSU, or for their resumes. Sometimes it's hard to tell, sometimes it's easy to tell. Sometimes of course, it's both.

Now, for the cynics and paranoids, I don't have anyone specifically in mind when I say that, it's just that sometimes you wonder.

When you vote tomorrow, and please do vote, take into consideration who you think will work for you. Take into consideration the person's experience, especially if he or she has worked in the Senate before. You have your favorites and I have mine, I wish that I could tell you who to vote for, but it would be a little unethical in a small college newspaper.

But please, look for the people with experience, the people that you know are going to go out and bust their hineys for your sake and mine. We desperately need some more people like that in the SGA. We already have some real good hard working Senators, we just need a few more.

The Mob Is Losing Its Class

John Hess is a syndicated columnist of the United Feature Syndicate

Dear Godfather:

Wherever you are, you ought to know that you are missed. La Cosa Nostra is in terrible shape.

I don't mean all these shootings; you were used to that. And I don't mean that the money is running low; between Atlantic City and Las Vegas and coke and the legit businesses, the cash flow has never been bigger.

What I mean is the loss of class.

All of us who have seen the movies think of your organization as an aristocracy of crime: grand estates, big limos, flashy women, fine clothes, kids in Ivy League colleges, a code of blood brotherhood - that sort of thing.

And what are we hearing now? FBI wiretaps of a lot of goons who can hardly talk straight, and are always ratting on one another or rubbing one another out over some sleazy swindle.

You would have been humiliated to hear the lawyer for a thug described as your heir to the New York-New Jersey organization. This was at the trial for murder and dope-dealing of five Bonannos, rivals to the Colombo family.

"This case is demeaning," the lawyer told the jury. "...It is even demeaning to the Colombo family to her that Bootsie, Benny, Nicky, Boots and Fish are the Bonanno family. Five little fishies."

"If Marlon Brando had known that these five people were supposed to be the Bonanno family, he never would have accepted the title role. Take my word."

The jury did not buy that, but it's perfectly true. A sleazier bunch of hoods you never did see.

You may take some comfort to know that some of the members have indirectly been involved with the White House. That is, they contributed to the Reagan campaign fund that Ray Donovan was collecting from guys in the construction game.

He did so well that he was named Secretary of Labor, can you beat it? Still, the glamour went out of that when a lot of people said he'd hung out with members of your old organization.

They had to name a special prosecutor, Leon Silverman. I watched him give his "final report" - he hoped - in his fancy Wall Street offices, and you never saw a more disillusioned man.

He said he found some evidence of crime and "a disturbing number" of allegations, but "insufficient credible evidence" to indict Donovan. That was enough for Reagan to say, "You bet, that case is closed."

But the reluctant Silverman soon had to reopen the case, on new evidence. His mood could not have been improved when a second witness was bumped off.

The first one had been this dumb hood who had volunteered to take a lie detector test, and flunked when he said he didn't know Donovan. The second was a guy who was mentioned in the Silverman report as having collaborated with the FBI.

Silverman closed the investigation again, before there was any further bloodshed.

The funny thing is that the two murders may have had nothing to do with the Donovan investigation. But as you know, Don Corleone, if you lie down with dogs, you get up with fleas.

This might be a good moral for the White House. Still, if they barred anybody from any industry that had a link to crime, who could they hire? According to U.S. News and World Report, nobody from the top corporations.

That's their problem. Yours is that these goings-on are giving organized crime a bad name. Next thing you know, people will begin to believe that those writers made it all up - that La Cosa Nostra is a bunch of rotten hoods with no class.

As that lawyer said, this is demeaning.

Respectfully yours,
John L. Hess

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

In reply to the article on "Why the Hypocrisy?" I'd like to say this:

I don't think the Federal Government is making an issue out of being black, they are merely trying to open up more jobs for the minorities.

What's so stupid about the title of Vicki's job? Recruiting "other race" students is an important position and what a better way to get minorities here than to have another minority speaking about NSU's good points.

I wasn't aware that Vicki's job allowed her to hire people. If it does, I think that Vicki is intelligent enough to hire the most qualified person for the job whatever their color.

Unemployment is high for everyone not just minorities. If the government is making more jobs available to minorities I think that's great.

I don't think the government is insulting Vicki's intelligence because she got this job. In order to get a position such as recruiting minorities to NSU one would have to be intelligent enough to find new creative ways to get the students here.

If people, no matter what race, take pride in what they do and enjoy their work the title of their job is unimportant.

Jacqueline Calandro

(Editor's Note) Apparently you misunderstood the point of the editorial. The point is that the Federal Government has been trying to preach racial equality (which they should do) for such a long time, that it now seems like a step backwards when they tell Vicki that she can only recruit non-white students, and the white students will be recruited by white people. If all people are the same regardless of race, color, or religion, then let's start acting like it.

Vicki is a good recruiter. She deserves a job with High School Relations. The only point I was trying to make, is that the government on the one hand busses kids an extra 25 miles out of their way for racial equality and at the same time, they give a black person a job and tell them just to recruit black people and other minorities and leave the recruiting of white kids to the white people. That my dear, is the hypocrisy.

Opinion Poll

In an effort to better serve the needs of Northwestern students, the SUGB asks that you please participate in this opinion poll.

Would you be willing to pay a few dollars extra with your NSU ID to purchase tickets for a "bigger name" concert here on campus?

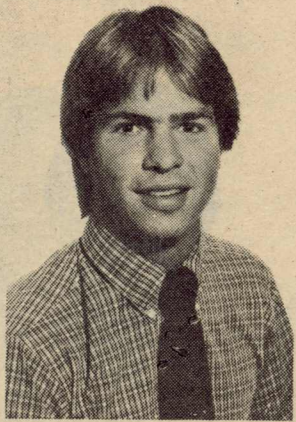

This is only an opinion poll--not a vote. However, future actions by the SUGB can be affected by your participation.

Please drop this by SUGB office, or in Iberville in a specially marked box or in a box in the Student Union.

SGA Class Senator Nominees

Michael Prudhomme

With the arrival of Dr. Orze as president of NSU, I see a new role for student government -- a much more active and responsible position of truly being a representative of the student population. I have entered this race with a desire to be a true representative having a voice in student affairs. Too long has our SGA been an idol status symbol and in the end accomplishing little. Look at the time spent talking in previous years about Chaplin Lake when I believe there were much more serious problems confronting us as a student body, such as how student funds and university monies have been used to support various programs. As the out-going president of my fraternity, I believe that I have both the time and experience to put forth an effective effort to reflect the opinions and needs of our campus. I would appreciate your vote of confidence for junior senator at election time. Michael Prudhomme

Judith Covington

I, Judith Covington, a freshman microbiology major, am running for freshman senator. I've lived in Natchitoches for sixteen years and have had the chance to see Northwestern grow. I have really enjoyed this and would like to take part in the future growth of Northwestern. I've previously served on a student council and other councils in different organizations and held offices in these. I really enjoy meeting new people and will make myself available to talk to anyone about the activities of the SGA. I would really appreciate your vote and, if elected, I will do my best for you. Judith Covington

Lynn Nicolle

Hello, I'm Lynn Nicolle. I would like to take just a small segment of your time to explain my qualifications and reasons for running for Freshman Senator.

I graduated from the Baton Rouge Magnet High School. I participated in the Presidential Classroom in Washington, D.C. I was a member of the 1981-82 State Champion Cross Country and Track team, and was the slide show Committee Chairman.

I feel that I have a solid foundation with dealing with people. NSU will continue to grow with the support of the students. I would like to personally know the students and the only way is to become involved. Lynn Nicolle

Dean Napoli

This is a short message concerning the upcoming S.G.A. election. I am running for the office of senior senator, a position of which I think I possess the experience to hold. I have put forth a great deal of effort in the past year for the students. I was very much involved in the discussion and passage of several bills, including the cost of parking fines. I feel that a lot was accomplished in the past year in S.G.A. and would like to continue working in this organization. Dean R. Napoli

Todd Eppler

I want to be the Freshman Class S.G.A. Senator because I feel I am the best candidate for the position. I have experience in leadership, I enjoy working in and learning about government. These are a few of the reasons I feel I can do the best job for the Freshman Class. If you elect me Freshman S.G.A. Senator, I promise to represent you to the best of my ability and to always have an open mind to your suggestions for the betterment of NSU. I would greatly appreciate your vote. Thank you. Todd Eppler

Mark Thigpen

I, Mark Thigpen, would like to announce my candidacy for SGA Senior Class Senator. I am a 1979 graduate of Mansfield High School and presently majoring in Physical Education.

Elect me your Senior Class Senator and I will make it my duty to find out how you, the senior students, feel about certain issues. In order to make your time at NSU a more enjoyable one, I will also work with the other senators toward solutions to the problems facing not only the seniors, but the entire student body.

If you want somebody different with a new opinion, willing to work, and not afraid to speak out for what he believes, then use your vote to help me help you. Your support will be greatly appreciated. Mark Thigpen

Noelle Orze

My name is Noelle Orze and I am recent resident of Natchitoches, previously living in Worcester, Massachusetts. I have found that the students here at Northwestern are very enthusiastic about their university. It makes me feel very proud to be a part of a school that has so much going for it. If elected freshman class senator, I will help to promote Northwestern State University as a growing and prosperous university for incoming freshmen by representing my freshman class on the Student Government Association. Noelle Orze

Susan Johnson

My name is Susan Johnson and I would like to announce my candidacy for the office of Junior Class Senator. I consider myself to be a diligent worker and I possess a great interest in the many facets of campus life and business here at Northwestern. I would like the chance to represent the students here through the Student Government and would appreciate your vote of confidence in the upcoming election. Susan Johnson

John Norrid

I, John Norrid, would like to announce my candidacy for the office of Freshman Class Senator. I feel that this office is very important in that I will be expected to represent my class and serve their needs. I can promise you that I will do my best in maintaining the office to which I hope to be elected. Please consider me as your vote will be appreciated. Thanks! John Norrid

Alyson Rein

My name is Alyson Rein and I am running for S.G.A. Sophomore Senator. In the past, I have served in several leadership positions which I feel will help me if elected. I am very interested in NSU and I will do my best to communicate with you and help you with any problems you may have. Your vote will be appreciated. Alyson Rein

Robert Haynes

Hi! Jim Robert Haynes, and I am running for freshman class senator. I have a lot of new ideas I would like to put in good use and I think being in the SGA is the best way to express them. I have the experience to be your freshman senator and know how to express your opinions for you. When you go to vote, think of me, someone who will take your problems and opinions to the top for you. Jim Robert Haynes

Donna Jo Kelly

Running for sophomore senator means a great deal to me because I want to represent my class in the SGA.

The one year I have spent at NSU has acquainted me with a great many people. With the your help, I feel we (sophomores) can have a strong voice in government. Having served as officer in various clubs in high school, I believe I have the adequate experience. I will be a senator to work with and for my sophomore class.

When and IF I am elected I will do my best to serve you. Donna Jo Kelly

Dudley Hall

I, Dudley Hall, am seeking the office of junior class senator, for the primary reason to further uphold the slogan "SGA: Students Making Things Happen". On first coming to Northwestern, I always had the desire to become a part of the mediator between the students and the administration, otherwise known as the SGA. My past position as president of the business club, the Society for the Advancement of Management, I feel will benefit me greatly in the area of representing the junior class. JUNIORS, I am ready to meet this challenge and waiting to become "NOBODY'S MAN BUT YOURS". Dudley Hall

Kimberlee Brent

Have you ever been in a crowd of people with everyone trying to talk at once? Maybe they're all saying the same thing, but noone can be understood. One voice, representing a group can speak much more effectively.

The Student Government Association -- the link between student body and administration -- was created to govern and serve the students of Northwestern. Without student input SGA is useless. They want to hear your opinions and ideas. They want to hear your voice.

I'd like to be the voice for the sophomore class. I think student government is important and I am willing, if elected, to put everything I can into representing my class well. Kimberlee Brent

Lesa Hatley

I want to define and help solve problems which face OUR freshman class. If elected I will use the advice of professionals at NSU to develop a questionnaire to find out what you, the NSU freshmen, think about food service, classroom instruction, recreational opportunities, registration procedures and the many other issues which affect our lives here. After finding out what you think, I will publish the results of the survey and communicate your wishes clearly and forcefully to the SGA, the faculty senate, and the administration. Let's make our four years at Northwestern happy and valuable. Lesa Hatley

Susanne Crawford

Hi! I am Susanne Crawford, a candidate for senior class senator. I am a broadcast journalism major and have previously served as Senator-at-Large. I have served on a number of SGA committees, including Student Services, State Fair, Homecoming, Spirit and Library. In my years at NSU, I have been interested in satisfying the needs and desires of the students in making NSU a better place to live and learn. I believe my experience in SGA has shown me how to best represent the students' needs. So when you vote, remember Susanne Crawford for senior class senator. Susanne Crawford

Christine Avant

I, Christine Avant, a sophomore in English Education, am running for sophomore class senator. I feel my qualifications are twofold. First, I have the time to devote to SGA since I've attended every meeting except one for this last year as committee member and chairperson. Second, since familiar with Parliamentary Procedure, I will be able to conduct myself properly within the meetings with confidence and pride in my class and school. Other organizations offices I hold include SLAE - historian, Delta Zeta Sorority - house chairman, Panhellenic Delegate and Public Relations Chairman, Panhellenic Publicity Chairman and the Argus Publicity Editorship.

Advice For Medic Alert Patients

How many students do you know who leave their residence for a daily run without any identification? How many of your fellow classmates have a special medical condition, like diabetes or medication allergies, which should be known in an emergency?

According to Dr. Malcolm Todd, surgeon and past President of the American Medical Association, probably 20% of the college age population in the United States has a condition that needs to be known in a medical emergency.

"Fatal mistakes, unnecessary or improper treatment can be administered under emergency conditions if the special medical condition of the victim is unknown," Todd says. He suggests that anyone with a special medical condition wear a Medic Alert bracelet or necklace.

Recent estimates by the nonprofit Medic Alert organization indicate that the system has played an important role in life-saving situations approximately 2,000 times during the past year.

"Medic Alert is the most simple and efficient emergency medical identification and information system that can be devised," according to Todd.

Each member of Medic Alert receives an annual update on their wallet card, which serves as a reminder for the individual to make changes in the information, if necessary.

The Medic Alert bracelet or necklace has engraved on it the member's identification number, their special medical condition and a twenty-four hour collect phone number to Medic Alert's emergency information center. In case of an accident or sudden illness, a phone call to a trained operator at the center will provide authorized personnel with the member's vital emergency medical information within a few seconds. Other important data about the patient, the name of the family physician, blood type and insurance information can also be a part of the member's Medic Alert file, for example.

For information write Medic Alert, Turlock, California 95381 or call their toll-free number 800/344-3226, or in California, Alaska and Hawaii call 209/668-3333.

Regional offices are located in New York City, Chicago, Salt Lake City and Orlando.

Demons Suffer Casualties In Homecoming Victory

Northwestern State University Demons beat the ACU Wildcats 35-30, this week for a Homecoming victory. Demon fans will tend to ask if this was a victory or a loss for the Demons. NSU lost starting quarterback Stan Powell to a broken left wrist and then lost back-up Mark Leonard late in the game to a sprained knee.

The Demons were below there seasonal total yards per game average only getting 272 total yards. Junior Mark Leonard threw for 147 yards, three touchdowns and three interceptions. This was on seven completions and 25 attempts. NSU's leading receiver was Victor Otis with two catches for 122 yards and two touchdowns. V.O. left the game early due to an unsportsman like conduct penalty.

Abilene Christian amassed a total of 418 yards. The Wildcats picked up 212 yards rushing, lead by Gary Kinsler 154 yards on 15 attempts and one touchdown. Wildcat quarterback Loyal Profit threw for 206 yards on 36 attempts and 13 completion. The biggest statistic for the Demons and the Wildcats has to be the number of interceptions that Profit threw.

The Demon defense intercepted Profit six times for a new NSU single game record, beating the old record of five. Michael 'Red' Richardson lead the defense in intercepts with two. Other Demons with one interception on the night were defensive backs David Hennigan, Tommy Rushing, Spencer Mallet, and defensive end Karl 'Moose' Lane. Leading the defense in tackles were defensive backs David Hennigan, Mike Richardson, and line-backer Gary Reasons. The Wildcat defense was led by defensive end Billy Stiggers with 17 tackles and four quarterback sacks.

NSU Head Coach A. L. Williams said about the defensive effort, 'I thought the secondary did fairly well, except for a few mental mistakes. The secondary had some poor tackling in the first half, but came thru when the chips were down.' Abilene Head Coach Ted Sitton did not like the way his quarterback played, but did like the never quit attitude of his team. Northwestern will now take a 3-11 record and a injury riddle quarter-backing crew to Commerce, Texas. Next weeks opponent the East Texas State University Lions.

NSU Faces East Texas State

The Demons play their final Lone Star Conference team this week against the East Texas State University Lions.

Northwestern is fresh off a Homecoming victory, over another Lone Star Conference foe Abilene Christian University, 35-30. The victory however could prove to be a costly one as starting quarterback Stan Powell broke two bones in his left wrist and back-up quarterback Mark Leonard sprain his knee. The only good thing about Powell's injury if there is one, the injury is not on his throwing hand. Stan will be able to play this week, if needed desperately.

East Texas State brings into

The men's tug-of-war competition, marred by scandal and controversy, was won by Brotherhood, while Kappa Sigma finished runner-up.

In the first round Brotherhood beat Tau Kappa Epsilon and advanced to the second round where they pulled against East Rapides.

E'Raps proved no match for Brotherhood however. The Brotherhood then squeezed by Kappa Sigma in the fourth round to reach the finals.

After the Sigs were set back in the fourth, they came back to outpull TKE, who had won by a forfeit when the University of Yang was disqualified for allegedly having too many men on the line, in the finals of the loser's bracket.

For the second time in the tournament the Brotherhood faced Kappa Sig; this time for the championship, but Brotherhood had just enough to win and claim victory.

In the women's competition, VIPs came back from a third round loss to UnKappa 5th to win a hard-earned title.

VIPs rolled past Sigma Kappa and Tri Sigma number two in the first two rounds before being set back by UnKappa 5th. In the finals of the losers bracket VIPs squared off against Sigma Kappa for the second time.

Again VIPs were victorious. The finals of the women's competition was a rematch between UK 5th and VIPs. The tables were turned, however, as the VIPs were crowned champions after a tough battle.

The Punt, Pass, and Kick competition was a big success as there was a large field of entries on hand. The men's

Demons Place Fifth in McNeese Meet

Cross country team improved in individual times, but the team result was a fifth place finish at the McNeese State Invitational early this week. The Demons will run in their third meet of the season Saturday at Louisiana Tech and then Saturday afternoon Northwestern will host a high school cross country meet on the Northwestern campus.

The Demons ran without sophomore Andy Nelson at McNeese, but those who did compete improved their times and that pleased Coach Leon Johnson. "We knew the competition at the McNeese meet would be very strong," noted Johnson. "But we were happy that everyone improved their times and at this point that is we are looking for."

Lamar won the meet, followed by Southwestern Louisiana, McNeese State, Stephen F. Austin and Northwestern.

The top finisher over the five mile course for the Demons was Brian Barrios, who placed 17th with a time of 26:35. Michael Carver was 25th in a time of 27:41. Chris Maggio ran 30:42, Willie Edwards 35:11, Willie Garcia 35:20 and Jerry VanHoosen turned in a time of 35:30.

The Demons will be one of several teams from Louisiana running this Saturday at Tech as the Bulldogs opened last week by winning a meet in Alabama. Johnson again expects very strong competition.

Saturday afternoon at 3:00 p.m. six high schools will compete in a 3.1 mile race on the Northwestern campus. Those teams entered include DeRidder, Rapids, Minden, Mansfield, Pickering and Natchitoches-Central. The meet will start and finish on the intramural fields behind the NSU track complex.

Reynolds Ties For First Holds Press Conference

"Total embarrassment," was the only way Roger "E.T." Reynolds could describe the performance of the Porker Picker Panel at his weekly press conference in the basement of old Bullard Hall last night at 11:54.

Reynolds, who tied for the week's honors with last week's winner and perennial flash-in-the-pan, Joe Cunningham, was at 6-4. Also at 6-4 were John Cunningham and Walter Young, who were the only two to correctly pick Loras' surprising upset of Coe, and of course, Laurie Weaver who was the only one to foresee Stanford's surprise win over Ohio St.

At 5-5 last week was Alison Breazeale who continues her assault on Bob Sjoberg's record for worst start in P.P. history. Rounding out (so to speak) the week's pick's was Sugar Bear who managed a 4-6 record. After that embarassment, Sugar Bear went to civil court and had his name legally changed to James Richardson so nobody would recognize him.

Reynold's announced he was extending Alison's contract another week in hopes that her current slump might be over soon. At the same time, Reynold's announced that he had been in close contact with several members of the NFL Today show and because of the football strike, he felt sure that he could trade both Joe and John Cunningham, and a player to be named later, to the show in a deal that would send Jimmy the Greek and Irv Cross to the P.P. Panel, and Phyllis George anywhere that Reynolds wanted her. Roger wisely declined comment on the plans for the former Miss America.

For his final announcement, which drew a standing ovation, Reynolds revealed the three new guest selector's. First was Sarah Jean "Ho Wah" McKnight and her Tri-Sigma friend, Connie "BoBo China" Johnson. Also picking this week is Lady Demon Tracy "If you give me a stupid nickname I'll cram a basketball down your throat" Taylor. Our special game of the week is that battle of unknown powers, Beloit and Grinnel.

The horseshoes competition was held with a singles event and a doubles contest. The singles winner in the women's division was Annette Manuel of UK 5th. Sonja Griffiths of VIP took second while Sissy Palmer and Sidney Forrester, both of UK 5th tied for third.

Forrester then teamed with Julie Cassel, also of UK 5th to take the doubles title as UK 5th's Stephany Washington and Tandra Lewis finished second with a strong showing. Odyssey's Tootie Carey and Kathy Carrol tied with Angela Lasyone and Shiela Stewart of Phi Mu for third.

James LaCaze of Kappa Alpha took first in the men's division singles. Sigma Tau's John Frost came in second while James Nichols of East Rapides and Dane Broussard of KA finished in a third place tie.

The doubles champions in the clash were Jack Cobb and David Nardini of Theta Chi. John Frost and Jeff Fonda of Sigma Tau earned a second place finish on the day. Tau Kappa Epsilon's Jon Robbins and Robert Triplett finished in a tie for third with Donnie Hingle and James Nichols of 3'Raps.

NSU Pops Concert Tonight

The first scheduled event at Northwestern's new A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts will be tonight, Oct. 5, when the Natchitoches-Northwestern Symphony Orchestra presents its 11th annual outdoor pops concert.

Open to the public without charge, the inaugural performance begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Esplanade Theatre, a tiered brick and stone outdoor amphitheatre stage located in the Center's courtyard and offering original pine and oak tree landscaping.

Dr. J. Robert Smith will conduct the concert, which features motion picture and Broadway show music by George Gershwin and the musical themes from such movies as "Star Wars" and "Chariots of Fire."

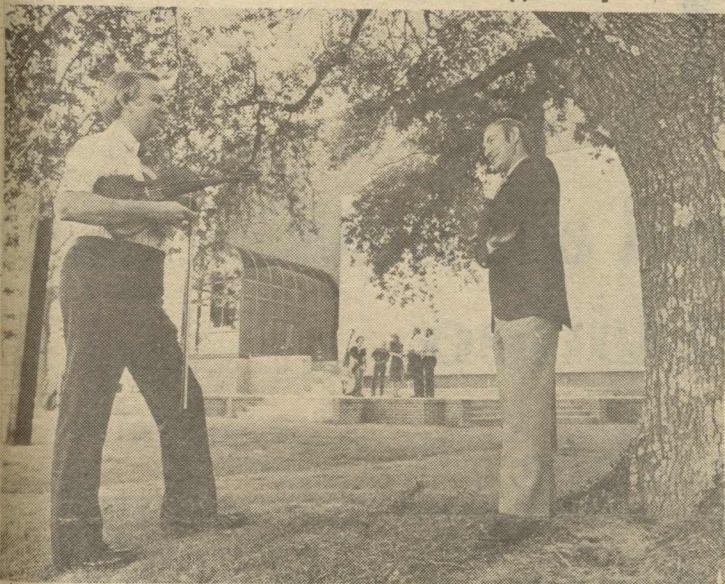

The A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts is a sprawling complex that has required over two years to construct a new 64,000-square-foot wing, renovate the 40-year-old A.A. Fredericks Fine Arts Building and furnish the ultra-modern facilities.

Considered one of the most modernistic and comprehensive educational facilities in the nation, the Center is expected to become the cultural center for the community and region when the university's music, theatre-speech, art and dance departments move into the complex later this fall.

Its multi-level stage is designed to accommodate a variety of musical and theatrical presentations. The outdoor amphitheatre is located near the new main entrance to the Fine Arts Auditorium. The old entrance has been incorporated into an intermission deck for the large auditorium. Continued on Page 5

Alumni Association Elects Officers

Natchitoches attorney Raymond Arthur was re-elected to a fifth one-year term as president of the Northwestern Alumni Association during NSU's Homecoming celebration.

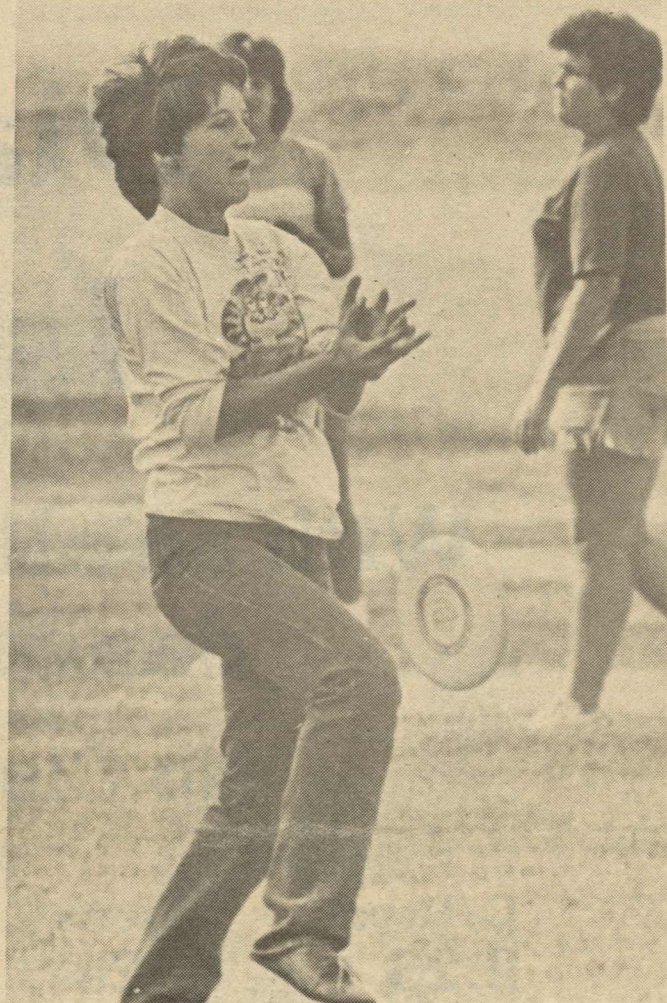

The NSU Foundation board of directors also met during Homecoming and re-elected Wayne McCullen of Natchitoches to a third one-year term as president.

The Northwestern Alumni Association board of directors also re-elected Parker Wiggins of Monroe as vice-president and elected Bill Cross of Natchitoches to secretary-treasurer.

Re-elected as members of the board were Dale Bernard of Lake Charles, Carroll Long of Lafayette and Arthur. Cross was also named to the board.

Ed Pierson of Natchitoches was re-elected vice-president of the NSU Foundation, and Cross was elected secretary-treasurer of the Foundation.

NSU Enrollment Drops

NSU had an enrollment of 6,481 students on the 14th day of class according to Dr. Austin F. Temple, Office of the Registrar.

This is a decrease of 3.6% compared to last fall semester's enrollment of 6,722.

Of the 6,481 students 4,838 are undergraduate students and 1,643 are graduate students.

Dr. Temple believes there are several reasons for the decrease in students. One of the reasons was last fall there was a higher enrollment among graduate students because of the PiPs Program. This year there was a lot of indecisiveness among the State legislation as to whether or not Gov. Treen would pass the Pips bill. This caused several teachers to either postpone taking the PiPs classes or to take them in the summer. Due to this there was a slight increase among graduate students during the summer session.

Trash An Issue At Rapides

by Beatrice Dawson

Roaches are not the only thing that seems to be accumulating in and around Rapides Hall (with the help of some of its residents) because now garbage seems to be the next collectable item. Irritated by the movement of garbage barrels that had been positioned in front of the dorm, aggravated students are making use of the ground and sidewalks to dispose of their waste. Due to constantly overflowing garbage barrels and scattered waste, the cans were put in back of the dorm to eliminate some of the problems caused by scattered waste in front of the dorm. However, according to two of the Resident Assistants on the south side of Rapides Hall, the REAL problems are just beginning. Blake Chauvin - first floor RA - exclaimed, "The barrels should be put back on the front because it could save a lot of problems as well as flat tires, as students are leaving beer bottles, cups, coke bottles, etc. on walkways." They are throwing trash out of dorm windows and car windows, when they clean out their cars, and don't take it to the back, he said. "One morning I was told to pick up the trash on the outside, he went on, "but that's NOT my job; I'll clean up the hallways but I'm not picking up any garbage." He added that if the cans were put back, it would help them (the residents) on weekends; they would be able to empty their baskets when they get full instead of letting them overflow in the hallways.

Dave Hendricks - second floor RA - proclaimed that this isn't anything new since it went on last semester but now it just seems a little more noticeable. He noted that last semester purple and white trash barrels were out front and did solve part of the situation. Now residents and others are dropping anything anywhere since trash containers are not as available as they once were. "Trash lies everywhere and looks awful. These dorms need all the help they can get to make them

Tunberg Will

Bare It All

Artist Bill Tunberg, who's 50 years old, believes that older men shouldn't become "trapped in a set of values." He thinks they should be "Open to Life's Possibilities." And he means it enough to do it. The Santa Monica, California man is baring all, as November's nude centerfold in "Playgirl" magazine. It's the first time playgirl has a centerfold who's over 30. But the Magazine says the world is ready -- it says women like older men.

Sheik Sues For Half Billion

Saudi Sheik Mohammed Al Fassi has gone to court to seek half a billion dollars in damages from the city of Hollywood, Florida. In a suit filed in Miami yesterday, the 27-year-old Sheik claims his civil rights were violated by Hollywood Police in July when they detained him for not paying a 1.4 million dollar hotel bill. The Sheik paid up and the charges were dropped. But his suit says he was falsely arrested, emotionally harassed, and slandered. His Lawyer describes the requested damage payment as "paltry" -- adding that the Sheik wanted to ask for one trillion dollars.

Concert...

The Esplanade Theatre has been equipped with facilities for the use of portable lighting and sound equipment. Great care has also been taken to preserve the ecological environment of the courtyard area, which will eventually include stone benches on the periphery.

The focal point of the outdoor amphitheatre is its backdrop, comprised of specially-sculptured cement panels which follow the architectural motif of the renovated area of the Center.

The public is requested to bring lawn chairs or blankets to the outdoor pops concert, because seating is not provided at the Esplanade Theatre. In the future, performances may be viewed from the courtyard or the ballustrade, a covered walkway along the second floor of the Center's new wing.

"In a departure from recent tradition," said Dr. John Taylor, director of NSU's School of Creative and Performing Arts, "we are moving the pops concert this fall from its traditional riverbank setting to the site of one of finest arts facilities of its kind in the United States."

MEN IN NURSING: WHY SO FEW?

By Raymond C. Cain, Jr., Nursing major, Warrington Campus

In the spring of 1982 the NSU College of Nursing graduated sixty-four (64) student nurses. Of the sixty-four (64) only five (5) were male. That is ratio of about 13 females to 1 male. Why are so few men entering the profession of nursing?

First and foremost, there are certain myths that need to be dispelled about male nurses. One of the strongest deterrent is the myth that any male that is interested in nursing must be either homosexual, effeminate, or perverted. Nothing could be farther from the truth. This myth is evident when male nurses are occasionally faced with the "raised eyebrow" of the general public. What's more, some males are questioned regarding their sexual performance because they chose nursing.

Few people are aware that some of the earliest nurses were men. They were the real forefathers of nursing-- the men who were responsible for tending to the injured victims of combat during the early wars.

Another major conflict is that it is difficult for males to integrate their role as a man with their role as a nurse. Why? Because society dictates that males are not supposed to be nurses. In an effort to reduce the conflict of role strain, the men who go into nursing choose an area of specialization, such as Anesthesiology. This is done in an attempt to be more than "just a nurse" because society expects more of a male. What is wrong with men being warm, caring, and sensitive people who want to dedicate their lives to helping the sick and impaired?

There are several reasons why the few men who go into nursing choose to. Some are seeking a profession with numerous specialties and unlimited opportunities. Some have an interest in the biological sciences. Still others go into it just for the feeling of being involved in a humanistic profession.

I challenge you, the reader, to explore and dispell the myths that you hold about men in nursing and learn to appreciate any person, male or female, black or white, who is interested in serving the ill and infirmed.

As soon as men show society that we have same motivations, share the same qualities, and are just as capable as our female counterparts of being excellent nurses.

In closing, I am proud to say that I chose nursing. The field is beckoning for men and women alike. I encourage all men to continue to pursue the profession that you dominated ages ago.

We, Too, Are Guilty

John Hess is a syndicated columnist of the United Feature Syndicate

UNITED NATIONS — It is a curious fact that the freest debate on the massacre in Beirut has been taking place in Israel.

Elsewhere in the free world, nobody can ever discuss the fate of the Middle East without being inhibited by our common burden of guilt for the Nazi holocaust. It is a guilt we cannot deny, because it showed what some men are capable of, and what decent men allowed to happen.

Adding to this burden has been the pressure brought upon the media by misguided friends of Israel, especially in the United States. In its most extreme form — voiced by the neoconservative pack — everybody who criticized the Begin government is an anti-Semite.

No sooner did Begin open that ill-starred operation called Peace for Galilee than his sympathizers here took preemptive action. They accused reporters on the scene of exaggerating the casualties, and the publicist David Garth warned the networks that they were being monitored.

Thus began a numbers game that goes on to this day. Harried and heartsick correspondents, who have in general done a remarkable job, were forced in self-defense to conduct a ghoul-ish census of the dead — as if the count made some moral difference.

When the bombing of Beirut reached its paroxysm in early August, John Chancellor of NBC drew heavy fire for describing it as "savage" and "piracy," although every other reporter in Beirut seems to have filed a similar description.

The Washington Post had to face a hostile crowd of readers, who refused to believe that it was not viciously biased. A cautious editor of The New York Times deleted the word "indiscriminate" from the lead of its story on the bombing, to the outrage of its excellent correspondent, Thomas Friedman.

All this was made almost academic by the massacres of Sept. 16 to Sept. 18. At least it would seem so, but for those same misguided friends of Israel.

It should be noted that the first demonstrations and denunciations in this country against those atrocities were predominantly by Jewish Americans. But their conservative leaders sprang to Begin's defense by a common reflex.

A signal was a full-page advertisement by the Israeli Embassy crying "Blood Libel." Point by point, it was refuted by front-page dispatches, notably those from the Israeli press.

We can perhaps rely on Israeli reporters to explore the responsibility of their government in this war crime. What I as an American was most troubled by was our failure to examine our own responsibility as boldly.

We largely subsidized the operation Peace for Galilee. We supplied the cluster bombs, and much more. Our government wrung its hands, our president even had his picture taken wearing a frown. But for the first three months we made it clear to the world that we did not much mind the turn of events.

Following his departure as secretary of state, Alexander Haig openly confirmed his support of the course taken by Begin, to the point of disagreeing with Reagan's modest peace proposal. And while the massacres were actually under way, Reagan offhandedly said the Israelis had entered Beirut because the Moslems had fired upon them — a pretext that had not occurred to Begin.

Once the news was out, he said he was horrified, and ordered the Marines back to Beirut, with Israel's kind permission. But who are we to criticize Begin? Our own honor has been indelibly stained.

In our name, Philip Habib persuaded the Palestinian guerrillas to withdraw, leaving their families under our protection... How do we rid ourselves of that stain?

Hardly anybody seems to have asked what our Marines were doing in the godforsaken country in the first place. Is it not a job for the United Nations? Ah, but Begin doesn't like the United Nations...

So now we have a war crime on our hands, and a land full of fear and hatred. There are solutions — there must be — but first we must make clear to the world that crimes against humanity do not go unpunished. In a spirit of justice, we may perhaps hope to build a peace.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Short and to the point. I think that the NSU Demon mascots' behavior at Saturday game was very disrespectful. During halftime when the court was being presented, the Demon ran out onto the field with one girl in each arm. He looped around the thirty yard line then back into the endzone. I thought that this action was very irresponsible. I hope that in the future the Demon mascot can restrain himself during certain ceremonies.

SGA Revises Constitution

Highlighting the September 27th Student Government Association meeting were the announcements of an "SGA Legal Service," the revision of the SGA Constitution, A Distinguished Lecture Series Speaker and State Fair Events.

The new "SGA Legal Service" will provide a student with the opportunity to meet with an attorney and discuss legal/financial troubles or questions. It will be held every Wednesday in the SGA Conference Room(221) from 2:00-4:00 and the SGA office will handle the scheduling of appointments. This service will be free of charge and will begin on October 6.

Joe Stamey, SGA President, emphasized the importance of people realizing the "impact of the Special Task Force appointed to study the Constitution, the election code as well as the guidelines the Supreme Court will be operating under." The Special Task Force will consist of the Supreme Court of the SGA, who will begin making changes. The decision to make such a revision was because of the many changes the SGA has undergone, Senate elections and number of candidates, for example.

Jonathan Kozal, a Pulitzer Prize winning Author will be the NSU Distinguished Lecture Series Speaker on October 13 at 9:00 a.m., Kyser Hall. All classes will be dismissed during this time.

NSU Rodeo Expecting Crowd

by Scott Cox

A large attendance is expected for the Little Britches Rodeo to be held Sunday, Oct. 10 at the Natchitoches Parish fairgrounds, according to his year's Rodeo directors, Mardell Sibley and Ronald Dunn.

The rodeo, which is sponsored and run by the NSU Agriculture Club, is open to any youth 15 years of age and under with no experience required.

"We're really expecting a large turnout this year," commented Dunn. "Last year we had over 100 contestants and we raised over $700 for the Agriculture Club."

GAS RAFFLE

Take your chance for $25 worth of gas. Get your ticket from any Tri-Sigma member. Drawing will be held Oct. 24 or 25.

Pre-Registration And Grade Changes

"Two changes have been made," according to Dr. Austin F. Temple, office of the Registrar, "that will affect the student tremendously."

The first is: If a student repeats a course, the last grade and credits made shall be used in computing the GPA. This means that if a student fails a course, and then repeats it and makes a C the quality points of 2 will be used as if this were the first time the student had taken this course.

The second is that English 101 and 102 can be dropped from Nov. 29-Dec. 1, at 4:30 p.m.

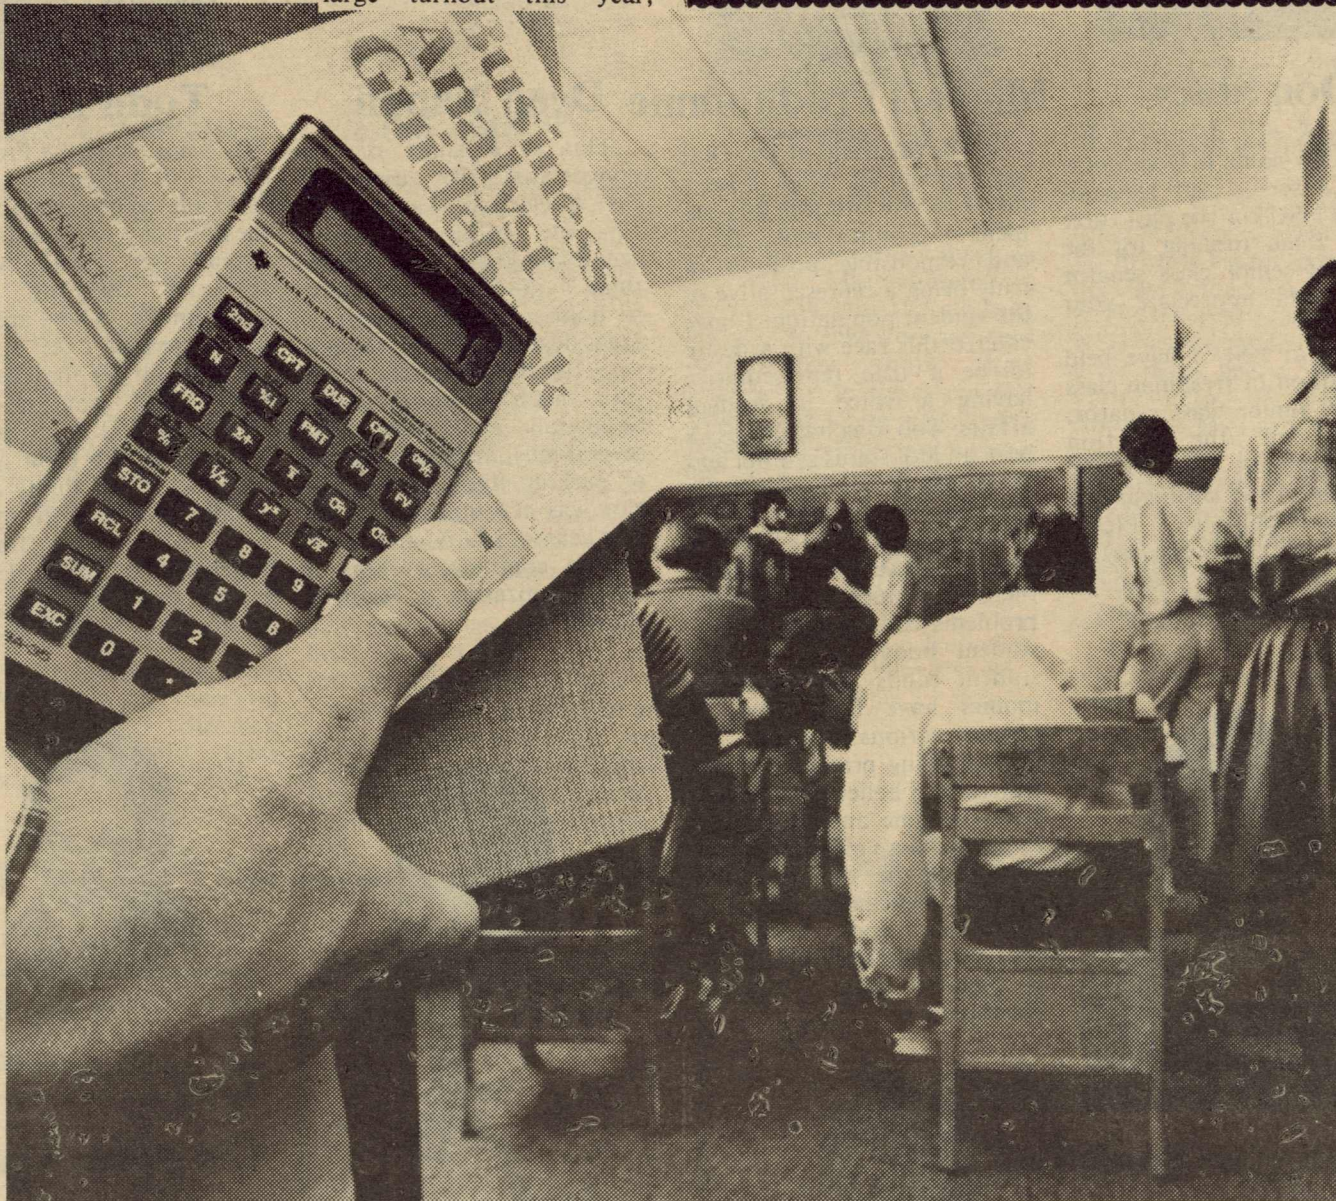

For the first time at N.S.U., they will have an advanced registration for the spring semester. Students will be able to do everything that they would do at a normal registration except pay fees. It will be on the same idea as INSIDE VIEW for freshmen in the fall. It will include only the Natchitoches Campus. The tentative date is Nov. 22-24.

1982 SGA Class Senator Nominees

Don Stacy

Hi! My name is Don Stacy. I am a senior and have attended NSU for the past three years. I am running for the office of senior class senator and would appreciate your vote.

While at NSU I have held the position of freshman class senator, junior class senator, member of the election committee and am currently chairman of the Distinguished Lectures Committee. Please vote for me this Wednesday; if elected, I will serve you to the best of my ability. Don Stacy

With the arrival of Dr. Orze as president of NSU, I see a new role for student government -- a much more active and responsible position of truly being a representative of the student population. I have entered this race with a desire to be a true representative having a voice in student affairs. Too long has our SGA been an idol status symbol and in the end accomplishing little. Look at the time spent talking in previous years about Chaplain's Lake when I believe there were much more serious problems confronting us as a student body, such as how student funds and university monies have been used to support various programs. As the out-going president of my fraternity, I believe that I have both the time and experience to put forth an effective effort to reflect the opinions and needs of our campus. I would appreciate your vote of confidence for junior senator at election time. Michael Prudhomme

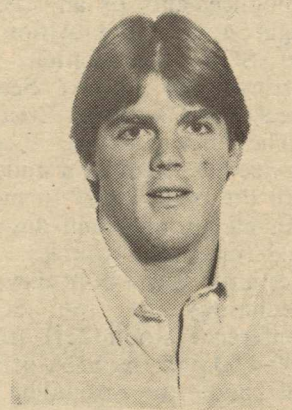

This is a short message concerning the upcoming S.G.A. election. I am running for the office of senior senator, a position of which I think I possess the experience to hold. I have put forth a great deal of effort in the past year for the students. I was very much involved in the discussion and passage of several bills, including the cost of parking fines. I feel that a lot was accomplished in the past year in S.G.A. and would like to continue working in this organization. Dean R. Napoli

I want to be the Freshman Class S.G.A. Senator because I feel I am the best candidate for the position. I have experience in leadership, I enjoy working in and learning about government. These are a few of the reasons I feel I can do the best job for the Freshman Class. If you elect me Freshman S.G.A. Senator, I promise to represent you to the best of my ability and to always have an open mind to your suggestions for the betterment of NSU. I would greatly appreciate your vote. Thank you. Todd Eppler

Mark Thigpen

I, Mark Thigpen, would like to announce my candidacy for SGA Senior Class Senator. I am a 1979 graduate of Mansfield High School and presently majoring in Physical Education.

Elect me your Senior Class Senator and I will make it my duty to find out how you, the senior students, feel about certain issues. In order to make your time at NSU a more enjoyable one, I will also work with the other senators toward solutions to the problems facing not only the seniors, but the entire student body.

If you want somebody different with a new opinion, willing to work, and not afraid to speak out for what he believes, then use your vote to help me help you. Your support will be greatly appreciated. Mark Thigpen

Kimberlee Brent

Have you ever been in a crowd of people with everyone trying to talk at once. Maybe they're all saying the same thing, but no one can be understood. One voice, representing a group can speak much more effectively.

The Student Government Association -- the link between student body and administration -- was created to govern and serve the students of Northwestern. Without student input SGA is useless. They want to hear your opinions and ideas. They want to hear your voice.

I'd like to be the voice for the sophomore class. I think student government is important and I am willing, if elected, to put everything I can into representing my class well. Kimberlee Brent

Alyson Rein

My name is Alyson Rein and I am running for S.G.A. Sophomore Senator. In the past, I have served in several leadership positions which I feel will help me if elected. I am very interested in NSU and I will do my best to communicate with you and help you with any problems you may have. Your vote will be appreciated. Alyson Rein

Dudley Hall

I, Dudley Hall, am seeking the office of junior class senator, for the primary reason to further uphold the slogan "SGA: Students Making Things Happen". On first coming to Northwestern, I always had the desire to become a part of the mediator between the students and the administration, otherwise known as the SGA. My past position as president of the business club, the Society for the Advancement of Management, I feel will benefit me greatly in the area of representing the junior class. JUNIORS, I am ready to meet this challenge and waiting to become "NOBODY'S MAN BUT YOURS". Dudley Hall

Christine Avant

I, Christine Avant, a sophomore in English Education, am running for sophomore class senator. I feel my qualifications are twofold. First, I have the time to devote to SGA since I've attended every meeting except one for this last year as committee member and chairperson. Second, since familiar with Parliamentary Procedure, I will be able to conduct myself properly within the meetings with confidence and pride in my class and school. Other organizations offices I hold include SLAE - historian, Delta Zeta Sorority - house chairman, Panhellenic Delegate and Public Relations Chairman, Panhellenic Publicity Chairman and the Argus Publicity Editorship.

Susan Johnson

My name is Susan Johnson and I would like to announce my candidacy for the office of Junior Class Senator. I consider myself to be a diligent worker and I possess a great interest in the many facets of campus life and business here at Northwestern. I would like the chance to represent the students here through the Student Government and would appreciate your vote of confidence in the upcoming election. Susan Johnson

1982 SGA Class Senator Nominees

Lesa Hatley

I want to define and help solve problems which face OUR freshman class. If elected I will use the advice of professionals at NSU to develop a questionnaire to find out what you, the NSU freshmen, think about food service, classroom instruction, recreational opportunities, registration procedures and the many other issues which affect our lives here. After finding out what you think, I will publish the results of the survey and communicate your wishes clearly and forcefully to the SGA, the faculty senate, and the administration. Let's make our four years at Northwestern happy and valuable. Lesa Hatley

Susanne Crawford

Hi! I am Susanne Crawford, a candidate for senior class senator. I am a broadcast journalism major and have previously served as Senator-at-Large. I have served on a number of SGA committees, including Student Services, State Fair, Homecoming, Spirit and Library. ### The Football Strike: Grow Up, Play Ball

Well its fall and high school and college football are beginning to get into full swing. The football fan can go anywhere around the state and watch football games Thursday thru Saturday. The only problem however; is what to do on Sunday's, now that the pro football players are on strike.

The key issues in the strike are: (1) Money, (2) How should money be paid. I realize that money is a key to everybody in the world's success and also that the players deserve a little more than some other athletes because football is a rough sport.

Pro football players must also realize that during this strike, they are hurting their pocket books and most of all, the pro game of football itself.

This strike can only help college football and the Canadian Pro Football game. The average fan finds it hard to believe anyway at times, how much one person gets paid to play four or five months out of the year.

I know the big issue is the money the owners get for televising and some of the gate money. The players must also realize, the owners have bills and expenses to pay with that money they receive. The second issue in the situation is really dumb. From all that I have read and heard the players also want bonuses, such as incentives and other types of knit picky stuff that will just actually be giving them another raise, besides the money that they already receive.

This is one writer and Pro football fan that says to heck with the strike, 'Fella's Let's Play Football.'

NOTE: A Canadian Pro Football game is shown on one channel every Sunday in place of the NFL. There will be another next Sunday, if the players are still on strike. This is something for all Pro football fans to think about, while watching the Canadians play football.

NSU Drops Game To East Texas

The Demons travelled to Commerce, Texas to play the East Texas State University Lions and came back a loser by the score of 24-20. Northwestern lost the game with one minute and fifty-nine seconds left to go in the game.

ETSU scored when Kyle Mackey found Mark Smith in the end zone for a touchdown.

The Lions were helped on this drive by two Demon penalties. NSU's final penalty came when Tommy Rushing was called for an interference at the one yard line. What made this an important penalty is that linebacker Gary Reasons had intercepted the ball in the end zone. Northwestern would have had the ball on their twenty with less than two minutes left on the clock.

Wayne Van started at quarterback for the Demons and did a very creditable job in his first start as a Demon. Van was 14 for 22 with one interception and two touchdowns. NSU was led again in receiving by Victor Oatis with five catches for 70 yards. The Demons lacked a rushing game this week, as they only rushed for a total of 43 yards on 48 attempts.

While the Demon rushing game was having trouble the Lions were running up 106 yards rushing and 256 yards passing on 40 attempts and 21 completions and one big touchdown pass.

NSU's defensive effort was lead this week by defensive end David Grappe with 11 tackles and one blocked pass. Cornerback Terry Bertrand had 10 tackles on the night for the defense.

Northwestern will try to get back on the winning track this week, which won't be easy as the Demons travel to play the always tough McNeese State Cowboys in Lake Charles. McNeese comes into the game with a disappointing one win and three losses, while the Demons bring a 3-2 record into Lake Charles.

Demons Travel To McNeese Saturday

Coach A. L. Williams and the Demons will try to rebound this week after a disappointing 24-20 loss to the Lions of East Texas State.

Northwestern will travel to Lake Charles to play the Cowboys of McNeese State. The Cowboys are lead by possibly the best all-around quarterback the Demon defense has faced all year and his name is Stephen Starring. Starring is a threat to run or pass the ball. The Cowboys also have a good running attack lead by Theoron McClendon. In last year's contest, the Cowboys played NSU in Natchitoches and took the Demons apart with a good rushing and passing attack.

The Demons will more than likely look again for sophomore Wayne Van to start at the Demon helm. Bobby Herbert also is hoping his ribs are healed enough to let him play, this week. Herbert played in last week's loss, throwing for five yards on two attempts.

This week again, the Demons must have and all out defensive effort. If the defense does not hold the Cowboys tough, it could be a long night for NSU players.

coaches, and fans. For the Demons are now into the heart of their '82' schedule.

NSU must also look to the running game this week to balance out the passing attack.

If anything can be a big question mark for the Demons it is the rushing game and the Demon defensive secondary's ability to stop the pass.

Braves, Brewers

Clinch Titles

The Atlanta Braves and Milwaukee Brewers both clinched division championships on the last day of the season, while the California Angels nailed down their division title on Saturday.

Atlanta loss to the Padres 5-1, but the Los Angeles Dodgers also lost to the San Francisco Giants 5-3 on a seventh inning three-run homer by veteran second baseman 'Little' Joe Morgan. The Brewers meanwhile had an easier time with the victory as they beat the Orioles in Baltimore, 10-2. For Baltimore, this was Earl Weaver's last game as the Birds manager.

Robin Yount led the Brewers to victory as he went three for four including two home runs and a triple. Cecil Cooper and catcher Ted Simmons also added home runs for the champion Brewers.

'Mr. October', Reggie Jackson, led the Angels the day before as he started the Angels on the way to a victory over the Texas Rangers, 6-4 with a home run of his own.

Now that the regular season is over, so begin the playoffs with the Braves playing the St. Louis Cardinals in St. Louis on Tuesday. The Brewers, meanwhile, will travel to Anaheim, California to play the Angels Tuesday night.

Guest Selector's Humiliate Panel Irregulars

Guest selector's Sarah "Ho Wah" McKnight, Connie "Bobo China" Johnson, and Tracy "Tonsil's" Taylor embarrassed the field of self-proclaimed experts on the Porker Picker Panel by picking eight out of ten games right ("Ho Wah and Bobo China") and seven out of ten games ("Tonsil's"), in last week's predictions.

The P.P. panel's staff of irregulars showed what real stooges they were last week in posting the worst combined week to date. Roger Reynolds, John Cunningham, and Joe Cunningham each had miserable 6-4 records while Alison "I'm so embarrassed" Breazeale limped through with a 5-5 worksheet.

Regardless of the stupidity of his picks, not to mention the general bad taste in picking Florida over LSU, Joe Cunningham stayed clinging to a narrow one game lead over Roger "Pac Man" Reynolds in the race for the Highman Trophy, symbol of football forecasting excellence. However, in a major surprise, the first guest selector is tied with Joe for the top spot. Speculation has arisen as to what will happen if and when the guest selector takes over first place. Unconfirmed reports say that Reynolds is contemplating abolishing the guest selector spot and filling it with three regulars from the dairy barn.

Sitting two games out this week are John Cunningham and Alison Breazeale. Alison gained the P.P. panel's pick of the week for her upset prediction of LSU over Florida. Also guessing that game right was "Bobo China", who demanded a regular spot for herself and Miss "Ho Wah", as well as "Tonsil's. Reynold's said that under no circumstances would he let the three of them become regulars.

This week, the P.P. Panel welcomes three new guest selector's. They are Dwanda Smith, Don Stacy, and Miss Beebe Adkins.

K.A.'s Merrick Pierce finished second with a 21, point total, while Sig Dog, Steve Alan and Mark Doblin of East Rapides tied for third with 20 points apiece.

The women's division champ was Sherri Brooks of UnKappa 5th. Sherri's total ran to 24 points. Julie Cassel, also of U.K. 5th finished second with 18 points which was good enough to tie her with Phi Mu's Angela Lasyone for third place.

The golf tournament was also a success as it drew a large crowd of participants in the one day contest. Dane Thompson took the men's title with a one-over par 36 for nine holes. Yang's James Smith and Joe Bienvenu took second and third place finished with totals of 37 and 38 respectively.

Tri-Sig's Kim Gill led all women with a nine hole total of 43. Janet Guerrine of U.K. 5th finished with a 22 over par total of 57 for second place. Johnny Kay Heard, also of U.K. 5th finished third with a 61.

Orze Leaves For Poland

Northwestern president Dr. Joseph J. Orze will lead a five-member delegation to Poland Oct. 13-20 to finalize an educational exchange agreement between the Polish Ministry of Science, Higher Education and Technology and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

The U.S. monitoring council--comprised of college and university presidents representing the 354 institutional members of AASCU--will spend a week with Polish education officials discussing the implementation of the agreement, which will initially concern the exchange of faculty members.

This agreement, which could eventually lead to the exchange of students, administrators, educational materials and cultural programs between the two countries was developed following an AASCU mission to Poland two years ago. Orze also headed that mission.

"The Polish university system is outstanding and provides excellent opportunities in almost all fields of interest," stated Orze, who has been a member of the AASCU board of directors since 1978.

"Faculty will be involved in the initial exchange," he said. "After that, we will discuss the development of further exchange programs which respond to the needs of the Polish universities."

During their week in Poland, the members of the monitoring council from the AASCU will visit several higher education institutions.

SGA Senator Elections Held Last Wednesday

By Beatrice Dawson

The 1982 Class Senator election, held in conjunction with the State Fair election, were voted on during a final run-off Wednesday.

Todd Eppler, a business administration and economics major from Natchitoches and Lesa Hatley, a mass communications-broadcast major from Natchitoches, were elected as freshman senators, while sophomore Kimberlee Brent, an elementary education major from Grant; and Donna Jo Kelly, from Anacoco, were elected to represent their class. The new Junior Class Senators are Dudley Hall, a business administration and computer science major from Shreveport; and Susan

Johnson, an accounting major from Houston. Seniors Dean Napoli, a business administration major from Melville; and Don Stacy, a computer science major from Natchitoches were also elected class senators. Commissioner of elections, Harlan Harvey, said that it seemed as though the weather had an affect on voter turnout because it wasn't quite as good as Homecoming election. He said that it's hard to get people out to vote but once they are out, they don't mind voting. "However," he went on, "the voting went smoothly with no flaws and I want to thank my election board which is composed of students from different organizations."

Kim Kimble Named State Fair Queen

By Beatrice Dawson

Kim Kimble, a sophomore nursing major from Alexandria, has been elected as the 1982 State Fair Queen for Northwestern's 43rd state fair anniversary. Miss Kimble was chosen by the Northwestern student body in a campus-wide election conducted Wednesday by the Student Government Association.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson D. Kimble of Alexandria, Kim is a 1981 graduate of Alexandria Senior High School. Upon entering NSU, she was awarded the Freshman Nursing Scholarship.

A member of Phi Mu Sorority, Northwestern's 1982 State Fair Queen also serves as Senator-at-Large on the SGA, as secretary of the Student Nurses Association, and as chairman of the Social Programs Committee of the SGA. She was also a member of the Student Union Governing Board Concert Committee.

In addition, eight other young ladies were also chosen to represent NSU on the 1982 State Fair Court: Kim Arthur, a sophomore-pre-professional psychology major from Florien; Susan Arthur, a freshman-journalism major from Natchitoches; Anna Cloutier, a senior-nursing major from Natchitoches; Tech.

Kim Kimble

Eileen Haynes, a sophomore-broadcast journalism major from Saline; Vera Marie LaCour, a senior-business administration major Shreveport; Dwanda Marie Smith, a junior-broadcast journalism major from Houma; Stacy Soileau, a senior-computer science major from Bossier City; and Debra Vela, a senior-nursing major from Houston.

State Fair activities will begin the week of Oct. 18 and continue through Saturday night's NSU-Tech football game. The court will be formally presented during pre-game activities in the State Fair Stadium. The game will start at 7 p.m. and will denote the 70th time NSU has played

Jonathon Kozol Opens Distinguished Lecture Series

Jonathan Kozol, a noted social activist and writer about the nation's education system, will speak tomorrow, Oct. 12, at Northwestern to open NSU's 1982-83 Distinguished Lecture Series.

Kozol's address at 9 a.m. in auditorium of John S. Kyser Hall of Arts and Sciences is entitled, "Education: Ethics or Indoctrination." His presentation is open to the public without charge. All 9:00 classes will be cancelled.

Educated at Harvard and also a Rhodes scholar at Oxford University, Kozol attracted national attention in 1968 when his first book, "Death At An Early Age," an account of classroom life in Boston, won the National Book Award.

Other major books on education by Kozol include "Alternative Schools: A Guide for Educators and Parents," which updates and expands his study of free schools; "Prisoners of Silence: Breaking the Bonds of Adult Illiteracy in the United States," a landmark publication addressing itself directly to an important American problem; "On Being A Teacher" and "The Night Is Dark and I Am Far From Home: A Political Indictment of the U.S. Public Schools."

Kozol is also well known for his book, "Children of the Revolution," which is based on his visit to Cuba in the 1970's.

"From his observations in Cuba," said Thomas N. Whitehead, chairman of NSU's Distinguished Lecture Series, "Kozol has also structured a theory of eliminating illiteracy in the U.S. within one year of implementation."

Whitehead described Kozol as "usually controversial but always thought-provoking."

"Alternative Schools: A Guide for Educators and Parents" is scheduled for nationwide distribution in November. This is a revised volume of his classic work, "Free Schools, which originally appeared in 1972.

Poland Kills Solidarity Union

Poland's Parliament formally ended its unprecedented experiment in worker democracy last Friday, voting in a near majority to ban Solidarity and to take steps to stop future unions from gaining Solidarity's national power.

Taken by a display of hands, the vote was broadcast on the state-run national television. Officials said only 10 members of the 460-seat Sejm, or Parliament, voted against the new trade union law. Nine other members abstained from voting.

The move to ban Solidarity came nearly 11 months after martial law was imposed, and the Soviet bloc's only independent labor union was suspended and most of its leaders, including Lech Walesa, were imprisoned. The martial law has been met with periodic riots and protests, and the vote was expected to provoke more of the same.

There was no immediate reaction to the vote from the Solidarity underground, hit hard by the arrest Thursday of its leader Wladyslaw Frasyniuk.

General Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Communist Party and government chief who declared martial law last December 13, applauded quietly after the Parliamentary vote. There was little visible response from the deputies.

An informed government source said Jaruzelski planned to speak Saturday when Parliament reconvenes for the last day of the session. The source added that Jaruzelski "might offer a few sweets." No other details were available.

The report brought speculation that the general might announce a further easing of martial law, but other government officials said that Jaruzelski did not intend to lift the military rule. He previously said however, that he might do so before the end of the year.

In Washington, a State department spokesman said, "We deplore the action and we're looking at our options." the Reagan Administration has made it clear that outlawing Solidarity would worsen already bad U.S.-Polish relations.

Lane Kirkland, AFL-CIO President said, "In outlawing Solidarnosc, the Polish government has broken its solemn compact with the Polish people..."

By replacing Solidarnosc with a fragment local union structure...the Polish government has laid bare its intention of depriving Poland's workers of any voice in the nation's economic and political life. It has thus taken Poland another step down the road to misery and social chaos.

It was not clear how the vote affects Walesa, the Solidarity national chairman who has been interned since martial law was declared. Many other union leaders also remained in internment, while others have been released after signing loyalty oaths.

The new law gives workers the right to strike, but restricts it severely and bans walkouts in the case of natural or economic emergencies. Unions for the military and police are not allowed and any labor organization deemed to be harboring anti-government activists would be deregistered.

Jury News

An attorney for Cathy Evelyn Smith, the woman who's believed to be the last person to have seen comedian John Belushi alive says she doesn't plan to testify before a grand jury probing the actor's death.

The grand jury is in Los Angeles, where Belushi died of a drug overdose on March 5, and Smith's lawyer, Hilton Davis, says that his client is in Toronto, where she plans to stay.

Smith was quoted in a "National Enquirer" article as saying that she gave Belushi his last drug dose. She later said that she was misquoted.

Moon Holds Big Wedding

The head of the Unification Church, Sun Myung Moon, plans to unite more than 12 thousand people into some six thousand married couples next week.

A church spokesman in Seoul, South Korea said that it will be the largest mass wedding in the history of the world, with couples from 83 nations being married, including 150 couples from the United States.

The festivities in Seoul are also going to be massive. The church spokesman says that the entire ceremony will take three days.

Film Makers Hand Over Script

Makers of the film "Twilight Zone," say that they will hand over a script and drawings sought by officials investigating the helicopter crash that killed actor Vic Morrow and two children.

A lawyer said his clients agreed to comply with the federal subpoenas after a federal judge said he would review the confidential material.

Morrow and the two children died during the filming of a Vietnam War battle scene in July, in California.

"Home" Opens Tonight

Samm-Art Williams' acclaimed romantic drama, "Home," opens tonight, Oct. 12, for four performances in the Student Union Building at Northwestern.

The University Theatre of Northwestern is presenting the play, which will continue through Friday in Room 320. Performances area at 7:30 p.m.

Nan L. Stephenson, assistant professor and director of the University Theatre, is directing "Home," which will also be NSU's entry in the Louisiana College Theatre Festival competition Oct. 20-23 in Ruston.

Vincent Williams III, senior theatre-speech major from Natchitoches, has won the lead role of Cephus Miles in the production, which deals joyfully with the coming of age of a young black man from rural South Carolina.

Williams has been nominated by Northwestern for the Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship that will be awarded at the American College Theatre Festival's Region VI competition in Ft. Worth Tex., in November. As a nominee, he will be observed and evaluated during his performance as Cephus Miles at Ruston.

Playing opposite Williams in the character roles of the two women in his past will be junior journalism majors Linda Verrett of Natchitoches and Daphne DeVerger from Many.

He notes in his latest book that "in several cities which have recently been subject to desegregation orders, the school boards have been turning to the personnel and pedagogic breakthroughs of the 'free schools' in their hectic efforts to bring more than racial equity but heightened excellence as well to the public systems."

Thus, he explains, three of the four alternative schools in Boston explored in the original volume "no longer exist, but leaders from these alternative education groups have become important figures in the public school system as a whole."

Robert and Cameron Host KNWD's "Sundries"

When they first invaded the air waves over six years ago, it was called the Bill and Neil Show and they had to hand the microphone back and forth to each other. "It was a bit more primitive surroundings then," says Neil. When they returned Wednesday evening, it was called Sundries, but it was still hosted by the same Bill and Neil. Their complete names are Bill Robert and Neil Cameron and they are English instructors at Northwestern State University.

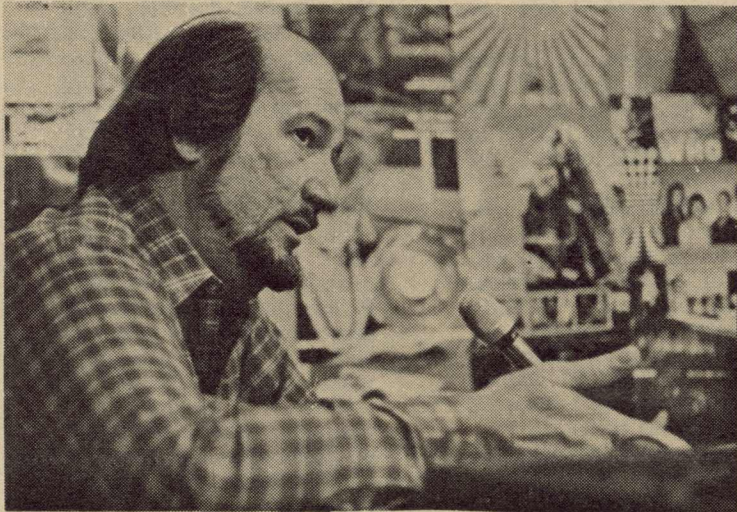

The program, called Sundries can be heard every Wednesday evening at 6:00 p.m. on KNWD and it is a 'talk' show of sorts. A general topic will be discussed and the phones will be opened up to the listening audience. The topics range from the long pay lines in the Student Union to Sex and Violets, violence being too messy. According to Robert, callers may 'call in any pertinent, legal, pithy, pointed questions or observations.' "And if the observations are interesting," added Cameron, "we may even put them over the air." "And claim them as our own," injects Robert.

They refer to the program as a resurrection of the old Bill and Neil Show, since they believe they are sitting in the same squeaky chairs. But things have changed for the better in the last six years. Instead of having a floor microphone hanging from the ceiling, they now sit comfortably across from each other with a microphone of their own; no more handing the microphone back and forth. According to KNWD Program Director Paul Rino, this makes the program flow much better. "They play off each other so well, this system makes it much more entertaining." With KNWD's new control room, not only are the hosts more comfortable, but when the listeners call in, they can be put right over the air and they're able to speak with Cameron and Robert directly.

The program is called 'Sundries' ("look it up," suggests Robert) and it can be heard every Wednesday evening at 6:00 p.m. on 91.7 KNWD. It is a general topic, audience participation program. You will be entertained.

Isn't Life Profound?

Isn't life profound? Have you ever really just laid back and watched it go by? Do you ever wonder how our environment came to be? Not just the natural environment, but the manufactured environment as well.

Have you ever just sat in your room and stared at the carpet? When you look down at your shag rug and see all those millions of little shags standing straight up; have you ever wondered why they all just don't fall down, or at least lean over? It's mind boggling.

What about your plastic alarm clock/radio? Where does the plastic come from? Of course, rubber bands come from rubber trees, but have you ever seen a plastic tree?

And speaking of your radio, how does that little box that sits beside your bed, with no antennae, pick up sounds from Shreveport and Alexandria? Isn't it amazing that radio waves can pass undetected (by the human ear) through our body while a small plastic box with no ears can not only pick it up, but transfer it back to us?

Have you ever thought about pictures? They are very intriguing. I've often wondered how I can just be engaging in normal life functions and someone with another plastic box with a round glass lens protruding out can take my picture, and suddenly—whatever I was doing at the time is transferred to paper. You can be running down the street, life passing on either side of you, and somebody snaps a picture, and...POOF!, an instant in time, one microsecond in the legions of eternity, is stopped, and preserved forever. Incredible.

And speaking of instances in time being preserved, how about that human brain. Volumes and volumes have been written about the human brain. But still, no one can understand it.

When a thought goes through your brain, what does it look like? What makes you see or hear a particular thing once, and remember it all of your life? And by the same token, why can you study the same thing over and over and over and still not remember it the next day?

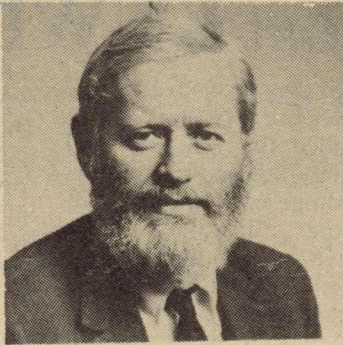

How can the brain store up so much information? Think of all the things that you know. We build computers that are now capable of storing a million bits of information. Think about what you know. Think about the experiences that you have had. If you were to recite all of them, it would take you years.

What makes one person smarter than another? Our brains are basically the same size. How come your I.Q. is 210 and mine is 77? What makes you so smart?

And another thing. When people say that someone has a lot of nerve; I've always wondered what nerve actually is. What is nerve? Is it tangible? Obviously not. The last time that I walked through the Biology Building they didn't have any pickled nerve. They had pickled snakes, pickled frogs, and pickled bugs, but no pickled nerve. Why do some people have a lot of nerve and some people have virtually none at all?

Isn't it amazing what kind of things that you can think about and wonder about if you would just stretch your brain and your imagination little bit? Isn't life profound?

Censorship Is An Unhealthy Thing

John Hess is a syndicated columnist of the United Feature Syndicate

"Without censorship, things can get terribly confused in the public mind."

Gen. William Westmoreland

I'd like to write a column about R-p-t-r magazine, but, frankly, I've lost my nerve.

What brought it up was an item in the New York Times about the naming of a new director for Radio Liberty in Munich, which used to be run by the CIA.

It said this fellow G--- B---, once an intelligence officer during the war, was editor of R-p-t-r magazine, which it said "secretly accepted CIA money for several years before it closed in 1968." Of course, the Times spelled the names out, but I don't dare.

The very next day, the Times ran a correction. It said it wasn't true that the CIA subsidized that magazine. It did not say how it could be so sure.

R-p-t-r was a lively magazine, which published investigative pieces on domestic affairs — I wrote a few of them myself — and also heavy cold war stuff from abroad. Its Paris and Rome correspondents — E-m-d T---l-r and Cl-r-r St-l-g — lived well and kept things chilly indeed. Cl-r-r is still scaring the heck out of us these days with her theme that all terror comes from Moscow.

In its last years, one I-v-g K-st-l transferred from Encounter magazine in London, which was a CIA progeny, to be editor of R-p-t-r. But the magazine folded. Coincidentally, this occurred shortly after revelations about CIA activities on the cultural front. I-v-g went on to become a guru of the superhawk set.

The idea has got around over the years that R-p-t-r was a CIA front — hence, the Times's boo-boo. This would be interesting to explore, because the magazine was propagandizing Americans. It would be one more case where our intelligence service was manipulating the news and interfering in our domestic politics.

But I don't dare say any more because a new law promoted by President Reagan makes it a crime to name an undercover agent. And Lord knows what other violations I might commit.

Even if I should escape that peril, there is the threat of libel action. Not that I'd libel anybody, but somebody might think I had.

Consider the $120 million suit filed by Gen. Westmoreland against CBS, in Greenville, S.C. I guess Westmoreland is more popular than Mike Wallace in Greenville.

It's about the Vietnam war. Through all history, no general ever lost a war, and this one is no exception. He won the war, but the media and politicians threw it away. That's his story.

A CBS special said no, the brass lied about how the war was going. Nothing new about that, but CBS went further: It said the brass lied to President Johnson, too.

In truth, I don't think that's so important, but Westmoreland thinks it's worth $120 million. Although CBS offered him 15 minutes of prime time to reply, he insists on cash, as matter of salutary discipline.

Considering the behavior of the courts in recent cases, I wouldn't bet he'll lose. Some judges, among them Chief Justice Warren Burger, just don't like the media.

Some juries feel the same way. The verdict against the Washington Post in the Mobil case made no sense at all, except as a confused slap at the messenger who brings so much bad news.

CBS sticks to the main point of its story, though it admits it was sloppy to some degree. But even if it wins, its defense will cost it plenty. More than I could afford, so I'm laying off saying anything that might offend anybody who has the price of a lawyer.

Which is a form of censorship, you might say. But as Westmoreland put it, without censorship, things can get terribly confused in the public mind.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

With regards to the Fair Nominees (Current Sauce, October 5), Commissioner of Elections, Harlan Harvey, should be commended for conducting this election without incident or controversy. This is a rare event indeed.

As I recall, past commissioners have been accused of everything from nepotism to racism, not to mention being accused of bias and ballot stuffing. Current Sauce stories revealed in details of scandal, incompetence, and rule interpretations suited to the morals of whoever was in office.

Apparently Mr. Harvey has transcended all that. Or else the Current Sauce has. Whichever, rumors and innuendoes persist. Perhaps the Current Sauce could separate fact from fiction in the popular talk of KNWD's State Fair Nominee not making last Wednesday's ballot. I'm curious. Is this true? KNWD sponsored somebody? The same rumor has it that he did receive enough nominations to make the court.

Assuming this is true and Gary Meinhart willing, what's the scoop? The potential implications are quite grave or quite humorous. Like, how might this relate to equal opportunity and sex discrimination? Or the other nominees? Or Southern macho idealism?

In matters of this import, surely a story, if not a laugh or two, exists. By sponsoring a male nominee, KNWD has stepped forward with a display (albeit humorous) of student involvement not usually seen in these times of student apathy. Perhaps Harlan Harvey should commend them.

Sincerely,
Dave Stroud

Mr. Stroud;

The rumor about Mr. Meinhart is indeed quite humorous, nay, hilarious. To my knowledge, there has neither been a confirmation or denial about the nominations, except to say that Mr. Meinhart's name did appear at least once.

However, this is all totally irrelevant since the NSU election code specifically states that to be on the State fair Court (or the Homecoming Court) the candidates must be regularly enrolled women students at NSU.

I applaud KNWD for their attempt at curbing some of the student apathy. The idea was novel, to say the least. But could you really imagine one of our SGA members, for instance, Dean Napoli, escorting Mr. Meinhart across midfield at Independence Stadium? To say the least, it would put NSU on the map, but which map?

The Anatomy of A Research Proposal, or Hey, Mom, Why Are You Still In School?

By: Madge Autumns

The Great Halls of Learning beckoned and she came running—not at a fast “clip” perhaps, but with unmatched enthusiasm. Returning to school was exhilarating and everything was coming up violets (or is it roses?).

After the long, hot summer the degree of zest lessened somewhat. She blamed it on the positive ions in the air. Psychomotor skills diminished considerably, and sometimes even the cognitive skills refused to “cog.” (Yes, Virgil, there is such a word. Webster's Third New International says so with nine definitions.)

A month's vacation or respite—depending upon who is reading—and she rushed back “on hobnailed boots.” (Hunter: 8) She would learn how to do a research proposal!

She marveled at the tremendous undertaking.

The potential researcher, between bouts of differentiating among concepts, constructs, and variables, began gathering precious information for the study. Everything she read propelled her on toward more and more exciting literature. She could no longer stop reading and once had to be coaxed out of her favorite niche by the stacks of dissertations at library closing time. Piles of books, journals, and other sources accumulated on the desk, under the desk, and clothed her room from wall to wall.

And so it came to pass after many days (and nights), she was seeking information on educational tests and measurements. The entry referred the reader to (1) avaluation, (2) examinations, (3) marking systems, (4) statistical methods, and (5) tests and scales.

She proceeded dutifully “evaluation” which directed her to four other entries including “education-evaluation!” Randomly selecting “rating scales,” the reader, upon reaching that entry, was referred to (1) observation of teaching-tests and scales, (2) self evaluation (sic), and (3) teacher rating scales.

Nearing collapse but not ruled by obsession, the reader tired “teacher rating scales,” which AGAIN directed her to “observation of teaching-tests and scales.”

No believer of the “He also serves who only stands and waits” philosophy (Milton: 13), she attacked the page bearing the entry, “observation of teaching. . . .” There was no definition, no “see also”; there was only a blank space.

In “quiet desperation,” (Thoreau: 30), she approached the reference librarian and requested an explanation for this “unnatural” phenomenon. The knowledgeable lady told her that “all descriptors do not necessarily supply reading information, but perhaps by referring to . . .” she would encounter that for which she was looking.

All of this and she had not yet begun writing Chapter Two.

Footnote: The writer acknowledges the importance of the bibliography for substantiating quotes but is unable to furnish one at this particular time (and will not do so even at a later date except under duress). The rough draft was somehow forgotten at home last weekend as a marker in one of her recipe books.

Draft Registrars See Registration Failing

Draft registration isn't working, according to some of the non-registrants undergoing or awaiting prosecution. “The Government...can't possibly prosecute us all,” said Benjamin H. Sasway of Vista, Calif. Sasway was the first indicted for non-registration, and the second to be prosecuted.

“The trials are just a desperate move to intimidate people into turning themselves in and compromising their moral and religious beliefs,” said Russell Martin, another draft resister, who was registered against his will by a U.S. attorney in Iowa. “A few people are being crucified by an agency that refuses to admit defeat.”

The General Accounting Office's latest figures show over 700,000 non-registrants. This is more than 20 times the entire population of Federal prisons. The overall compliance rate with registration is 93 percent, according to Selective Service. This is well below the 98 percent Selective officials have said must be reached for the system to be considered fair and effective. Even at the height of the Vietnam war, compliance with draft registration never fell below 98 percent.

The current prosecutions will raise the issue of illegal selective prosecution, said Martin. “I'm going to be prosecuted not because I didn't register for the draft, but because I publicly pointed out the failure of the program and the aggressive foreign policy behind it,” he said. Martin was re-elected this spring as student body president of the University of Northern Iowa, in Cedar Falls.

“(Draft registration) is a political law designed to force people into supporting policies that they would not support otherwise. It has nothing to do with national security,” said Martin. “Non-registration forces a debate on foreign policy.”

Other non-registrants agree. For them, non-registration is an act of conscience. “Draft registration is preparation for war,” said Russell F. Ford, who was imprisoned before his trial when he refused bail. “I am not willing to sign my life over to the Government that brought us Vietnam, Watergate and the Trident submarine.”

I am not willing to withhold my protest...until the nuclear arms race has reached its logical conclusion in a nuclear holocaust...I am defending a view that wars, like poverty and prison, are neither necessary nor inevitable. They transgress the human spirit and ought to be abolished,” he said.

Letter...

Dear Editor:

I would like to respond to the letter last week concerning the Demon mascot. I feel the Demon is a very entertaining character and his duty is to entertain the bored fans during halftime.

To the very few persons who were offended by the actions of the Demon mascot, I would like to extend my sincere regrets. On the other hand, to the many who have enjoyed the performance of the Demon mascot, be looking for more unusual, unexpected, and most of all, entertaining actions.

I have narrowed the complaint of the angry student down to just a pure case of jealousy. I feel the complaint was supported by few and was childish.

The Great Demon Mascot

Drunk Driving Worse Than Ever

David Gunderman, four years old, was run over as he stood on the sidewalk waiting for an ice cream. His killer, who had eight prior convictions ranging from hit and run to drunk driving, was sentenced to five years in prison.

Paul Lawler, fifteen years old, was crushed against a wall when a drunk drove off the highway. His killer was on probation after three prior drunk convictions and is eligible for parole in July after serving two years in prison.

September 30, 1982, two Shreveport residents were killed in a car accident on Highway 1 South outside of Natchez. Mr. and Mrs. David Merriman were hit head on by a Lafayette woman whose truck crossed the center line of the highway. The woman, who is in critical condition in an Alexandria hospital, was charged with two counts of negligent homicide and D.W.I. Mr. Merriman had just retired and the couple had started on a vacation.

In the last two years more Americans have been killed by drunk drivers than were killed in the Vietnam War. On the average at least three Americans are fatally injured and eighty are injured by drunk drivers every hour of the day. Safety experts claim that one out of two Americans will be victimized by a drunk driver every hour of the day. Safety experts claim that one out of two Americans will be victimized by a drunk driver in his lifetime. This is hardly surprising when the NHTSA (National Highway Traffic Safety Administration) contends that up to ten percent of all drivers on weekend nights are legally intoxicated.

Undoubtedly, you are thinking to yourself that this has nothing to do with me or Natchitoches. Think again. The next time you are out on the highway and want to party, remember the fine in Natchitoches for D.W.I. is $398.50 and two days in jail or four days public service. It has also been proven that alcohol is a major factor in three fourths of the traffic accidents and fatalities in Natchitoches Parish.

Alcohol is a major epidemic and Americans are outraged and want to put and end to this carnage. Already, twenty-seven state legislatures have passed their own version of the toughest drunk-driving bills in the nation and more legislation is pending in others. Furthermore, twenty states have boosted the legal drinking age to twenty-one.

SUGB Positions Filled

Highlighting the October 4th meeting of the Student Union Governing Board was the election of the Director of the Lady of the Bracelet committee, Representative At Large. Fine Arts Chairman, Second Vice President, and the appointment of a new Program Editor.

June Johnson was elected the new Lady of the Bracelet Director, Dwanda Smith was chosen as the new Representative At Large, interim Fine Arts Chairman, Lisa Williams was elected to remain in that position, as was interim Floyd James, who will remain as Second Vice President. Deanna Grau was appointed by President Alicia Haynes as new Program Director.

It was also announced that the opinion poll run in the Current Sauce revealed that students would be willing to pay a small admission fee to see a concert, if the concerts were "big name" artists. Some of the suggested performers were Alabama, Statler Brothers, Rick James and the Gap Band.

Floyd James announced that the non-student ticket price for the Ronnie Milsap concert would be $10 in advance and $13 at the door. Students will set in free with their NSU ID, but they must go by and pick up their ticket in the office of the Director of the Student Union.

On November 3, the SUGB will sponsor a disco. Deacon Jones will provide the music. It will start at 8:00 in the Student Ballroom. NSU students will be admitted for no charge with I.D.

When You're A Mother, Returning To School Is Like One Big Juggling Act

"When you get married and say your wedding vows, there's no guarantee that says your husband is going to live forever. My husband had a heart attack in 1980," says Mrs. Beth Montano, a native of Fisher, Louisiana, and a first semester sophomore majoring in Nursing. "I realized then I couldn't put the kids through school."

"When he was sick, we talked about my coming back to school. With a college degree, I could support the family if someday he was incapable of working, and if I never even used my degree, it would still be there for me."

Beth chose to pursue a degree in nursing because "it is a field where there will always be a need. I was already a registered EMT (Emergency Medical Technician). I didn't realize my husband would be my first patient."

Entering college for the first time is a confusing enough experience for a student just out of high school, but it is even more so confusing if one has been out of high school for 18 years.

"I had this complex when I entered. Are the younger kids going to accept this older woman coming back to school? I was really paranoid," she admits. She found that the students did not resent her at all. In fact there was a learning experience between the two age groups. She has helped students in classes in which she was more familiar "like Psychology and Sociology. Since I'm older and have been around longer, I understand the different types of people and their behaviors. They helped me in areas where I was unfamiliar--like math."

She claims her real embarrassment came, however, when she asked her son to help her with her homework. "That's the ultimate crush," she laughs. "He knew a bunch of shortcuts that they didn't teach over here."

Being a wife, mother of two, and a college student is "like one big juggling act," according to Beth Montano. "You have to be careful so you don't get bogged down with school and forget your number one priority, which is your family." Her oldest son is a freshman at Florien High School and is on the band and the basketball team, so there are "games and parades I have to go to. There will be a game one night and a big test the next day. You ask yourself: do I go to the game or stay home and study?"

Household duties become community property. Whoever gets to the washer first loads it up. We have a system of equal rights. My dishwasher does not say: For Female Hands Only," she says. "Everybody pitches in -- whoever gets home first starts dinner." Even the first grader is taught to pick up her clothes and make her bed.

"You know how in Orientation 101 they tell you the best environment for studying. It would literally blow their minds if they knew that I study while loading the washer, defrosting the refrigerator, and listening to my child say her ABC's while another child is practicing his trombone and Daddy is watching a baseball game."

IRS Assists In Registration

The Internal Revenue Service is helping Service to enforce registration. In mid-August, IRS mailed warning letters to an initial 33,000 suspected non-registrants born in 1963, said Roscoe L. Egger Jr., Commissioner of Internal Revenue. These names were drawn from a list of 250,000 names IRS found by checking its files with Selective Service lists of non-registrants. Egger said IRS planned to mail notices to the others, and later provide up to 200 names to Selective Service. These, he said, "will be selected on a random basis" from those who fail to register after receiving warnings mailed by IRS.

Potpourri Staff Accepting Pictures For Student Gallery

Deadline for submitting pictures is Nov. 26, according to Ed Dupuis, editor.

The photos submitted for possible publication "must be black-and-white of high quality and artistically pleasing, size 3x5 inches or 5x7 inches. Of course, they also must be acceptable editorially as part of the book, too," Dupuis said.

He said the photos must be turned in to him in the POTPOURRI office, Room 227, Kyser Hall, along with pertinent information such as the owner's name and address, and the name of the person who shot the picture.

"We will give credit in the book for each of the students' photos that we use," Dupuis said.

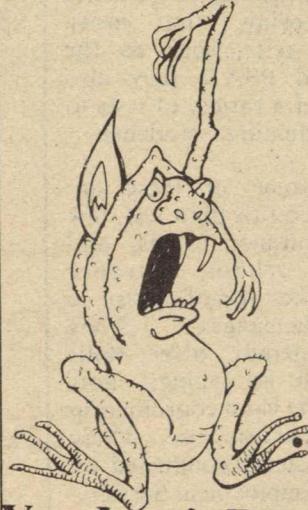

The POTPOURRI cannot guarantee return of the photographs, whether they are used in the book or not, the editor said.

From the Registrar's Office...

1. The repeat rule is effective starting in the spring semester. This rule means that the second grade will count as the final grade. On your transcript, a line will be typed through the course that has been repeated and a "R" will be placed in the left margin by the course.
2. If a student fails to satisfactorily complete a developmental course in 3 attempts, the student will be permanently suspended from NSU. (Reading 98-99-100; Math 100; English)
3. When a Freshman or Sophomore receives excessive unexcused absences (10% of total classes) the instructor may recommend to the student's academic dean that the student be withdrawn from the rolls of that class and given the appropriate grade. (10% of MWF classes 5 days absent, and 10% of T-Th classes is 3 days absent)

Dear Students:

Below are the new standards for "good standing and satisfactory progress" effective Fall 1982 for continued receipt of financial assistance at NSU.

A student must have an overall 2.00 GPA in the four major subjects (English, Math, Social Science, and Social Studies) in order to be in "Good Academic Standing" to qualify for financial assistance as a Freshman. To continue receiving financial assistance a student must make satisfactory academic progress. This calls for a student to maintain a 1.50 GPA the first year in college. The second year a student must maintain a 1.75 GPA. After the second year the student must maintain a 2.00 GPA to continue receiving financial assistance. If a student fails to maintain the required GPA (in order to continue receiving financial assistance), he or she will not receive financial assistance for the following semester. The student must make a 2.00 GPA and enroll in the same number of hours as the previous semester in order to make satisfactory progress and receive financial assistance the following semester.

Transfer Students

Transfer students are required to comply with the above standards of satisfactory progress in order to receive financial assistance at NSU.

Time Limits on Financial Aid Eligibility

A student may receive financial aid for a maximum of five years (10 semesters) in order to complete a four year degree program.

Dr. Robert Lee

Dr. Robert Lee

Gives Free Help

"We teach our students to play games, to have fun, and we educate them, but we do nothing to help them to cope with reality," says Dr. Robert C. Lee, director of Counseling and Testing.

"The previous administration didn't deal with the psychological well-being of the students because they had other priorities and they didn't care," he added.

Dr. Lee came to Northwestern in 1976. NSU had what he was looking for; testing service, counseling, administrative work and a chance for growth. Dr. Lee is a licensed psychologist having gotten his PhD. from the University of Wyoming.

When he came here there were two other counselors, some graduate assistants and some counselors in the dorms. He is not the only counselor here other than a few in the dorms.

The Counseling and Testing Department located in Room 101 in Caldwell Hall, offers a variety of services. Besides administering the more common tests, such as the ACT and PSAT, they also administer a variety of tests to aid graduating students.

Among some of these are Teacher Certification test, law school entrance exams, and medical school entrance exams. They also offer tests in foreign languages... They don't generally offer skills tests such as typing, short hand or the hand coordination test that factories use. These test are usually conducted by the U.S. Employment Service.

Some of the counseling services they offer are for stress, anxiety, personal problems, test anxiety, depression, attitudes, and career choices. They can help you in almost any problem you might have though.

Roger's Voice

By Roger Reynolds

Dr. Joseph Orze began this week accepting applications for the position of head coach for the 1983 season. Current members of the Demon staff were also encouraged to apply for the post.

The university's council will do the screening of applicants, interview the finalists and submit a recommendation on filling the job. All this should be done by late November, when a new Head coach is expected to be appointed. The NSU President stated, 'This will enable the new coach and his staff to conduct a successful recruiting program before the February signing date.'

Orze also stated, 'Current staff members applications will be seriously considered. The NSU President recognizes the advantages of selecting a head coach from within the system. The main advantage is, the coach will already know the talent he has returning for next year.

He said, 'Because our goal in football is superiority, we will seek a superior head coach, and the only way to determine which of the nation's outstanding coaches might be available for the position is to accept applications.'

Orze also said, 'It is comforting to realize that there are highly-qualified assistants on our own staff who could probably meet our goals and standards.'

When asked about the position of Athletic Director and head coach, Orze said, 'will be separated, but the immediate concern is for the head coaching job, so he can assume the position at the end of the season.'

Cowboys Ease By Demons 22-11

McNeese Cowboys took the measure of the Demons this week by a 21-11 score. The Cowboys were lead by freshmen tailback Flip Johnson, who carried the ball 11 times for 95 yards and one touchdown. McNeese's best back Butch Jordan carried the ball 17 times for 86 yards and two touchdowns. The Cowboys rushing game penetrated the Demon defense for 280 yards rushing and quarterback Stephen Starring had six completions on eleven attempts with one interception for 71 yards passing.

The Demon offense sputtered all night long, as all three Demon quarterbacks played and combined for a total of 283 yards on 52 attempts with 22 completions and two interceptions for one touchdown. NSU's rushing game was held in check, picking up a minus eight yards on 22 attempts. This includes a 19 yard centersnap over punter Leo Clement's head. The Demon game plan for this week was to pass the ball, but either NSU receivers could not hold on to the ball or the quarterbacks could not get the ball to them.

The only bright spot for the Demon's all night was the running back of kickoffs and punt returns by speedster Roy Fontenot, who had three kickoff returns for 102 yards. Roy put the Demon's on their 40 yard line, three times with kickoff and punt returns, but NSU failed to move the ball.

Head Coach A. L. Williams was quoted after the game, 'McNeese beat us. No excuses, our defense was not aggressive enough, also we had poor tackling techniques and the kicking game needs improvement.' Coach Hubert Boale's said about the Cowboy victory, 'It was a good team victory. The team worked together to do what they had to do.' The Demons record now goes to 4-2 while McNeese's record is 2-4. Northwestern plays Alcorn State at home this week. NOTE: The Demons go a win, when Angelo State had to forfeit because of an illegal player. (See related story)

Demon Playground

The flag-football season got underway two weeks ago with teams competing in four divisions.

The women got started as UnKappa 5th number one beat Tri-Sig 13-0 thanks to 65 yard touchdown run by Laura Waguespack. In the second game of the day U.K. 5th number two had to go into overtime to take a 14-6 victory over Phi Mu. The game was tied 6-6 after regulation time had expired. Angela Lasyone scored the only Phi Mu touchdown, while Tuandra Lewis scored both U.K. T.D.s.

Zoom took a close 18-12 win from Kingpins with a two-touchdown effort from Gerald Burton to zoom off with a 1-0 record. James Davis scored three T.D.s to lead the Jocks to a lopsided 34-0 win over BSU.

Kappa Sig's number one team beat Theta Chi 25-6 as Mike Brown scored two touchdowns while Scott Sledge and Randy Bonnette contributed one apiece.

The next day the Sig Dog's number two team took a narrow 7-6 victory away from TKE. The Sigs took a 7-0 lead in the first half on a Tod Klotzback touchdown and a Steve Allen extra point catch, before TKE attempted to come back with a score by Pete Adams, but fell short when the point after failed.

Yang's first team took the field against Rapides Knights and trounced them 39-0. Yang used a real team effort as Donny Harrison, Steve Roe, Joe Bienvenu, Joe Cunningham, Robert Delrie, and Dean Napoli all scored touchdowns.

Conine scored with 12 seconds left on Bobby Waddell's second T.D. of the

Demons Add Win

The Northwestern 1982 football record improved to 4-1 on the season last Wednesday afternoon when Angelo State announced that it forfeit its 26-17 win over the Demons.

The Rams were forced to forfeit their first two games of the season after discovering that an ineligible player was used in the first two games of the season. The player did not play in the non-conference win over Alcorn State.

Lone Star Conference President Gerald Robins made the announcement, saying that defensive tackle Mark Baker did not fulfill the Lone Star Conference gradepoint requirement. The announcement came after Angelo State reported the incident to the conference office while preparing its conference eligibility list.

'My reaction is the same as it was when we walked off the field after that game,' said Northwestern State Coach A.L. Williams. 'We got beat. I think it would be different if it was a conference game, or even if it would make our record 5-0. But we did not win the football game on the field and that's what our players have to look at.'

Demon's Host Alcorn

The Alcorn State Braves move into Turpin Stadium this weekend to play the Demons.

Alcorn will be coming off a close game with Tennessee State in which they won. The Braves will be playing without the services of their top quarterback. Alcorn is known for its huge physical size and strength.

Northwestern comes into the game after a very poor showing against the Cowboys of McNeese State in Lake Charles. The Demons should have all three quarterbacks for this weeks game. NSU brings into this game a strong passing attack, but a rushing game that is suspect at this time. Maybe this week against the Braves the defense and offense can put their games together and get ready for the State Fair contest, next weekend against arch-rival Louisiana Tech.

More Demon Playground

day to take a 13-12 triumph over Brotherhood. East Rapides also took a 13-12 decision over 10 Blind Boys thanks to scores by both Dave Smith and Darryl LaCaze.

Susan Prince scored twice to lead VIPs to a 27-0 routing of Chic Jeans. Melanie Moore chalked up two T.D.s as Odyssey defeated Sigma Kappa 13-12. On Thursday; however, Odyssey fell at the hands of U.K. 5th number two 44-6. Stephany Washington's four touchdowns enabled U.K. to raise their record to 2-0. Tri-Sig scored twice to take a 12-6 decision from Chic Jeans. Phi Mu dropped to 0-2 on the season as U.K. 5th number one drilled the Ladybugs 58-6. Julie Cassell paced U.K. with five T.D.s.

KA took a 21-12 victory over Theta Chi as Neil Evans lead the way with two touchdowns. The Sig's first team increased their record to 2-0 as they got the best of TKE 40-13. Again Mike Brown paved the way for the Sig Dogs as he scored three times. Jeff Lechman, Randy Bonnette, and David Webb each added a touchdown to help in the cause.

In other action, Walter Pinkston propelled the Steelers past Yang Two 3-6. Theta Chi got their first win as they came back from a 7-0 deficit to beat Kappa Sig number two in overtime 21-20. The score was tied 13-13 at the end of regulation. The Sigs got first ball in the overtime period and scored on four plays, but it took Theta Chi only one play to score the deciding point.

The Sig's first team; however, had no problems in their contest as they crushed Sig Tau 51-0. For the third time in as many games, Brown lead all scorers with three T.D.s. David Deville had two T.D.s, while Roger Reynolds and Jeff Lechman added one apiece. In other games, 10 Blind Boys came out on top of Rapides Knights 14-13. Brotherhood fell for the second time as the Jocks took an 18-12 triumph.

In the women's division, Lynn Clary scored twice to guide Phi Mu to a 20-6 conquest over Chic Jeans. Tandra Lewis contributed 22 points, and Stephany Washington added 12 as U.K. 5th whipped VIPs 36-12.

On Thursday the Rapides Knights took a 39-12 decision over Kingpins, thanks to a 19 point performance by John George. Yang used a strong second half performance which saw them score 29 points to destroy 10 Blind Boys 35-0. Joe Cunningham paced all scorers in the contest with 14 points.

Porker Picker Panel Disbanded, Rebanded, In Same Week

For the second week in a row, the regular members of the Current Sauce Porker Picker Panel failed miserably in selecting games for the week.

Not a single regular member managed to stay even in his (or her) picks, and the only panelist to break .500 was guest selector Dwanda Smith. Dwanda had a 6-4 record for the week to win an all expense paid trip, furnished by the SGA, to the power plant.

The records were so bad last week that sports Editor Roger Reynolds refused to disclose the results at his weekly press conference following the SGA meeting last night, until he had time to "officially" check them. The SGA, ever mindful of truth in reporting, demanded that Reynold's disclose the records of the panelists.

Reynold's protested on the grounds that by publishing the final results of the ten games played last week, irreparable damage would be done to the already sparkling image of the Current Sauce. This comment brought a loud round of laughter, sprinkled with little applause from the partisan crowd of senators.

Joe Cunningham, the only returning letterman on the P.P. staff, announced a practice pick for this Thursday after his Sociology class. The staff will predict high school games for next week.

John Cunningham announced that he would not stoop so low as to predict high school games. Cunningham said that he finished predicting high school games in his senior year at Natchitoches-Central, when he finished tied for first with a sterling 34-76 record.

Alison Breazeale, who has lingered almost near the top for most of the year, said absolutely nothing all week to anybody. She cited laryngitis as the reason for her silence.

At least, that's what she said.

This week, the P.P. staff has three new and seemingly intelligent members of the NSU student body picking games. Among them is Vera LaCour who was recently elected to the State Far Court. Also picking is Larry Hall the SGA treasurer who promised to appropriate some funds for the P.P. panel should he win this week's picks. And finally, Mark "Kingin" Thigpen, the only man to successfully ruin an independent organization, the year after it won the all-campus championship.

Caldwell Hall Destroyed In Late Night Blaze

A devastating fire, apparently starting somewhere in the basement of Caldwell Hall late last night, leveled the building that had been standing since 1912.

Fire engines from all over the parish were called in to fight the fire which started at about 10:15. Firefighters battled futilely for hours, against the never ending blaze that destroyed several hundred thousand dollars worth of personal belongings, records, memories, and history.

One fireman was taken to the Natchitoches Parish Hospital shortly after arriving on the scene, the victim of smoke inhalation. The fireman was not believed to have been seriously injured.

At one point an obviously nervous and scared crowd who were within 200 feet of the blaze, shouted frantically at a fireman who seemed engulfed in the blaze from the top of his truck. Screams of "get him out of there" however, were lost in the roaring fury. A minute or two later, the fire truck was pulled back from the blaze, and with it, the fireman who was still pouring water on top of the building.

The fire engine acted just in time, when, not more than two minutes later, a large chunk of the building collapsed, right where the firemen and the fire truck had been only moments before.

After determining that the building was going to be completely lost, firemen turned their attention to saving the historical columns. Firemen sat on the ground with the hose pointed toward the columns and continued a steady spray. As of press time, the columns appeared to be safe.

The loss to the school and the students was a devastating one, but perhaps even more devastating was the personal loss that so many teachers and administrators felt. Personal records, plaques, awards, and personal libraries, worth thousands of dollars in a strictly monetary sense and priceless in the personal sense, were gone in a short amount of time. There wasn't time to save anything. One report stated that $100 thousand worth of baby grand pianos were lost in the fire. Ironically, those pianos were scheduled to be moved today.

Another irony is that the only things left standing by Caldwell in the aftermath of the fire were the historical three columns, which were the only survivors of a fire that destroyed Caldwell Mansion in the early 1900's.

According officials at the fire, the blaze probably either started in the west end basement or the center basement. When the fires reached the top of the building, a south wind may have saved Warren Easton elementary school from being the second victim in the blaze.

Sheriff Norm Fletcher complimented the actions of the students saying that they acted very well, and didn't pose any hazard to the firemen.

NSU Gets Red Measles Scare

By Lisa Williams

State Health Department officials from across the state buzzed Northwestern, La, Tech, and LSU in an effort to halt a potential Red Measles epidemic that threatened NSU last week. As of press time, the problem has apparently died and the threat of spread of Red Measles is all but gone.

A Baylor University girl, subjected to, and eventually contracting Red Measles had contact with most of the members of Phi Mu sorority at an October 1 "Big Sis-Little Sis" retreat just outside of Natchitoches. The girl, a former resident of Natchitoches, and now a student in Waco, Texas, was in town visiting friends at the time.

When she returned to Baylor, she became sick with a case of Red Measles, and it was at this point that all the local attention came to light. State Health Department officials called people in Natchitoches and determined exactly who had been exposed to the girl. Twenty-six members of Phi Mu were asked to return home on October 11 because of their exposure. Several other NSU students, as well as one from La. Tech and LSU were also contacted by the Health Department and urged to "get home."

According to Dorsey Wilmarth, editor of Baylor's campus newspaper, THE LARIAT, an epidemic of Red Measles has been at Baylor since around September 18. The disease is believed to have been brought to Baylor by a student who was a missionary in the Honduras this summer.

When the news of the Baylor coed's illness reached the Health Department officials, they immediately reached the Phi Mu's and had members sign a list at their October 10 meeting, stating "whether or not they were at the retreat and if they talked to the girl (the Baylor student)", according to Deanna Grau, an NSU Phi Mu.

Deana added, "The list went to the Natchitoches Health Unit who checked the student's records and those who had not received Measles inoculations were asked to 'not go to class-- leave town until Monday, which was October 18 (yesterday).'"

Some students who had received the Red Measles inoculation were still asked to leave campus, however. According to NSU Registrar, Dr. Austin Temple, "The problem with this is that some students were inoculated before their first birthdays. Three or four years later, doctors found that that shot was not effective when given to children under one year old."

Temple said that there were four categories of Phi Mu's-- those who had only been inoculated before their first birthday, those inoculated after their first birthdays, those who have not been inoculated at all, and those who have previously had Red Measles."

An LSU student had a date with the girl on the night after the Phi Mu retreat, and a Tech student, as well as several other, NSU students, were around the couple most of the night. The LSU student, and the Tech student were determined not to be susceptible to the Red Measles and after initially being asked to leave the school, the LSU student was quickly reinstated.

Since the first outbreak of measles at Baylor, 5,800 students out of an approximate total of 10,500 have been inoculated. Wilmarth said that inoculation units had been set at various points around campus to make inoculations more easily accessible. As of October 5, Dorsey said, there had been "26 confirmed cases of Red Measles, 28 suspected cases, and 21 probable cases."

There were also a few cases reported in nearby community colleges and three cases in high

Abortion Discount Cause Problems

The United Telephone Co. last Thursday said it regretted issuing Yellow Page directories containing a coupon entitling the bearer to a $25 price reduction for an abortion at a Lima medical clinic.

"It has been embarrassing to us," said United's communications manager, John Landsberg. "We've learned a valuable lesson. We apologize to any customers who were offended."

The abortion coupon was among several coupons contained in the directories, distributed to 55,000 customers in the Allen County area.

school districts. There have been no cases reported by any other schools in the Southwest Conference, of which Baylor is a member, thus voiding speculation that exposure to the measles at football games would lead to other outbreaks.

Wilmarth also said that the Baylor epidemic was appearing to be getting "under control".

The epidemic that caught Baylor by surprise, has been virtually prevented here at NSU. According to Temple, Red Measles is "pretty serious with young adults." Red Measles makes a person susceptible to other diseases like encephalitis.

Jo Hargis, a nurse at the Natchitoches Health Unit said that Red Measles is contracted from a carrier "during the incubation period, which lasts from seven to 14 days." The disease is not contracted from someone who already shows symptoms of the disease, "high fever, rashes, and feeling quite sick," Nurse Hargis said.

As of this writing, no NSU students have come down with Red Measles. The students who were asked to leave school should all have returned yesterday (Monday) which was a full 18 days after their initial exposure to the disease.

"The girls were very cooperative," Dr. Temple said, and he added, "We've contacted all of their instructors and they won't miss any classes."

Unemployment Up, Hope For Jobs Down

Some of the furor over the latest unemployment figures has died down, but the fact remains: more than 11 million eligible workers can't find jobs.

The situation may seem bleak, at best, but it's far from hopeless, at least according to Richard Hill, a spokesman for the National Association of Personnel Consultants.

To those people who are unemployed, Hill says there are unfilled jobs available right now. Most of these jobs are tucked away in the classified ads. The problem is, he says, finding the right job, and the person whose skills match it.

Finding a job today is definitely not the way it used to be. Workers may have to settle for a pay cut, learn new skills, or to enter a new work field all together.

Hill says all workers, especially those now unemployed, should consider training for jobs that will be needed in the future. For unskilled workers, one area to look into might be computer maintenance. College students should consider engineering.

Hill recommends looking toward the future. You must try to get by today, while training for better times down the road.

Losing a job, Hill says, is much like losing a relative. There are certain stages to go through, depression, anger, denial. He recommends getting through all that as quickly as possible.

And, to the jobless, he urges that when you do begin the process of finding work, make sure you realize the hunt is going to take some time. It could take two or three months, or more, to find desirable employment.

HOME Reviewed

The production "HOME" opened night in the Student Union with great success.

Vincent Williams III, a senior theatre-speech major from Natchitoches did an excellent job of portraying Cephus Miles. Williams put a great deal of emotion into the character. He made the audience feel as if they were a part of Cephus Miles. You wanted to laugh with him when he laughed and cry with when he cried.

Linda Verrett of Natchitoches and Daphne DeVerger of Many did an extraordinary job of supporting Williams. They played all of the characters needed other than Cephus. Linda Verrett also played Patti Mae, Cephus true love.

Doctors Say Women Needlessly Worried

A group of physicians say that many women have lumpy breasts, but that calling their condition "Fibrocystic Disease" causes the women to worry needlessly about breast cancer.

Dr. Susan Love and other physicians in Boston published their report in this week's "New England Journal of Medicine." Their report says there's no link between clinically lumpy breasts and cancer.

Love explains that when a woman is found to have lumps in her breast tissue, she is diagnosed as having "Fibrocystic Disease." But she claims the term is so frightening that some women ask for mastectomies to prevent breast cancer and their physicians sometimes recommend the surgery.

The report says half of all women have lumps in their breasts and 90 percent have microscopic evidence of "Fibrocystic Disease."

Love says that if 90 percent of the women have it, it's not a disease. She says her team would like to eliminate use of the term entirely, and instead just call the condition "Lumpy Breasts."

Prince Andrew Phone Home

Britain's 22-year-old Prince Andrew is back in England, alone. He cut short his vacation with soft-porn movie star Koo Stark, after a group of reporters and photographers nosed their way into his Caribbean Island hideaway of Mustique. British news reports say the Prince left the journalists in the lurch, taking over the plane they had chartered to leave the island.

Photographers on the scene didn't have it too good either.

They didn't get a single shot of Stark. Editors had to make do with pictures of her, more or less Stark, of course, from some of her erotic movies.

Apparently the goings on with the prince shocked British proprieties, and reportedly raised a furor with Queen Elizabeth. Buckingham Palace reports that the decision to leave Miss Stark and the island was entirely the Prince's.

Current Sauce, Page 4, October 19, 1982

Late last night, Northwestern lost something that it can never replace. Caldwell Hall burned to the ground. Not even an army of fire engines and fire trucks could prevent the historic building from crumbling beneath the deafening blaze of that tragic fire.

The loss of Caldwell can't be expressed in terms of money. What we lost last night, was more than a part of Northwestern, it was a part of everyone who passed through that building from 1912 to 1982. We lost a part of ourselves. We really did.

I've lived in Natchitoches all of my life. I was born and raised on Northwestern, and never seriously considered going to school anywhere else. My parents went here, and one set grandparents went here. About a year ago, my grandmother gave me her class ring from here. The inscription read, "Louisiana State Normal School". The date was 1919. Almost 70 years ago, my grandmother was my age, and she was walking to and from that building, going to class, like I did up until last night.

That's the same building that I was forever complaining about. Too hot, too cold, something was always wrong. For some reason, my worst grades were in classes that were in that building. But now, the complaining must come to a stop. It's shame. I really wish that it was there so I could complain some more. I'd been working on some choice complaints for this winter.

The loss is just as great for those not born and raised in Natchitoches. I sat for a while with a guy who wasn't from here. He had never really been to Natchitoches before he came to NSU. But as we sat there, he looked at the building and just said, "Unbelievable, all the years, all the history, I wonder how many people will ever know just what they are losing now."

The losses are staggering indeed. Northwestern lost $100 thousand dollars worth of pianos, alone. The tragic irony is that the pianos were scheduled to be moved only tomorrow.

High School Relations lost key recruiting information. Information on potential students, contacts, and etc.

Financial Aid, teacher information, the language center, psychology, the Basic Studies records were all in the building.

Personal libraries worth thousands of dollars (if you can put a monetary value to those items), were all lost. Things like that will never be replaced.

One of those people who lost so much, Dr. Richard Galloway, Dean of the College of Basic Studies probably put it best. When someone asked him, "What are we going to do?", Dean Galloway, watching the blaze eat away his office and personal records from years of service to this school replied, "What CAN we do?"

What Is This Double Digit Inflation

By John L. Hess

"Fritz," said Church, "what's a digit?"

This was "at the unemployment," where Fritz, the old shipping clerk, and Church, his platform man, meet every Tuesday. The line was moving slowly, and they had been reading newspapers as they waited.

"A digit?" said Fritz. "Why, it's a finger."

"Then a double digit must be two fingers, like a shot of whiskey," said Chuck, slowly. "But I'm not getting a lift out of this one."

"Oh, you mean double-digit unemployment. That just means the numbers are getting bigger."

Looking at the line stretching out into the street, Chuck growled, "Tell me about it."

"Cheer up," said Fritz. "Here's a statement from the Republican National Committee that says recovery is already here."

"Are they sure?" "President Reagan doesn't go that far. He says it's around the corner."

"Sounds familiar." "Yes," said Fritz. "Hoover said it in 1931."

John Hess

"Aw," said Chuck. "You're always knocking Reagan. Give the guy a chance. He's only been in 21 months."

"Yep, and already he's give us the highest unemployment and bankruptcies since Hoover."

"Well, like he says, he can't turn it around overnight after 20 years of Democratic misrule."

"Congress was run by conservatives just about all that time," said Fritz, impatiently. "But even so, Reagan doubled the deficit all by himself."

"Aw, Gwan," said Chuck. "Congress votes the budget."

"It does," Fritz admitted. "It gave him all he asked for - military buildup, tax cuts..."

"Then why don't they give him his balanced-budget amendment?"

"They ought to call his bluff on that one," Fritz said. "But it would take so long to happen and it's so full of holes, tht it wouldn't help us any."

"You're always knocking," said Chuck. "Don't you believe in a ballanced budget?"

"I sure do. A deficit is a rip-off - they print money, then sock it to us in higher prices. Plus, we've got to pay interest on it."

"Isn't it supposed to give business a lift?"

"If it ever did," said Fritz, "it sure isn't working now. What we need is to put our tax money into what would make jobs, like fixing up the roads and sewers."

"So if it's a good idea to balance the budget, why don't they just do it?"

"That's just what Sam Donaldson asked the president at his news conference - twice. On the second try, here's what Reagan answered."

Fritz opened his paper and read slowly:

"I'm answering the question because the question you asked is - the answer is so obvious. That obviously, after these years of out-of-control and built up to the level they have, there's no one that pretended that you could - this would then have to go to the states for ratification."

"There would be a period of time before it was actually put in place. And in tht period of time, you have an opportunity to work out a budget which would not have to penalize people who are dependent now, because, on the Government for help."

Chuck took the paper and read it for himself. After a long pause, he said:

"About that double digit. I think somebody is giving us the finger."

Commentary

Northwestern Dedication Growing

By Joe Stamey
SGA President

I was intrigued while reading a newspaper article about the Delta Airlines employees' dedication and loyalty to their company. It seems that these people sincerely appreciated the things that their management were doing for them (despite the current economic conditions which we are going through). These employees got together and decided that they wanted to give something back to Delta. They believed in their company and were thankful to have a good job while working for good people. In fact, they were so thankful, that they announced a campaign to buy one of the ten new 767 jets at a cost of "only" 30 million dollars. Now that is what you call dedication.

Northwestern should learn something from this example. We have already seen many other groups and individuals begin to wake up and realize that they appreciate the cultural, social, and academic impact that Northwestern has made on their lives. The administration, alumni, community, faculty, state boards of education, and legislature have all let NSU know that they believe in its future.

Many people have remarked that never before have they felt so positive about the present atmosphere around NSU. Dr. Orze has brought with him a tremendous feeling of optimism and confidence. He has let us know that we have a great thing here at NSU and that we can do anything if we simply put our minds together and work toward accomplishing our goals. The alumni, under Raymond Arthur, have begun a great program at NSU by starting alumni chapters in cities all over Louisiana. They have worked with many community leaders, including Mayor Joe Sampite, in volunteering their time and energies into recruiting new students for the university through their "THE PLACE FOR YOU IS NSU" campaign. The faculty are among the friendliest in the South. It is nice to know they sincerely care about students as individuals, and not just a "social security number." The Board of Trustees have expressed a strong commitment to NSU in making sure that Dr. Orze is provided with all the "tools" necessary to insure a great future for Northwestern. Senator Don Kelly and Representative Jimmy Long have helped NSU with their support in Baton Rouge in passing legislation that benefits Northwestern.

There is one more group that makes up Northwestern--THE STUDENTS! We are the reason that NSU exists. I guess you could say that all of these other groups are working for us in an attempt to make our college experience the very best it can be. However, I think the time has come for us to acknowledge their good work and begin a commitment by the students of NSU to let the people know that we believe in NSU, too. Our appreciation to the university should be more than just a "thank you." NSU has given many good things to the students; it is time for these students to give something back.

We can help Northwestern in many ways, particularly with recruiting high school students, reviving "dormant" alumni, and improving student retrenchment. We, as students of NSU, must first take a hint from other members of the "Northwestern family" and become committed to making our future even brighter. We must learn to work on solving problems ourselves instead of just complaining about them. After all, involvement is one of the most important aspects of student life at NSU and we are encouraged to meet with faculty and administration in attempting to continually improve Northwestern.

NSU students can help by recruiting high school students to Northwestern. The office of High School Relations has said many times that the best recruiters for NSU is the students. We can also help NSU by reaching out to our alumni and attempt to help them become recommitted toward working for NSU through such things as job placement and scholarships. Also, in the past, NSU has lost many of our students through retrenchment. We need to improve keeping our students here at Northwestern, instead of allowing them to leave after one or two semesters. We should certainly instill a positive attitude concerning NSU in the minds of our fellow students who may have "second thoughts" about the university.

We can play a major role in making NSU great, but, before we can expect others to believe in Northwestern, we must first believe in NSU ourselves. Let us make an active commitment to Northwestern and support the PURPLE PRIDE.

The Epsilon Upsilon Chapter of Tau Kappa Epsilon hopes everyone is looking forward to a great state fair week and more importantly a victory for the Demons. We have donated some wood for the burn the Bulldog bon-fire hoping to make it the best ever, and have a large source of wood in mind if needed. The pile is too big to describe! Intramural football goes on and we are in the thick of things. With half the season remaining, TKE No. 1 is going to make a strong stand.

Jazz Orchestra

Tonight

The Widespread Jazz Orchestra, a group of young musicians which is perpetuating the "big band" sound of the 1930's and 1940's, will be featured in concert Tuesday, Oct. 19, at Northwestern State University.

The nine-member ensemble's performance at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom is being sponsored by the fine arts committee of the NSU Student Union Governing Board. Admission to the concert is $2 for adults and $1 for NSU faculty-staff members and children 12 years and younger. NSU students are free with their IDs.

Material for their five record albums and national tour concerts at theatres, nightclubs and colleges in 25 states this year is drawn from classic jazz compositions by such great artists as Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Fletcher Henderson, Louis Jordan and Jimmy Lunceford.

The Widespread Jazz Orchestra also performs original compositions, three of which are included in the group's latest album, "Swing Is The Thing," that is being released this week on the Adelphi Record label.

Math Anxiety

Workshop

Thursday

A workshop called "Overcoming Math Anxiety" will be conducted by Henrietta Lard of the Special Service Project. Math anxiety, a condition familiar to most students, is the anticipation of an unpleasant threat related to situations where the use of Mathematics is required.

Many students experience Math anxiety as fear of Math or of Math Classes. That is they feel that they will not pass the class before they enroll, attend sessions and become familiar with the content and the requirements of the course. Other students "Block" when taking Mathematics tests and cannot complete problems although they may have worked similar problems correctly in practice sessions.

These and other symptoms of Math anxiety will be discussed in the workshop and strategies will be suggested for overcoming Math anxiety. The workshop will be held on Thursday, October 21, 1982 at 2:00 p.m. in Room 201 - Caldwell Hall.

Roger's Voice

By Roger Reynolds

Northwestern's Kickers Are Two of the Best

Northwestern has the pleasure of having two of the best kickers in Louisiana. They are Dale Quickel and Leo Clement. Dale is the Demon place kicker, while Leo is the Demon punter.

Dale and Leo are seniors this year and the Demons will have to find a replacement for them before next season. Before each game both players go thru the same routine and that is to just sit back and watch a college game on television. Neither think to much about the upcoming game. Some may think that punting and place kicking are far apart, but both have the same problems when one is kicked bad. If a bad kick is gotten off that just means that it has been rushed or they are just to tense to kick the ball. The same goes thru their mind before they kick the ball, that is get a good snap and then just swing smoothly thru the ball.

Dale's worst game was against Southeastern last year, while Leo's was against Boise State, because everytime he kicked the ball they had their hands on it.

When ask about the difference between this year's and last years team, Dale said, 'Lot better leadership on this year's team than on last year's. Last year we had a lot more injuries except in this year's quarterback situation.' Leo replied, 'We know we have the talent, but there is no one to instill any leadership.'

Dale and Leo both have the want and desire to have a winning season in their last year as Demons as well as Coach Williams last year at the Demon helm.

Demon Down Braves

The Demons won their 26 game against six losses in Turpin Stadium, Saturday by defeating the Alcorn Braves 28-7. Northwestern was lead by Leroy Ellis who had 3 touchdowns on that night. Ellis's three touchdowns came on two one yard runs and one eight yard run. Northwestern's touchdown was on a seven yard pass from Stan Powell to Victor Oatis. Powell on the night had 12 completions on 20 attempts for 156 yards with one interception and one touchdown. Northwestern's rushing game picked up for the night 107 yards rushing and a total of 270 yards on the evening. The bright spot for the Demons on the night was punter Leo Clement who punted twice for an average of 59.5 yards. Leo's longest punt on the night sat a Demon record, it was 78 yards breaking the old record by three yards sat by Barry Rubin in 1979 against Stephen F. Austin in Turpin Stadium.

Northwestern's leading receiver on the night was Jerry Wheeler with five catches for 79 yards, Victor Oatis had 3 catches for 37 yards and one touchdown. The Demons leading rusher was freshmen Anthony Cheeks who for 49 yards on 11 attempts. This is not a high total of rushing yards but Cheeks gave the Demons and inside rusing game that they did not have in the previous games.

Alcorn only picked up a total of 182 yards on offense for the night. The Braves were held to 38 yards rushing and 144 yards passing. Quarterback Edwin Myles had 10 completions on 22 attempts and two interceptions for 128 yards and one touchdown.

Northwestern's defense seemed to play with more intensity this game, as the Demon defense was lead by a number of Demon defenders.

Coach A. L. Williams was pleased with the Demon victory. Williams had this to say, 'I thought our game plan worked very well. The only thing I was disappointed with was our missed opportunities to score. Braves Coach Marino H. Casem had this to say about the Demon's, 'I can't understand how they have lost the games they have, considering the way they played tonight.' The Demons are now 5-2 going into the annual State Fair game against the Louisiana Tech Bulldogs this weekend in Shreveport.

Demon Playground

In intramurals, the flag-football program completed its third week of competition. VIPs took an easy 58-0 victory over Sigma Kappa as Susan Prince paced all scorers with 24 points. Renetta Judice added 15 points for the victors, while Lisa Lennan contributed 12 tallies in the one-sided game.

In the only other women's game played on wednesday, UnKappa 5th number two took a narrow 6-0 win over UnKappa 5th number one on a touchdown by Lonnie Banks with just one minute remaining in the game.

The YANGsters got by East Rapides 52-0 in a team effort. The Sig's first team squared off against the Sig's second team in a contest that showed an abundance of brotherly love. The number ones fell behind in the first half 6-0 after Tod Klotzback scored for the second team. In the second period the first team

Bulldogs Present Tough Challenge in State Fair Classic

The Louisiana Tech Bulldogs present the foe for the Demons this weekend. That's right, this is State Fair week. The Bulldogs from Ruston have dominated the Demons in the last 10 years. This year the Dogs are lead by quarterback Matt Dunnigan, who leads the Southland Conference in passing. Dunnigan throws to receivers Freddie Brown, Chris Tilley (younger brother of St. Louis Cardinal and Tech Graduate Pat Tilley) among his other receivers.

Northwestern's defensive secondary will definitely be put to the test this week. This is the best passing attack that the Demon secondary has faced all year. For the Demons to be successful they will have to put pressure on the quarterback. The Demon's will also bring into the game a passing attack. Northwestern's biggest question is will they have all their quarterbacks healthy and also can the Demons come up with a rushing game to balance out the pass.

If the Demons are not able to stop the Bulldogs passing attack and score some on their own, it will definitely be a long night for all Demons and fans.

...More Playground

While being a little bit old and little bit new, the Northwestern rifle team in 1982 has continued to be one thing--very good.

For the first time, the Northwestern State rifle team, long a competitive sport at NSU, is considered as an NCAA sport. While that is a big change for the squad, the squad hasn't changed its winning ways of previous years as the Demon shooters have taken victories in both of their matches this Fall.

The Northwestern rifle team opened the Fall schedule with a win over Centenary College and last weekend defeated McNeese State. Both matches were won by a considerable margin.

In a rifle shooting match, each team consists of four members. Each member of the team, shooting from a 50 foot distance, fires 60 targets with 10 points each, a perfect score being 600. Th targets are fired from three positions, 20 from a prone position, 20 from a kneeling position and 20 from a standing position. The scores of each of the four shooters are totaled for the team score.

The NSU shooters out-scored Centenary, 1,917 to 1,626, and then won the match at McNeese State by scoring 1,912 points compared to 1,811 by McNeese State. In the match at Centenary, Northwestern was led by Greg Salard with a 498 score, Scott Ford shot 489 and Ray Harbison shot 480.

Thigpen Wins, Panel Embarrassed; Reynolds Hires Moron

Ageless Mark Thigpen, the one man wonder of "Kingpin" fame, threw up a remarkable 9-1 week to grab top honors for the Porker Picker Panel pigskin picks, last week.

"Totally embarrassing," is the way P.P. panelist John Cunningham (7-3) put it at the weekly meeting of the of the P.P. panel. "I think next week we need to get some real moron to pick in that spot, so we all won't be totally humiliated." P.P. member Joe Cunningham (7-3) said, "I thought we had one THIS week."

Sports editor, Roger Reynolds (8-2) hurriedly replied that he had already contacted a complete idiot to take that position this week. "I called the La. Tech Bulldog late last night and asked him to be a guest selector this week," Roger said, "and the dumb--s agreed."

Alison Breazeale (8-2), who jumped all the way from a last place tie last week to a tie for fourth this week, said "You can tell how stupid the Bulldog is, he has Texas beating SMU by 2-1. Any fool knows that SMU is going to score at least 4.

The two other guest panelists last week, Vera LaCour and Larry Hall both brought home remarkable 8-2 records to continue the battering of the P.P. panel's regular staff members.

At his weekly press conference in Room 306 in Bullard Hall, Reynolds announced that if all three guest panelists either tie or beat all of the P.P. panel regulars, then he would fire the regular members of the panel and replace them with teachers. This brought a loud round of laughter from the partisan crowd of Associated Press and United Press International reporters.

This week, State Fair Queen Kim Kimble and Court member Beverly Armstrong join the un-illustrious members of the P.P. panel and the La. Tech Bulldog in selecting the round of truly exciting and highly emotional games. Bookies in Las Vegas meanwhile announced that in a suprise move, Butler was avored over Ashland by 37 points instead of the previously announced, 3.7 points.

retaliated with a Jay Vail to Mike Brown pass, good for 6 points. The game went into overtime with score tied at 6 apiece.

The Sigs' first team got first possession in the overtime period and scored on their first play from scrimmage as Vail ran around end for the T.D. On the extra-point conversion, it was Vail again running around the left end, to make the score 13-6. On the second team's possession they also scored on the first play from scrimmage on a touchdown by Russell Bienvenu. The second team went for a two-point conversion that would have given them a 14-13 win, but fell short which gave the first team a 13-12 win.

In the final game of the day, the KAs took an 18-0 triumph from TKE on two touchdowns by John Norrid.

Amy Williams and Susan Johnson paced Tri-Sig with 6 points apiece as they shut-out Sigma Kappa 13-0. The Phi Mus had to forfeit their game with VIPs because of a lack of players due to a Red Measles scare.

In the men's games on Thursday, the Steelers grabbed a 25-14 victory away from Conine. Vince Williams, Jason White, Tony Mayes, and Walter Pinkston all scored touchdowns for the steelers. YANG's number two team out-scored BSU to take an 18-13 win. Perry Anderson, Tony Thompson, and Parker Thompson scored 6 points each in the YANG win.

The intramural pool tournament was held two weeks ago with 48 individuals in the men's singles bracket on hand while the women's division consisted of 18 people.

Keith Washington of 3-V International took top honors in the men's singles while William Acevedo of Kingpins grabbed second place.

YANGster Rodney Thrash finished third behind Washington and Acevedo.

Phi Mu's Angela Lasyone was the women's singles champ. Ginny Whitaker, an independent, came in second. UnKappa 5th's Sherri Broocks tied with Sarah Morgan, another independent for the third spot in the tourny.

The men's doubles competition consisted of 24 teams, inwhich YANG took the top spot with the team of Paul Rino and John Jackson. Jon Mouser and Henry Ingram took a second place finish for the Sig Dogs. Mike Turner and Bogy Patton of BSU tied for third place with the team from KA.

Sherri Broocks teamed with Stephany Washington, also of UnKappa 5th, to take top honors in the women's doubles contest. Theta Chi's Monica Bartee and Carla Lee wound up second in the competition. Tanya Leone and Sonja Griffiths of VIPs tied for third with independents Ginny Whitaker and Sarah Morgan.

NOTE: The men's singles and the women's singles and doubles of the tennis tournament which was postponed, will be completed on Wednesday October 27th at the recreation complex starting at 6:30 p.m.

No Cause Yet Determined In Caldwell Fire

By Lisa Williams

According to Natchitoches Fire Chief Oscar Vails, no cause has been determined in the fire that destroyed Caldwell Hall on Monday night, October 18.

The fire, reported at 10:15 p.m., was battled by 30 firemen and five units from the Natchitoches Fire Department. Back-up units were also called in from Campti and Cloutierville.

A brick building with three floors and a basement, Caldwell Hall was built in 1906 at a cost of $355,000. It was completely refurbished in 1968 at a cost of $410,000.

Vails said the blaze appeared to have started in the basement near the center of the building.

An estimate of the actual loss had not been determined early Tuesday, but Loran Lindsey, Northwestern's physical plant director, said that replacement costs of the building and contents would be "several million dollars".

Named in honor of Beverly C. Caldwell, who was Northwestern's president from 1896 through 1908, Caldwell Hall served as the university's main administrative office building until the early 1960's.

In recent years, the offices of the College of Basic Studies, Continuing Education, High School Relations, Financial Aid, Admissions, and other departments, have been housed in Caldwell Hall.

Also located in Caldwell Hall was the Center for the History of Louisiana Education, a museum filled with an extensive collection of materials that reflected the progress of the state's educational system throughout the years.

At the time of the fire, NSU President Dr. Joseph Orze was in Poland on an educational exchange, but Vice President Southerland called the fire "a tremendous loss, not only because of the records, files, equipment, classroom and office space that were lost, but also because of the enormous historic value of the building."

Copied from a building in Providence, R.I. Caldwell was structurally and architecturally unique. Its roof, which featured numerous gables toward the ends, stood high above other buildings in the historic Normal Hill District.

Dean Bosarge Elected President of LACUSPA

Dr. Fred C. Bosarge of Northwestern has been chosen as president-elect of the Louisiana Association of College and University Student Personnel Administrators.

As the president-elect, the NSU dean of students will be a member of the LACUSPA executive committee in 1982-83 before assuming the position of president of the state organization in 1983-84.

The Louisiana Association of College and University Student Personnel Administrators is a state wide organization of administrative leaders at two-year and four-year public and private institutions across the state.

Dr. Gus Varvaro, vice-president for student affairs at Nicholls State University in Thibodaux, is currently serving as president of LACUSPA.

Bosarge, who was awarded the Doctor of Philosophy degree in higher education from Florida State University in 1981, has been dean of students at NSU since 1978.

At Northwestern, he also served from 1970 to 1972 as director of housing and from 1970 to 1974 as the university's dean of men. He was dean of the student personnel from 1974 to 1977.

Bosarge earned the bachelor's degree in history from Northwestern in 1961 and received a master's degree in student personnel services from NSU in 1970.

His honors since joining the Northwestern staff include the Dean Fulton Award from NSU's Blue Key National Honor Fraternity and the Gail Goodwin Award for achievements in student personnel services.

Offices Relocated

Due to the recent fire at Caldwell Hall several offices and classes have had to be relocated.

The new location of the College of Basic Studies, orientation classes, ALOC classes, and Special services is the Old Trade School.

Continuing Education, Admissions, High School Relations, and Enrollment Management has been moved to East Caspari Hall.

Financial Aid is now in the basement of Roy Hall.

External Affairs is in the Field Office and Counseling and Testing has temporarily been relocated at the infirmary.

Caldwell Hall as it looked on September 2, 1982, and as it looked on October 21, just three days after fire gutted the oldest building on the Northwestern campus.

After The Fire, Life Goes On

Less than 24 hours after Caldwell Hall's burning, the picking up and starting and starting over began. Offices currently unused are being opened again. Space is being made in this corner or that to accomodate an extra desk. An empty wing in Caspari dorm now has a use. The old Trade School, its purpose for the NSU Music Department now fulfilled, has another job.

"The loss is a crucial blow, but we have to start over," said Randy Nichols, Director of Enrollment Management. And thus the reorganization has begun.

Many students were concerned about losses within the Financial Aid Office. According to Terry Faust, assistant director of financial aid, "10 to 15 hundred folders of aid recipients" were destroyed by the fire.

The Financial Aid office is busy reconstructing their files. The task is difficult especially for students not yet awarded financial aid, Faust said. But for those students having received financial aid this year, it is much easier because their records were kept in the NSU Computer Center.

"What's so sad," said Nichols, "is that beyond the loss of the building are the papers that will be so hard to replace. We lost 9000 names, addresses, and phone numbers of prospective NSU students. I entered the last backlog on the terminal at 8:15 Monday night. We were caught up for the very first time," he said with a touch of irony in his voice.

The 9000 prospective students will be hard to track down. "We critically need for every student, faculty member, staffmember, and community person to dig deeply into his brain for anyone who might be interested in coming to Northwestern. We need to begin rebuilding our files as soon as possible," he said.

And for Mrs. Maxine Southerland Director of the Center for the History of Louisiana Education, the starting over has also begun. Old Potpourri's, a collections of children's books from Melrose Plantation, photographs, and a white dress worn by the very first graduate of the Louisiana Normal School are among the many priceless artifacts that are now ashes.

Bitter losses, yet she has not given up. She said the day after the fire was almost like a funeral. "Our friends came by -

Ostar To Give Address

Dr. Allan Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities in Washington, D.C., will be the keynote speaker Friday, Nov. 5, for the investiture of Dr. Joseph J. Orze as the 15th president of Northwestern.

Ostar was named in 1965 as the first full-time executive director of AASCU, and in 1979 became president of the association. Northwestern is one of 353 state colleges and universities with membership in AASCU.

one brought flowers and said, "I didn't help you before but I will this time."

"We're in the process of doing an inventory of all the things we lost for the insurance company," she said. "We are going to appeal to educators and museum friends to dig down and try to find anything that needs to be preserved."

The "parish by parish" search will be long and hard, she says, but it is also challenging. "We must stick together."

"To cry about the losses is normal and it's human," says Randy Nichols, "but the task of going on is important. We were given a choice of starting over or packing our bags and leaving town. So we're going to start over. We must start now."

"We're going to -- we really are," says Mrs. Southerland.

An open house at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Orze on the NSU campus was originally scheduled for 3 p.m., but that event has been cancelled because of renovation to the president's home.

Ostar has spent most of his professional career of the past 30 years working for the advancement of public higher education, and as AASCU president he continues to stress constructive planning for the future in response to changing needs of education and society.

Before joining the AASCU, he organized and directed for seven years the Joint Office of Institutional Research, which served the member institutions of the State Universities Association and the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Since 1968, Ostar has been awarded honorary doctoral degrees from 13 colleges and universities throughout the United States in recognition of his outstanding national contributions to public higher education.

In addition to his duties as president of AASCU, Ostar serves on the higher education advisory committee of the Education Commission of the States and is chairman of the Consortium for International Cooperation in Higher Education.

Just Another Day In The Life Of A Commuter

Can you imagine coming on campus around 7:30 a.m. and being here until 4 p.m. That doesn't seem hard to me after all I stay here all week. I can always go to my room, drop my books, crash out between classes, and get a sweater if I am cold or change clothes if I am too warm.

Just think if you were a commuter and your classes were over at 1:00 but your bus didn't leave until 4:00. You can always go to the library, intramural building, or cafeteria. There's also the commuter lounge, and the Addition.

Unfortunately not many people are aware of the existence of the commuter lounge. Until I had to do a research paper on the commuter problem I was not aware of its existence. If you also are unaware of its existence it is located in Room 234 of the Student Union Building.

If you are aware of its existence you're probably not very impressed. After all it's not much to talk about. They do have some magazines, unfortunately they are four months old because someone walked off with the recent ones. After you do your homework and have read last year's magazines that doesn't leave you with much else to do. You can always read the CURRENT SAUCE. Unfortunately that only kills about an hour. You may be lucky and the SUGB may be having a nooner act but that's not very often either.

You could walk to the library or intramural building but if it's raining you have to stay in your wet clothes until after you get home. If you do that you're likely to get a cold and have to miss classes the next few days. You won't have to worry about something to do any more because you'll be so busy trying to catch up in all of your classes.

Is there a solution to all of this madness? Of course everyone could move on campus and eliminate the commuter, but if they had wanted to do that they wouldn't be commuting. We could continue to do what we've been doing which is ignore their existence. What we actually need is a solution to this madness. Have you got any ideas?— Diana Gratten

Reagan's Keeping Cold Company

By John L. Hess

In a short story by Ring Lardner, a kid is heckling his father with questions. Then comes the immortal line:

"Shut up," he explained.

Another former sports reporter revived the line at the White House the other day.

John Hess

Heckled by a radical Republican candidate, Reagan explained, "Shut up."

Outside, the heckler said he had spoken out "to tell the emperor he has no clothes."

Boy, did he have the wrong emperor.

In fact, White House advisers are reported to have urged the Reagans to lay away the whipcord breeches, the white tie and tails and the rhinestone knickers for the duration of the campaign.

They say the presidential lifestyle tends to clash with such administration economy efforts as the proposals to terminate food subsidies to orphans and handicapped children, to raise the price of school lunches to the "near-poor" and to reduce food stamps for persons aged 60 through 64.

Somehow, people have got the idea that this administration is unsympathetic to the poor. Even in the White House, they joke that they saved on air conditioning last summer by using David Stockman's heart.

The president is not always helped by those around him. Consider some recent remarks by his dedicated friend Clare Boothe Luce.

In an interview in the high-priced magazine Geo, Mrs. Luce confided that she'd "feel a little more compassion" for one of her pet birds than for a starving mother and child in the Sahara.

Charity begins at home the lady said. And charity, as opposed to welfare, is what good Reaganauts believe in - although the Reagans themselves have not given so much as to spoil the self-reliance of the poor.

Reagan know what it means to be poor. He has observed that while he was not raised on the wrong side of the tracks, he lived near enough to hear the train whistles.

One of the things that bothered Mrs. Luce was the changing composition of the poor. She said, frankly, that we were being "overrun" by Hispanics.

Her old protege William F. Buckley Jr. fondly rebuked her. In a column, he suggested that much of what she had said was defensible, but her "formulation" was regrettable. He concluded:

"There are the deep questions Mrs. Luce touches on. We should be grateful while willing to concede that she hasn't said the kind of thing that gets you elected to Congress. Certainly not in Texas, New Mexico, lower California or Arizona."

That may be an encouraging remark. Let me explain.

There is a phenomenon in American politics which around New York is known as Koch 22: Every time Mayor Ed Koch was called a racist, he'd loudly repeat the charge, deny it with indignation - and gain votes.

This fall, it didn't work. Koch ran for governor in the Democratic primary, was rated a shoo-in, made his usual skillful campaign featuring the death penalty, outspent his rival 2 to 1, and was beaten decisively.

It is true that black and Hispanic voters did turn out in unusual numbers. But other Democrats had other issues on their minds. As in Massachusetts and Ohio, they tended to reject Democrats tainted with Reaganism.

That Reagan should be heckled by one of his own is another sign. We have had either too much or not enough of Reaganomics, they say. how can he reply to that?

Shut up, he explained.

Letters to the Editor

To: Joe Cunningham, Jr.
Editor, Current Sauce
From: T.P. Southerland

Rather than compliment you for an article that really strikes your heart, I want to say "thank you." It does my heart good to know our young people-our students share your feelings in the tragic loss of Caldwell Hall.

As I stood, helpless, and watched it burn to the ground, it burned out a part of me inside. I have in my lifetime suffered moments of tragedy of all types, both professional and personal, but this one hit my wife and me very hard. You wrote your article from experience built on family ties, history, and a heritage.

You felt the blaze in your writing. My wife and I spent our undergraduate years attending classes in Caldwell. We were sweethearts for three of those wonderful college years. We often sat on the old bench near the Columns and here I gave her my fraternity pin. As we watched our history destroyed Monday night, it hurt -- for we truly love this University. Over half of our professional careers have been dedicated to creating for Northwestern the kind of university your grandmother would be proud of, your mother, and most of all -- you.

The fire may have burned some of our spirit, a part of our heart, a piece of our history, but my wife, Maxine, the Director of the Center for the History of Louisiana Education, and I, Vice President of Academic Affairs, have renewed our commitment to work even harder to not let Caldwell burn in vain. Thank you for your NSU spirit and love for our history.

Dear Joe:

Your prompt coverage of the fire at Caldwell Hall was quite a scoop! My compliments to you for a job well done.

Sincerely,
Marie Burkhead

Dear Editor:

My thanks to Dr. E. Robert Black, Director; M.W. Atkins, Designer; and the cast and production crew of Home. The cast complemented each other beautifully, and the audience was entranced from the first moment. The communal spirit that enveloped us all must be what theatre is all about. So again, to everyone concerned, I can no other answer make, but thanks and thanks and ever thanks.

Christine Ford

Your Support Is Appreciated

We have experienced a very tragic week. I use the word "we" as I am positive the entire Northwestern family shares my sadness and despair.

The burning of Caldwell Hall burned a part of our history and a little of each of us. The purpose of this is to thank many of you for assisting in relocating the displaced personnel and units that resided in Caldwell. Offers of furniture, typewriters, files, calculators, chairs, and all sorts of equipment to help us in reestablishing our units came in generously.

I also want to commend those persons who, on Tuesday morning, were without an office -- and it became a reality -- Caldwell Hall was gone! We met that morning and after moments of despair they all faced the fact that we can't look back but we must look ahead. They moved into the old Trade School, old East Caspari, and the old Infirmary and "dug in." That afternoon, attired in jeans, sneakers, and general "work clothes," they moved in. Music, Art, and Theatre waved as they moved to their new Center. They understood! My hat is off to our new "displaced persons" for their attitude and spirit. I want to encourage all of you to support them in their effort to make a new home. They can use all kinds of "odds and ins" - even paper clips.

Thanks to all of you for your support and help in this tragic week.

Former SAUCE Editor Featured in Library Exhibit

By Pat Skidmore-Co-Focus Editor

Charles Gilbert Stahls, editor of the Current Sauce from 1940-1942, is one of 25 featured writers whose manuscript book(s) and other relevant material are displayed in a "Writers Along the Cane" exhibit in the Cammie G. Henry Research Center of the Eugene P. Watson Library.

Stahls, a native of Tennessee, attended Vanderbilt University but left after his sophomore year to be with his family in Louisiana. Later, having attended the Normal School for two years, Stahls resigned his position as editor in February 1942 to enlist. "Boos and Bouquet," the title of his editorial column was also the name of a main character's radio show, hence Stahls decided on Grand Bouquet as the novel's title. The 372 page typewritten manuscript novel was published in 1951 and concerns post-World War II times of the Natchitoches and New Orleans areas. The character's personalities are similar to those of Stahls' family members as well as important Natchitoches names of that time. He died in 1971, having spent many years of his life in Palm Desert, California as a film-script and real estate writer.

Orchestra Entertains Crowd

By Beatrice Dawson and Pat Skidmore

The Widespread Jazz Orchestra of New York City provided entertainment for an enthusiastic crowd last Tuesday night (Oct. 19) in the Student Union Ballroom. The musical concert was sponsored by the NSU Fine Arts Committee of the Student Union Governing Board.

When asked about the night's performance, trumpet player and vocalist Billy Grey stated, "We enjoy being here for a nice group of receptive people who seem to know their jazz, and we've been treated very nicely."

The nine-man musician group consists of three saxophone players, two trumpet players and a trombone player, along with a bass, a piano, and drum players.

The jazz performers highlighted the 2½-hour show with 21 selections that received great approval from the listeners. Three were from their title albums: "Boogie in the Barnyard," which was rated number 5 in the National Jazz Airplay in Oct. 1980; "Time to Jump and Shout," which was selected as the "Top Jazz LP of the Week" by Billboard Magazine in July 1981; and their last selection for the night, "Swing Is The Thing," which is their newest album that is being released on the Adelphi Record Label.

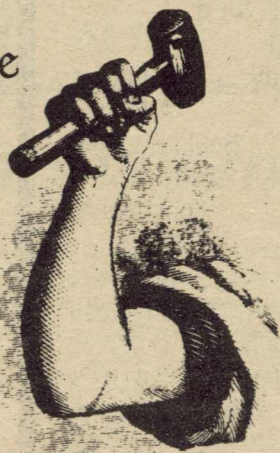

Four of the selections receiving much applause from the audience were Duke Ellington's "What am I Here for," "Happy Feet," "Is you is or Is you Ain't My Baby" and "Beelzebub."

The 1½-year-old band has produced five successful albums-three of which are in the United States; one has a European label on it and the other one is on the staff's record.

The ensemble has derived material from classic jazz composition by such artists as Duke Ellington, Louis Jordan, Jimmy Lunceford, Count Basie and Fletcher Henderson for their national tour concerts at nightclubs and colleges this year. In addition, drum player John Ellis Jr. has contributed over 60% of the original arrangements in the band book, including his own compositions.

As a result of their performance, the orchestra was greeted with a standing ovation by the audience.

It seems clear that, if we're to meet our growing energy requirements, we must rely on the technology at hand. ## Roger's Voice

By Roger Reynolds

State Fair Game Jinx

Well by now everybody knows the result of the annual State Fair Classic. The Louisiana Tech Bulldogs won their forty-ninth game of the classic. Tech has only lost nineteen times.

Along with only losing nineteen times, the Bulldogs have won the last 11 out of 12 games. The only loss for the Bulldogs was in 1978 when quarterback Kenny Philbert engineered a last minute 96 yard drive that ended in a touchdown catch by Randy Liles to beat the Bulldogs. Now that all the stats and facts are out in the open, there is one big question that remains unanswered by all Demons and Demon fans alike. That big question is; Why can't Northwestern beat Tech?

Northwestern for the last four years has had just as good of a recruiting year as the Bulldogs. The Demons have just as good of talent on the squad as the Bulldogs do, so why can't the Demons win. This leads to another question, are the Demons being out coached by the Bulldog coaches and is the team being psyched out by the game and the Bulldogs themselves? All these questions can only be answered by the individual fan. No one knows the answers to these questions. If anyone does know the answer to these questions, I wish somebody would tell a Demon fan, player or Coach. Everyone wants to beat the Bulldogs, but now we all have to wait to see what next year holds for the Demons.

Dogs Dominate Demons 33-0

Louisiana Tech handed Northwestern its third loss of the season along with its forty-ninth loss in the State Fair Classic with a 33-0 shutout. This was the Bulldogs first shutout since 1974.

The Bulldogs were lead by quarterback Matt Dunnigan who threw for 323 yards on 34 attempts, 19 completions with 3 touchdowns and one interception. Dunnigan also rushed the ball for 50 yards. Carlton Jacobs lead the Bulldogs in rushing with 51 yards on eight carries with one touchdown. Tech amassed a total of 550 yards while the Demons could only manage 213 total yards.

Northwestern's quarterbacks had trouble moving the team through out the entire game. Demon starter Stan Powell threw for 113 yards on 26 attempts, with 11 completions and one interception. Senior Bobby Herbert added 67 yards on 17 attempts, 8 completions and 2 interceptions. Jerry Wheeler lead Demon receivers with 80 yards on 6 catches, while number one receiver Victor Oatis had only one catch the entire game.

Louisiana Tech came into the game ranked fourth in 1-AA and they certainly did not hurt their ranking, only allowing the Demons 213 total yards on offense and beating the Demons in every category.

Northwestern's defense had a good first half keeping the Bulldogs off guard through out the first period and giving the Demon offense the ball in good territory. Demon! safety Michael 'Red' Richardson was another bright spot on the night with one interception, a fumble recovery, one pass break-up and nine tackles. Defensive end David Grappe added eight tackles on the night and linebacker Mike Camden had three tackles and two caused fumbles.

'Louisiana Tech made the big plays and we did not', stated NSU Head Coach A. L. Williams. Bulldog Coach Billy Brewer said about quarterback Matt Dunnigan, 'I thought he did an outstanding job.' Brewer also had this to say about the Bulldog defensive effort, 'It was superb. I am pleased and proud of them and I know they are pleased with the shut-out.'

Northwestern now falls to 5-3 while Tech goes to 6-1. The Demons now have a week off to mend their injuries and to work on a game plan for the November 6 game against the Nichols State Colonels. Let's all hope by that time that Northwestern can come up with a complete team effort.

Northwestern Coach Leon Johnson says he hopes his cross country team can finish in the top three in the Trans America Athletic Conference championships, scheduled Monday, November 1. "Our runners are all improving and I think we will do well in the meet," he said.

The conference championships, originally scheduled for Oct. 30, will begin at 10 a.m. Northwestern State will host the meet which will be run at the NSU Recreation Complex. The 10,000 kilometer race is the last cross country meet before the Nov. 6 NCAA Region VI championships.

The Demons participated in the Louisiana State University Invitational in Baton Rouge Oct. 15, and they are scheduled to run in the Northeast Louisiana University Invitational Oct. 22. Coach Johnson hopes the two meets will prove to be good preparation for his Demons before they enter the TAAC championships.

Sophomore thinclad Andy Nelson had his best time of the 1982 Fall season at the LSU meet, but Northwestern State finished 14th in a field of 15 teams.

Nelson finished the five mile course with a 27:53 time for 47th place among more than 130 runners. The top runner for the Demons, Nelson missed a few meets early in the season while nursing a sprained ankle. However, Johnson said the runner is 100 percent better. "Andy ran his best race of the year at LSU. He has recovered from his injury and he should run even better this week," the coach said.

The Northeast Invitational will begin at 4:15 p.m. Friday and will be run at the Pineville Golf Course in Calhoun. The meet will host eight schools, including teams from Mississippi College, Arkansas College, Centenary College and the University of Southern Mississippi.

Mike Carver has been setting practice out this week with bronchitis, and he may not be able to compete in the NLU meet. "Right now we're not sure if Mike will get to run. He hasn't practice this week and the doctor will decide Friday if he can run," Johnson said.

Reynolds Moves Into Second Place Tie

Roger Reynolds' last minute gambit payed off, and after the smoke had cleared in this week's Porker Picker Panel race, the NSU Sports Editor had moved into a second place tie with the second guest selector.

Reynolds (6-4) who last week hired the La. Tech

Bulldog as guest selector in hopes that his malnourished brain might bring down the unusually high percentages for the guest selectors, was this week's hero when the Tech mascot went 0-10, in a first in the history of the P.P. Panel. Not even the invincible Bob Sjoberg, in all his ingloriousness managed to sink that low.

Winning the week's picks, in his first show of respectability since the opening weekend, was Joe Cunningham who went 7-3 and moved into place. However, as brother John pointed out, "Just wait till the bowl games, he'll choke."

Alison Breazeale and John Cunningham both had 6-4 marks and jumped a full two games in front of the last place mark of 35-25, held by one of the guests.

Beverly Armstrong continued the torrid streak put on by the guest selector's when she tied for first with a 7-3 worksheet. State Fair Queen Kim Kimble, soft-hearted as she is, pulled for the underdogs six times and went 4-6 for the week.

At the weekly news conference, Reynolds announced that this week's guest pickers would be Scott 'buy me a smaller waist' Sledge and Southeastern's transfer and Phi Mu's Melanie 'Nel, Nel' Campbell along with Dudley 'thanks for voting for me' Hall. Sauce Editor Joe 'I can't be nothing else but a YANG' Cunningham is really in the clouds with his 40-20 record is trying to pad his lead before the bowl games and choke time comes around. Reynolds and all the other panelists are just waiting for Cunningham to slip up. Brother John 'I like flag football' Cunningham also believes that brother Joe is due to slip up and loose his lead. Last but not certainly not least is this week's top game a true Classic for all to watch for and that is Emory and Henry facing Hampden and Sidney.

Bishop Graves, Rev. Watson To Celebrate Inaugural Mass

Bishop Graves

Rev. Youree Watson, S.J., will deliver the homily at the Mass beginning the day of ceremonies marking the Investiture of Dr. Joseph Orze as fifteenth president of Northwestern State University. The Mass will be held at the Immaculate Conception Church on Friday, November 5, beginning at 8:00 a.m. The Most Reverend Lawrence P. Graves of the Alexandria-Shreveport Diocese will preside over the celebration. Other participants will include Northwestern faculty and students, ministers of the Uniting Ministries in Higher Education and clergy from many of Natchitoches churches. Dr. Orze remarked that he is pleased and felt it to be appropriate that a religious service begin the day of investiture rites and ceremonies at the start of his presidency.

Father Watson, Professor of Philosophy at Loyola University in New Orleans is a Northwestern alumnus. He received the bachelor's degree in Latin from Spring Hill College in Alabama and received the doctorate from the Gregorian University in Rome. An authority on the philosophy of religion, he was named Teacher of the Year of Spring Hill College in 1970 and Outstanding Educator of America in 1974. In 1977, Father Watson received the Award of Merit from the Alabama Philosophical Society and is celebrating his 50th anniversary as a Jesuit this year. Father Watson is the brother of Arthur C. Watson of Natchitoches and the late Eugen P. Watson, for whom Northwestern's Library is named.

Reverend Graves, who retired this summer as Bishop of the Alexandria-Shreveport Diocese, received degrees from the Gregorian University in Rome and St. John's Seminary in Little Rock. Prior to his appointment to the See of Alexandria-Shreveport, he served as auxiliary to the Bishop of Little Rock.

Music for the Mass will be provided by a choir and string quartet composed of Northwestern students, faculty and alumni under the direction of Dr. William Hunt. Franz Schubert's Mass in G will be sung.

All members of the community are invited to attend the Investiture Mass.

Activities For Investiture Planned

Day-long activities have been planned for the Nov. 5 investiture of Dr. Joseph J. Orze as the 15th president of Northwestern State University.

The program will feature an ecumenical mass, reception and investiture convocation in the morning, a luncheon, alumni art exhibit and open house at the president's home in the afternoon and the President's Concert that night.

Orze was appointed in December of 1981 as president-elect of Northwestern by the Board of Trustees for State Colleges and Universities and became president June 1 upon the retirement of Dr. Rene J. Bienvenu, who served for four years as NSU's chief executive. Orze was president of Worcester State College in Massachusetts for six years before his appointment at NSU.

Mrs. Maxine Southerland and Thomas N. Whitehead are co-chairmen of the inaugural committee which is coordinating activities for the investiture programs that is being sponsored by Northwestern and the NSU Alumni Association. All activities are open to the public without charge.

The ecumenical mass will be at 8 a.m. at the Immaculate Conception Catholic Church in Natchitoches. Bishop Lawrence P. Graves of the Alexandria-Shreveport Diocese will preside over the celebration, which will include a sermon by the Rev. Youree Watson, an NSU alumnus who is professor of philosophy at Loyola University in New Orleans. Music for the mass will be performed by the Natchitoches-Northwestern Chorale, conducted by Dr. William A. Hunt.

The City of Natchitoches and the Natchitoches Parish Chamber of Commerce will host the reception for Orze and his wife, Carol, beginning at 9 a.m. at the Lemee House on Jefferson Street.

Scheduled for 10 a.m. in Prather Coliseum is the investiture convocation, in which Board of Trustees president Wiley H. Sharp Jr. of Hammond will formally install Orze as president of NSU. The ceremonies will be highlighted by a keynote address by Dr. Allan Ostar, president of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Presenting salutary remarks during the investiture convocation will be Dr. William Junkin, executive director of the Board of Trustees for State Colleges and Universities; Dr. William Arceneaux, executive director of the Louisiana Board of Regents for Higher Education; Raymond Arthur of Natchitoches, president of the NSU Alumni Association; Dr. Maxine Taylor, president of the NSU Faculty Senate, and Joseph Stamey of Natchitoches, president of the university's Student Government Association.

Local, parish and state elected officials, students, faculty and staff members, alumni and the general public

"The Norman Luboff Choir is certainly the most outstanding professional vocal group touring America today," said NSU Artist Series chairman Tony C. Smith of the university's Music Department faculty. "We feel especially fortunate to have them at Northwestern to launch our 1982-83 season."

Clarification Of Financial Aid

Since the fire at Caldwell Hall, student uncertainty about Financial Aid has been a problem. The Financial Aid office has printed a statement, which can be found in the SAUCE this week, that details what students who receive financial aid should do.

All students who have been awarded Federal Financial Aid Pell (BEOG) Grant, College Work Study, SEOG, NDSL, or SIG) do not need to do anything. Replacement Pell Grant reports and ACT Need Analysis reports have been requested for you and will be mailed to our office. Replacement verification documents are not required for those students already receiving financial aid.

Students who have not been awarded a Pell Grant must contact the Pell Grant Office, Box 92440, Los Angeles, CA 90009 and request duplicate copies of their Pell Grant reports.

Those students may also call 800-638-6700 and request the duplicated copies. Verification documents may be requested by the this office. You should bring the duplicate copies and verification documents (if requested) by our office as soon as possible.

Replacement ACT Need Analysis copies have been requested for all students and will be mailed to this office.

Students will need to come by the Financial Aid Office and renew their aid for the Spring semester. If any students had renewed their aid before the fire, they are requested to come by and renew it again.

If a student does not plan to enroll at NSU for the Spring semester, they are asked to contact the Financial Aid office in Roy Hall so that Financial Aid may award their financial aid package to some other deserving student.

Greeks Hold Drive for Christmas Festival

By Pat Skidmore, Co-Focus Editor

A city service project, "NSU Greeks - Partners in Progress," was conducted by eight social fraternities and sororities. The drive was held last Tuesday afternoon, Oct. 26 in an effort to decrease costs of the 1982 Christmas Festival.

The Greeks, standing at street intersections with cans, asked for donations while they gave out stickers and pamphlets about the festival. A total of $563.44 was collected according to Janice Duggan, Coordinator of the Greek Festival Drive.

Organizations participating were Kappa Alpha Psi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Theta Chi, Phi Beta Sigma, Delta Sigma Theta, Sigma Kappa, Phi Mu and Tri Sigma.

There will be another drive like this one on Nov. 16 from 1-4 p.m. Duggan said that since students are such a big part of the festival, she felt they would enjoy helping out especially since it is something that draws so many people to Natchitoches each year.

A similar drive was held during this past spring's Greek Week in which the amount collected was given to the NSU Children's Center.

Pre-registration Scheduled For November 22

Starting on November 22, Northwestern students, for the first time, will be able to pre-register for the next semester's classes.

According to Dr. Austin Temple, NSU Registrar, this "big step forward" will guarantee a schedule when the process is completed, and if it is done right.

The advanced registration is open for those students who are enrolled on this campus this fall. Hopefully, Dr. Temple says, other NSU campuses will be able to enjoy pre-registration in the near future, under a different system.

The first important date to remember is November 10, and that is the day that Spring schedules will become available. Starting November 11, NSU students should begin meeting with their adviser's and setting up a trial schedule.

Registration begins on November 22 at noon, and starts with students whose last name begins with M.

Rebuilding of Caldwell

By Pat Skidmore

The near completed reorganization plan for NSU and the rebuilding of Caldwell Hall were key topics in an interview with President Joseph J. Orze.

Orze will talk about the philosophy of the university's reorganization proposal during his investiture on Nov. 5. He said that the proposal will appear, in about a month, in the form of an "organizational chart with written rationale as to the changes and ways of implementing them." In an earlier interview, he had said this reorganization, both academically and administratively, was one of his long term goals and these types of changes would be gradual ones.

Orze commented on Caldwell Hall's fire and how it was such a great loss to many because of its sentimental and historic value. "We want to make the outside look like it did, and we will actually build it from the old bricks, even using the original doorway."

In regard to enrollment, there is an increase in the number of full-time undergraduate students. "This was the first time we have had an increase in this direction in years," stated Orze. NSU's 3.6% decrease in enrollment as compared to last fall semester's figures, is largely due to indecision as to whether Treen would pass the Pips Bill. There is a decrease in Pip program enrollment. The number of dormitory residents is about the same.

Orze returned from Poland on Oct. 21 with an agreement signed by a delegation of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities (AASCU) and the Polish Ministry of Science, Higher Education and Technology. The leader of the 5-member delegation, Orze has been a member of the AASCU Board of Directors since 1978. Terms outlining the educational exchange of faculty, students and equipment were discussed there.

He concluded in saying, "I'm pleased to be back in the country, I was upset by the news of Caldwell Hall and budget cuts, yet very impressed by everyone on campus who has pulled together to make the best of what has happened."

will attend the event, which will be the university's second formal inaugural program since Dr. John S. Kyser was installed as president in 1954.

An informal luncheon honoring Orze will follow the investiture convocation in the Student Union Ballroom. Tickets are $7 and will be available through Nov. 3 from Dr. John L. Hix, acting dean of the College of Business.

"Always America has come out stronger and more prosperous."

Thomas Edison said that at age 84. After he had lived through the great depression, Edison knew that America had to grow to survive. And he knew that it could not grow without electric energy. Energy to stimulate reasonable economic growth in order to provide jobs for the young and needy. For more than 200 years, Americans have thrived in a land of opportunity. Let's not change things.

"Now sits expectation in the air!"

When Shakespeare said it in "Henry V," he was referring to the feelings of the English on the eve of battle. But the thought also applies to America's energy situation. While today nuclear power and coal are our most valid sources of energy for the near future, we are also doing research to find other sources. Solar, fusion, wind, geothermal and other possibilities are continually being studied, but right now none of these sources is applicable for widespread use. But research has come through for us in the past and will do so again. Expectation sits in the air.

Pathfinders

The NSU "Pathfinders" Orienteering Team participated in the Sam Houston Invitational Orienteering Meet in Huntsville, Texas 23-24 October 1982. The Pathfinders Red team category (Colleges) was 5th out of 12 teams. Gina Kyle won 1st place in the (orange) female 19 years old and above. There were 88 runners registered for the orange course. Joe Sepulvado was 7th and Gerry Snelson was 15th in the (red) male 21 and older course, with 71 registered runners, and Lawson Adams was 10th in the (red) males 19-20 advanced category.

Gina Kyle was in second place in the F19-category the first day, but "blew away" the competition the second day with a course time of 75 minutes. Her overall course time was 205.33 leaving the nearest competitor behind by 30 minutes. Not bad for only her second competition!

The Pathfinders will represent NSU again 20-21 in November 1982 at the Arkansas Tech Orienteering meet in Russellville, Arkansas, and are building the team as a strong contender for the National Competition next spring.

Periaktoi

The NSU Periaktoi Club enjoyed its first field trip of the semester last Thursday. The trip included a visit to St. Mary's school in Boyce, a tour of the Louisiana Training Institute in Ball, as well as a tour of the youth facilities at the Central Hospital of Pineville.

At Periaktoi's regular meeting, October 26, several community projects were voted on in regard to the upcoming holiday season. Other items discussed were: the purchase of personalized T-shirts and a Christmas party.

Periaktoi also gained four new members, they are Floyd James, Sandra Lee, Doris Nietto and Lisa Gut-schenretta. Welcome!

TKE

The brothers of the Northwestern State University chapter of TKE went on our annual Retreat over the Halloween weekend. The retreat is for the new pledges to get a better understanding of the fraternity and the people in it. Everything went according to plan and all the TKE's there had a great time. To all of the alumni who came, a thank you is extended.

Volleyball is starting this week and TKE has two teams entered in the competition. The number 2 team is too big we've been practicing for it and both teams are in top shape for the season.

We also held an exchange with the DZS this past Thursday. An appropriate theme of horror was on force.

Dear Students:

Below are the new standards for "good standing and satisfactory progress" effective Fall 1982 for continued receipt of financial assistance at NSU.

A student must have an overall 2.00 GPA in the four major subjects (English, Math, Social Science, and Social Studies) in order to be in "Good Academic Standing" to qualify for financial assistance as a Freshman. To continue receiving financial assistance a student must make satisfactory academic progress. This calls for a student to maintain a 1.50 GPA the first year in college. The second year a student must maintain a 1.75 GPA. After the second year the student must maintain a 2.00 GPA to continue receiving financial assistance. If a student fails to maintain the required GPA (in order to continue receiving financial assistance), he or she will not receive financial assistance for the following semester. The student must make a 2.00 GPA and enroll in the same number of hours as the previous semester in order to make satisfactory progress and receive financial assistance the following semester.

Transfer Students

Transfer students are required to comply with the above standards of satisfactory progress in order to receive financial assistance at NSU.

Time Limits on Financial Aid Eligibility

A student may receive financial aid for a maximum of five years (10 semesters) in order to complete a four year degree program.

Important News From Financial Aid

If you have been awarded Federal Financial Aid (Pell BEOG Grant, College Work Study, SEOG, NDSL, or SSIG) no action is necessary at the present time. Replacement Pell grant reports and ACT Need Analysis reports have been requested for you and will be mailed to our office. Replacement verification documents are not required for those students already receiving financial aid.

Students who have not been awarded a Pell Grant must contact the Pell Grant Office, P.O. Box 92440, Los Angeles, CA 90009 and request duplicate copies of their Pell Grant reports. You may also call 800-638-6700 and request the duplicated copies. Verification documents may be requested by this office. Please bring the duplicate copies and verification documents (if requested) by our office as soon as possible. Replacement ACT Need Analysis copies have been requested for all students and will be mailed to this office.

Students will need to come by the Financial Aid Office and renew their aid for Spring. If you renewed your aid before the fire, please come by and renew it again. If you do not plan to enroll for Spring '83, please contact this office in order that we may award your financial aid package to some other deserving student.

From the Registrar's Office...

1. The repeat rule is effective starting in the spring semester. This rule means that the second grade will count as the final grade. On your transcript, a line will be typed through the course that has been repeated and a "R" will be placed in the left margin by the course.

2. If a student fails to satisfactorily complete a developmental course in 3 attempts, the student will be permanently suspended from NSU. (Reading 98 99 100; Math 100; English)

3. When a Freshman or Sophomore receives excessive unexcused absences (10% of total classes) the instructor may recommend to the student's academic dean that the student be withdrawn from the roll of that class and given the appropriate grade. (10% of MWF classes, 5 days absent, and 10% of TTh classes is 3 days absent)

Pre-registration

You did it, and don't deny it. It's all because of you, Northwestern students, that for the first time, we will have a pre-registration.

Starting at 12 noon, on Monday, November 22, in the Student Union Ballroom, all currently enrolled NSU-Natchitoches campus students will be able to register for spring classes, provided that they have correctly followed the required steps leading up to registration.

Dr. Austin Temple, Northwestern's hard-working Registrar, calls this, "A big step forward." And rightly so. Those long lines in August and January, the interminable wait, the absolute boredom, were all bitter pills. Now, registration ought to be much easier.

Of course, no one can expect it run absolutely smoothly, kinks still have to be worked out, but the improvement will be very, very noticeable.

Dr. Temple hopes that two thousand NSU students take advantage of pre-registration, and for those who do, and who follow all the necessary steps leading up to pre-registration, a guaranteed schedule will be theirs for the spring semester.

There is hope that in the future, other NSU campuses, i.e. Warrington, Fort Polk, can enjoy the same pre-registration advantage that we have, but for them, that will have to be under a different system.

For those graduating seniors who might be worried that by the time they get to sign up for their classes, it might be filled and they would have to postpone graduation, fear not. The department heads will be able to accommodate special cases like that. However, it should be noted, that if you are a last semester senior who needs a 100 level, or a lower 200 level course, that has been offered every semester that you have been here...TOUGH.

All in all, we should pat ourselves on the back for generating enough talk, and ultimately action of pre-registration, but let's also give credit where credit is due, and applaud the efforts of President Orze and Dr. Temple. Thanks guys!

Letter Policy

For all of you dear folks who so graciously give of your time to write letters to the SAUCE, we thank you. But there is just one thing. They are all unsigned, with a few exceptions. It is the policy of this paper not to print anything by an anonymous author. We will withhold names in certain cases, if you ask us to, or so specify on your letter, but we will not run letters that come into this office signed, Embarrassed at NSU, or something like it.

Please, we encourage letters, we will print anything that is not libelous, or purely distasteful, but please sign it if you want to see it in print.

Letter

As Mr. and Miss NSU elections are just around the corner, tomorrow to be exact, some people are already deciding on who they are going to vote for while others are deciding their cogitation for not voting.

The art of voting at Northwestern is very phlegmatic. People's excuses range from

"didn't have enough time to vote" to "it rained during the time the polls were open" to "I didn't know any of the candidates."

Voting is a privilege, as well as, a right. Regardless, if you want a change on campus or your friend is running for an office, your vote plays a major role in a candidate(s) getting elected.

Remember on tomorrow, that wise people vote because they feel their vote can bring about a change, fools do not vote because they do not know how to change. Which category will you fall in?

Kicking Your Own Bucket

Tom Kean, the young governor of New Jersey, is a practical fellow. No sooner did he sign a bill restoring capital punishment than he tackled the next question: how to go about it.

New Jersey's previous method was electrocution. But frankly, it smells. As every motorist who has passed through the Garden State knows, it doesn't need another stench.

Other methods in contemporary use include the noose, the guillotine, and the garrote, but all seem nearly as old hat as the stake and the headman's ax.

Utah uses a firing squad, but its productivity is low: It requires several executioners instead of one. Also, the movies have endowed it with a glamour that may reduce its value as a deterrent. Indeed, one notorious killer refused to be deprived of the honor.

California is as ever an innovator. It uses poison gas, an idea that may have been suggested by the atmosphere around Los Angeles.

But Kean (pronounced Cain) is even more avantgarde. He proposes a method that's right in tune with our times - the needle.

Presumably, the prisoner could opt for a sniff or a snort or a pill, whichever is his or her favorite means of chemical uplift.

Kean says injection would be nearly painless, and hence more humane than the electric chair. But then what happens to deterrence?

How many potential killers would fear the needle more than life in a New Jersey prison? Kean says he thinks some would, but he admits he can't prove it.

After all, 50,000 Americans incur the death penalty every year on the highways, yet it seems only a feeble deterrent to drunk and reckless driving. Highway patrols, speed limits, safety checks, stiff fines and revocation of licenses seem to work better than the threat of physical injury.

Deterrent or not, capital punishment is certainly popular. New Jersey is the 37th state to restore it. If they'd sell tickets, they'd do a bigger gross than horror movies.

Not so long ago, hangings were an important item of public entertainment. In the absence of handguns, murder was relatively scarce, so many lesser crimes as picking pockets qualified for the gibbet.

One of the favorite places for pickpockets to work was, obviously, in a crowd watching a hanging.

So much for deterrence. Nevertheless, there is the amusement factor, the moral uplift and the sense of godlike power that comes from the knowledge that we have extinguished one of our fellow sinners.

Another argument may be especially telling in New Jersey. Its high rate of unemployment must surely be affecting one of its substantial industries: organized crime.

The restoration of capital punishment is a job opening for at least one cold-blooded killer for hire. Applications should be addressed to the State House in Trenton, N. J.

Letter to The Editor

Dear Editor:

A.L. Williams was fired by Dr. Joseph Orze because he was unable to recruit enough quality players to compete on a year to year basis with the likes of Louisiana Tech, Northeast, or McNeese. Maybe it wasn't entirely his fault. Perhaps the administrators and alumni of Northwestern are more at fault for the athletic failures of the University then the coaching staff.

Recruiting should be an easy task for an NSU coach. Northwestern has a beautiful, modern athletic complex. The school has recently placed several players in the professional ranks and several of this year's players will have a chance to play professionally. The coaching staff spends numerous and long hours away from their homes and families trying to recruit players who will make Northwestern a winner. Yet most of the top players never seriously consider coming to NSU. Why?

What does Northwestern have to offer to the student athlete? Are there professional curriculums such as engineering or pharmacy? How does Northwestern's College of Business rate when compared to Northeast or Louisiana Tech? Why are high cost, low student count curriculums housed in beautiful surroundings while the majority of students have to attend classes in shabby, run down classrooms? Is it A.L. Williams' fault that student are housed in second rate dorms?

It's time for Northwestern's family of administrators, faculty, and alumni to wake up. Unless something is done, we won't have to worry about the record of the football team. Schools that are closed due to a lack of students don't play football.

Name withheld by request.

Dorm-life Complaints

It seems like every semester there is a new complaint with dormitory students. Either the air conditioners are broken, the heaters are broken, the rooms are flooding, or there's no toilet paper. Well, all those problems are back, plus a few new ones.

I don't know about you, but getting up at 3:00 in the morning for a fire drill is not exactly my idea of a good time. Last week the fire alarm went off three times in Natchitoches Dorm. I understand the importance of fire drills, especially after the Caldwell Hall tragedy, but how many times do we have to stand out in the cold in bare feet and robes? What really got me was during the last fire drill the apathy of the residents was evident and I don't blame them. Who believes there is a real fire? If there ever was one most of the students would probably just stay in bed.

To the person who runs around pulling the alarms for fun: I assure you that pulling fire alarms will not make you instantly popular or give you that much sought-after secret to success, so I would appreciate it if you divert that excess energy into something more constructive. You won't think it's so funny if you cost someone's life one day.

The other earth-shattering problem in Natchitoches Dorm is the absence of one of life's sustaining elements...the maids.

I don't mind sharing my clothes with my roommate, I don't mind sharing my Snickers with my friend, and I don't mind sharing my statistics notes with my classmates, but I positively refuse to share my maids with another dorm.

Have you ever tried waking up (between fire drills) in the wee hours before dawn, and cutting a path through the trash piled up in the hall to go to the bathroom? What is worse is, after the fact, finding out that because the maids didn't come today there is no toilet paper. I mean toilet paper is one of those things a person just shouldn't have to do without.

I have the perfect solutions: 1. Get maids for every dorm. Goodness, I'm paying $345.00 a semester to live in a dorm, I refuse to take out my own trash. What is my .345.00 being used for? It can't be going into fixing the air conditioners or the heater; and heaven knows it's not being used to clean or fix the showers.

2. Cut down on the fire drills. I've had enough of standing outside in my shortie PJ's in 40 degree temperatures. I appreciate someone's interest in seeing how fast a sleepy, 115 pound coed can run down two flights of stairs at 3:00 am, but believe me, if I smell smoke I'll do my darndest to get out fast and all in one piece.

Student Applauds 'Widespread Jazz'

In the 6 years that I have been attending NSU, I had not yet heard such perfection, harmony and precision from any of the "band" concerts held in the past until I was fortunate enough to attend the Jazz Concert held during the State Fair Week festivities. "The Widespread Jazz Orchestra" concert was one of the highlights of my present semester and past college days.

Besides their great music, each of the nine members had a special and interesting personality which could be felt in their music as they performed solos with different instruments. The vocals were outstanding. With their headquarters being located in New York, they have been traveling long and hard hours but still, they perform with a refreshing style and are all true Northern gentlemen. There were comments of "southern bells" and the colonial style homes. They all seemed to be up on the history of Natchitoches but said that they were on the road too much to tour all there was to see.

After the concert their first concern was food and lodging, not to mention partying some. They had arrangements to stay at the El Camino. After checking in and changing clothes all but two of the members proceeded to walk in the direction of Domino's Pizza. This walking tour included 3 washaterias, 1 7-11, and a pit stop by the pizza place which promptly delivered pizza's right across the street to the "Rustic Inn." The evening then consisted of food, spirits, conversation, pool and darts.

After retiring from the Inn only two jazz members were still hanging in there. The next adventure consisted of watching "The Life of Riley" and "Beach-Party." They then left for their lodgings. The next morning consisted of breakfast and a discussion of Caldwell Hall (which was in the headlines of the Shreveport morning paper). They said that their tour had been rough and hectic at times but they were delighted with Natchitoches and the warm reception that followed. As they headed for Texas for their next concert, they commented that they would like to return again to Natchitoches and again play to an audience that showed appreciation for the arts, music, and friendship.

Those who missed "The Widespread Jazz Orchestra" truly missed a celebration of jazz at its finest. I extend many thanks to the Fine Arts committee for such a delightful evening and place a request for an encore performance in the near future.

Theater/Speech Events

Beatrice Dawson

The Department of Theatre and Speech reports on two of its major events for the semester: a coke can contest for the upcoming play "El Grande de Coca-Cola" and the success of the first play "Home".

A musical revue by Ron House and Dig White, "El Grande de Coca-Cola" will be directed by Nan L. Stephenson, who is the director of the theatre, and will run Nov. 15-19. The play will consist of a flexible cast and a scene design made of coke cans.

As a result of the play, the department is sponsoring a coke can contest. Therefore, each and any organization on campus will have the opportunity to compete with each other in collecting cans.

The rules for the contest are as follows:

1. There must be at least 50 cans to enter the contest. However, any amount donated will be accepted.

2. All coke cans must be empty.

3. Cans may be brought to room 410 of Keyser Hall, in the mornings, or to room 402-A, in the afternoons. The deadline for turning in all cans is Nov. 5.

"Prizes will be given by the Bottling Co. of Natchitoches, who has been real helpful," stated Miss Stephenson. "These prizes will be presented Nov. 11 in Keyser Auditorium before the movie "Arthur" begins," she added.

Each of the five groups will receive special recognition during a certain night of the play.

The production will be held in the Student Union Ballroom with "alcoholic beverages" served, the Director inserted.

The department also highlighted the semester with its production of "Home" by Samm-Art Williams.

Directed by Dr. Robert Black, "Home" entered the La. College Theatre Festival at La. Tech. "Overall, I felt it was a success," commented Dr. Black. "The audience loved it, I loved it, and I know the cast enjoyed doing it because they gained a lot from it," he exclaimed.

In addition to the play, Susan Haga, a student playwright, got first place for "Rockerfeller Square" - a one-act play; Vince Williams, who portrayed Cephus in "Home", received the Irene Ryan award - both will go on to Fort Worth and compete in other events; and Dr. Black, along with five other directors, received a citation. "Although our play wasn't nominated, we did come back with a few awards and are quite pleased with the outcome of the play," concluded Dr. Black.

Department of Theater and Speech Receives Awards

Vince Williams of Natchitoches was nominated for the Irene Ryan Acting Scholarship, and Dr. Robert Black received the Amoco Award for outstanding play directing to highlight Northwestern's participation last week at the Louisiana college Theatre Festival in Ruston.

A senior theatre-speech major, Williams was one of 14 collegiate actors and actresses from Louisiana who received nominations for the $750 scholarship to be given to a student at the Region VI Festival Jan. 16-23 in Ft. Worth, Tex.

The 12 regional scholarship winners will be in Washington, D.C., in the spring to participate in "Evening of Scenes," which will highlight the National College Theatre Festival. Two student performers are awarded $2,500 scholarships at the National Festival.

Williams was nominated for his portrayal of Cephus, the lead role in "Home," a play by Samm-Art Williams which deals joyfully with the coming of age of a young black man from rural South Carolina.

The play, which was NSU's entry in the Louisiana College Theatre Festival, was directed by Black, professor and head of the Theatre-Speech Department at Northwestern. Black was one of five college and university directors who received the Amoco Award for outstanding direction of a play.

Also at the state festival in Ruston, Northwestern junior English major Susan Haga of Many had her one-act play, "Rockefeller Square," selected for the regional competition in Ft. Worth.

In addition to Black, NSU faculty members Michael Atkins, Ray Schexnider and Nan Stephenson also attended the five-day festival hosted by Louisiana Tech University.

Schexnider was Northwestern's official representative at the Louisiana Division of the Arts meeting conducted during the state festival. "The general thrust of the meeting was that we urged the formation of a professional theatre repertory company in Louisiana," said Schexnider.

Continuing Education 'Plugging Along'

The Caldwell Hall fire left many offices without a home, but the office of Continuing Education found a new nesting place in East Caspari and is plugging right along, despite their enormous loss.

Mike McCallister of Continuing Ed. didn't even know about the fire until early Tuesday morning when Kathryn Beasley, project coordinator, called and told him.

According to McCallister, they had planned on moving the Office of Continuing Ed. into Caspari, however, being ahead of schedule was not in the plans. Nevertheless, Tuesday afternoon everyone started the big clean up project before being able to move in.

All the departments that were not hurt in the fire offered supplies, desks, and typewriters in order to help out with starting over. "They really pitched in a really nice way," McCallister said.

"Decisions were made quickly. Dean Galloway did an excellent job in heading it."

All of McCallister's personal stuff was lost in the fire, as was all the paperwork for the lignite research, grants for training surface miners, and the PIPS program.

The Office of Continuing Ed affects not only the university, but also, the community with all the programs it has to offer at a temporary slowdown. "There is one advantage, though," laughed McCallister.

"Everyone's office has a lavatory. And plus, with my new windows being on the east and south side, I'm going to have the prettiest plants on campus."

Family Day At NSU November 6

Family Day will be observed at Northwestern Saturday in conjunction with the NSU-Nicholls State University in a special halftime ceremony Gov. Dave Treen will be the guest of NSU president Dr. Joseph J. Orze in the stadium's President's Box.

Coordinated by NSU dean of students Dr. Fred C. Bosarge, Family Day is celebrated each year to honor and recognize parents and other family members of Northwestern students for their important roles in the success of the university.

"Northwestern students have taken great pride in their university home through the years and have enjoyed sharing their campus lives with their families," said Orze.

Bosarge said, "The purpose of Family Day is to attract parents and immediate family members of enrolled undergraduate students to the campus for a period of positive recognition and courtesies provided by the university. Our primary goal is to foster a sense of one big family. From this event, we hope to gain the ongoing support of parents and families as a special constituency served by Northwestern."

Bosarge anticipates that more than 1,000 individuals will participate in this year's Family Day observance, which begins with an open house program from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in campus residence halls, fraternity and sorority houses and at the Outdoor Recreation Complex.

A reception honoring families of NSU's undergraduate students is scheduled from 4 p.m. to 5:30 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom. Visitors pass for members of students' families to attend Saturday night's game as guests of the university may be obtained during the reception.

Bosarge said families of students may sit in the student section of the stadium, in general admission seats or in Sections B, J, or K on the reserved side.

During the reception, the university's academic departments will have special exhibits on display. Information will also be available on student life and financial aid.

Winning Season Just Around The Corner

As the Demons began to close out their 1982 football campaign, it is time now sit down and take the first look at the Demon football season. Northwestern is 5-3, up to this point in the season with three tough games left on the schedule. Two of the Demons last three games will be played in the friendly confines of Turpin Stadium.

Northwestern after a week of rest puts its 5-3 record on the line against the Nicholls State University Colonels. A victory will give the Demons a winning season, the first in two years and only three in the last seven years. To achieve this milestone the Demons only have to win one of the last three games of the season.

The only other winning seasons for the Demons under the A. L. Williams reign have been a 6-5 record and a 8-3 record, which was then followed up by a poor 4-6 year with just about every starter returning but 12 seniors. I know that some of these losses were of key people, but on the defensive side of things the majority was returnees, one would expect better than a 4-6 mark.

The Demons now only need to win only one of the last three games to insure a winning season, so let's all show a little school spirit and get out and support the Demons and help push them on to victory and a third winning season in seven years.

Yugoslavian Team To Play In Exhibition Game

The Natchitoches Lions Club Second Annual Benefit basketball game will be held November 18 in NSU's Prather Coliseum when the Demons host Yugoslavia in an exhibition contest. The game will start at 7:30 p.m.

The contest is sponsored by the Natchitoches Lions Club, with the proceeds going to the Lions Crippled Children's and Sight Conservation programs, along with the NSU basketball program.

Tickets for the exhibition contest are $4 for adults and $1 for students and can be purchased from Lion Club members and will be on sale at the door the night of the game.

Along with the basketball game, which will be the first public appearance for the 1982-83 Demon squad, several other activities are being planned by the Lions Club.

There will be several drawings for prizes, halftime will feature tug of war contests between NSU fraternities and sororities and also at halftime there will be several high school dance lines performing.

Last year the Lions club sponsored the pre-season exhibition game in which the Demons defeated a touring team from Mexico by a 105-79 score.

The Yugoslavia team will play eight games on its 10-day trip to the United States. The trip will open November 13 at Texas-Arlington and the squad will also play at Hardin-Simmons and at Centenary before making Northwestern the fourth stop on the trip.

"From what information we have Yugoslavia is a big, strong, physical team that has a lot of veteran players," said Demon Coach Wayne Yates.

"It will be a good contest for us. They are seasoned in international competition and have been playing together for a number of years."

"We are looking forward to the first competition of the season and are very appreciative of the support of the Lions Club," added Yates.

"They give us a big boost each year with the exhibition game."

We all felt last season was a big success and I know we will be playing a much better team this year than we did a year ago."

The Demons will open the regular season at home on December 1 when they host Arkansas-Little Rock, the defending conference champion and the pre-season favorite for the 1982-83 title.

Lady Demons Showing Improvement

Northwestern Lady Demon basketball Coach Pat Pierson says her squad is showing steady improvement at the Lady Demons prepare for the season opener at home on November 27 against McNeese State University.

The Lady Demons return four starters from the team that posted an 18-7 record last season and Pierson says those returning players and some talented newcomers give her more depth than she has had before.

"Our four returning veterans have to show the new players some leadership," says Pierson. "And so far they have. We have a number of freshmen who will be thrown into the fire right away, and so far they seem to be accepting the challenge of that."

The four returning starters include center Tracy Taylor, forwards Stephanie Washington and Kim Paulk and guard Lisa Carter. Guard Johnnie Kay Heard is the other returning letter-winner.

The Lady Demon inside game has been slowed somewhat in early workouts because of the absence of Taylor, who is just starting practicing again this week after having her tonsils removed.

Improved shooting and added quickness are what Pierson says should be the strong points this season, while there is concern for a lack of depth behind Taylor at center. "Overall our shooting has been much better than it was last season," said Pierson.

"And all of our new players have so much quickness."

At 6-3 Taylor is the only returning player over six-feet tall while freshman Val Williams is an even six feet. "We aren't that big inside but our veterans like Stephenie, Kim and Lisa are all good rebounders," noted Pierson. "And Val goes to the offensive board real well and has improved everyday."

"We know that until Val gets some experience we are thin behind Tracy," admitted Pierson. "And Tracy is aware of that. She is concentrating on cutting down on her fouls because she knows she will have to be in there most of the time, at least early in the season."

Even with the veterans returning, Pierson has been impressed with her freshmen. "We just have never had this kind of depth," added Pierson. "These freshmen are very talented and Johnnie Kay Heard has improved tremendously from last season. She also can really help us."

While Pierson isn't sure of a starting line-up, she also says it really isn't a concern. "We have at least nine players who are going to play a lot so it doesn't matter who the starters are," pointed out Pierson.

"We are going to take advantage of our quickness and depth. We will use full court pressure and run the ball on the break at every chance we have," said Pierson.

"With that style we plan to use a lot of players each game and hopefully keep them fresh."

With the fast break style and using a number of freshmen, Pierson and assistant Coach James Smith say they will expect some mistakes. "You just try to keep the mistakes at a minimum," noted Pierson.

"We know we will make some mistakes in this style of play. Plus the college game is different to our freshmen and it will take them some time to adapt. Fortunately we feel they have the talent to make that adjustment quickly and they seem to pick up different things each day."

The Lady Demons will have a tough early schedule. After hosting McNeese State in the opener, the Lady Demons will play at Northeast Louisiana and then take part in the Lady Techster Dian classic at Louisiana Tech.

In the first round of that eight-team tournament the Lady Demons will face Cheyney State, the team that placed second in the nation behind Louisiana Tech last season.

Yates Impressed With Pre-season Practice

Northwestern basketball Coach Wayne Yates says he's not ready to start the season yet, but that he has been impressed with the way his Demon squad has looked in the first week of practice.

Yates has three starters returning from the squad that posted a 19-9 overall mark last season while placing second in the Trans America Conference regular season race. Yates feels that gives him a solid foundation for this season.

"Our four seniors are doing a tremendous job of providing us with leadership," said Yates following the first week of practice. "Our enthusiasm and team spirit is the best it's been. There seems to be a good team feeling."

Those four seniors returning for their final year include Calvin Madlock, Johnny Martin, Harry Francis and Kenny Hale. All were starters last season except Francis, who proved very valuable as a sixth man who could play both forward and guard.

Yates says one of the main strengths of his squad this season will be the versatility. "Our inside people are very similar and we have several players that can play any of the three inside positions," added Yates. "This should allow us more freedom in moving people in and out of the line-up."

"We should be able to press and change our defenses much more this season and be more effective this year," continued Yates, who has a 30-26 mark after two years at Northwestern. "When you play this style you have to have depth. With the depth we have this season more players will get playing time without hurting the ballclub."

After the first week of workouts the point guard position is being shared by junior Fred Walker and freshman Brian Jolivet. Walker was reshirted last season. "You can tell that Fred has been here for a year in that he knows what we are looking for," said Yates.

Hale returns at the wing guard and Francis and freshman DeShon Jenkins are also playing there. Francis will play both the wing guard and small forward positions. Hale was the second leading scorer on the team a year ago.

Up front Yates has several players who will see a lot of action. They include returning starters Martin and Madlock, returning lettermen Anthony French and Jerry Harris and four newcomers, juniors Jeff Ringham, A.J. Culbreath and Robin Grays and freshman Donald Mays.

Although three starters do return, Yates says his squad will definitely miss the outside shooting of Wayne Waggoner and the inside play of Earnest Reliford, the two seniors who were starters last season.

"I'm not sure our starting five will be as good as last year," admitted Yates. "But on the other hand, our top ten players will be deeper. We will have more depth and we will have good flexibility with the people we have playing inside."

The Demons will open the season with an exhibition contest on November 18 against a touring squad from Yugoslavia and the open the regular season at home December 1 against defending league champion Arkansas-Little Rock.

"We have to work hard this month to get ready because we can't afford a slow start," concluded Yates. "Our first few games are tough ones and our first two league games are against Little Rock and Houston Baptist, probably the two best teams in the league. We will certainly have to be ready that first night."

Demon Playground

The flag-football regular season came to an end last week as teams from the four divisions played their final games, excluding the post-season games being held this week.

On Monday the VIPs took a 19-6 victory away from UnKappa 5th's number one team. Susan Princee led the way for the VIPs with two touchdowns and an extra point. Chic Jeans came away with a narrow win over Sigma Kappa by a score of 13-12. Jammy Curry and Penny Powell both scored six points, while Jenny Johnson and Gina Roussaux did all the scoring for Sigma Kappa with a touchdown apiece.

TKF fell to Theta Chi 19-14 as Fred Teraca scored 12 points. James McClain added six more for the victors. Marty Guillory led TKF with two touchdowns in the contest. In the independent league, YANG One crushed Zoom 26-6. Joe Cunningham paced the YANGsters with 12 points, while Donny Harrison and Chris Moran scored seven and six points respectively. Rand Metoyer scored Zoom's only touchdown of the day.

In the final game of the day, it was the 'Battle of Rapides' as East Rapides challenged the Rapides Knights. In the end, it was E'Raps who came away the conquerors with a 13-6 triumph.

On Tuesday, it was again Susan Princee leading the way for the VIPs with 13 points, as they rolled to a 26-7 win over the Tri-Sigs.

David Nardini almost single-handedly defeated Sig Tau, as he scored 25 points in Theta Chi's 34-19 romp. Nardini turned in an MVP-type performance as he accounted for four touchdowns and one extra point in the victory. YANG One finished the regular season with a sterling 5-0 record, thanks to a 25-6 trouncing of Kingpins. David Sailors, Joe Cunningham, Dean Napoli, and Donny Harrison all scored one T.D. apiece in the victory for YANG, who allowed only 12 points in five games.

UnKappa 5th's number one shutout Sigma Kappa on Wednesday to take a 28-0 victory. Cindy Wigly scored 14 points for U.K., while Sherri Brooks contributed 12.

Kappa Sig's second team finished their regular season with a 20-6 routing of Kappa Alpha. Russell Bienvenu paced the Sig Dogs with two touchdown passes and Doug Williamson added a T.D. and an extra point to help in the win. KA finally got on the board with just over a minute and a half left in the game when many of the Sig's starters had left the game.

The Kingpins assured themselves of a playoff berth with a 19-12 victory over 10 Blind Boys. The Steelers captured a first place finish in the Orange division with a 5-0 record as they defeated the Jocks 18-14, who finished 4-1 in the same division for second place. Walter Pinkston, David Monette, and Lamar Johnson all contributed six points for the Steelers. Jerry Nowell scored two touchdowns for the Jocks.

On Thursday Kappa Sig's first team picked up where their second team left off as they destroyed KA 41-6. The score was 13-0 at the end of the first half, before the Dogs got it together. Mike Brown and Randy Bonnette each scored two times, while David Webb and Rog "ain't we somethin'" Reynolds added eight and six points respectively.

In the last game of the day, Sigma Kappa used a strong team effort to beat Phi Mu 27-

Reynolds And Sledge Win Week's Picks

Sports Editor Roger Reynolds continued to impress the rest of the Porker Picker Panel with his unbelievably dumb, but lucky, predictions abilities, and guest panelist Scott Sledge picked the Emory and Henry upset over Hampden and Sidney, to garner top honors for the week.

Reynolds was the only panelist to successfully pick the Arizona St. win over USC, and thereby moved into a first place tie with Joe "Graceful" Cunningham (6-4), who had a poor week and a hapless weekend.

Alison "I'm on a roll" Breazeale (6-4) and John "Coolhead" Cunningham, (also 6-4), are tied for fourth place, only three games behind the front runners. Also going 6-4 for the week was Melanie "I should have listened to Scott instead of Joe" Campbell who moved that guest selector's spot a meager one game out of first.

"Dynamite" Dudley Hall, fell to 5-5 for the week, despite the fact that he picked three ties.

Reynolds and Joe Cunningham have waged a battle for the top spot for the entire year, but John Cunningham, in a interview with KNWD said, "I am just waiting for the right time to make my move to the top."

This week's guest selector's include Donna Jo "From Kokomo" Kelly, and Barbi "Doll" Hall. Also picking this week is Diamond Jim "Please Coach, let me play this year" Oliver. Frequently referred to as "O", Diamond Jim lists as his greatest memory, the warm spring day last April when he fouled off three consecutive pitches in a meaningless intra-squad scrimmage. This year "O" hopes to have a batting average.

More Demon Playground

6. Janice Duggan led all scorers with two touchdowns. Jenny Johnson and Gina Roussaux added seven points apiece to round out the scoring for Sigma Kappa. Lynn Claryscored Phi Mu's only touchdown.

In the intramural tennis tournament held last week at the rec. complex, YANG took top honors in both men's events. Brothers Parker and Tony Thompson gave YANG the men's doubles championship as they defeated Joe Bienvenu and Paul Pickering, also of YANG in the final round. In the men's singles event Parker Thompson put YANG on top again with a final-round victory over Franklin Silva of Kingpins.

Angela Lasyone and Lynn Clary teamed up to give Phi Mu a first place finish in the women's doubles competition. Sherri Brooks and Renee Richard of UnKappa 5th took second. Lasyone also finished first in the singles division, as she defeated U.K. 5th's Annette Manuel.

The flag-football playoffs begin today at 4:00 at the intramural fields, with the first round of competition. On Wednesday the second round of playoffs will be held, with the finals being played on Thursday. The men's Independent champion will take on the men's Greek champion in a Super Bowl, to be held next week at Turpin Stadium. The women's first place finisher will take on the runnerup in a Super Bowl that will also be played on the turf next week.

Orze Formally Installed As NSU President

Dr. Joseph J. Orze was formally installed as Northwestern's 15th president by Wiley Sharp, President, Board of Trustees for State Colleges and Universities, during the investiture convocation in Prather Coliseum on Nov. 5.

Keynote speaker Alan W. Ostar announced Orze's appointment of president elect to the American Association for State Colleges and Universities. He said how 'fortunate NSU is to have Orze's caliber of leadership' and 'Quality education is a primary goal at NSU', which Northwestern has carried out since 1884, he said. He also discussed 'Regionalism' and how a state university primarily serves those in its region.

In the investiture address, 'The Ecology of a University,' Orze summarized his goal for NSU as 'excellence and integrity.' He later explained that in making perceptions realities, the university needs to 'turn inwardly to assess its self-image' while believing in one another so that others can do the same.

Dr. Orze said that he considers himself a 'pragmatic idealist,' and that we need to have confidence when making goals and to see them 'worthy of attainment' while setting priorities to achieve them.

Dr. Orze went on to say that the university as an 'educational environment' should identify strengths as well as weaknesses, building upon strengths and either correct weaknesses, or realize sometimes that it is necessary to delete these programs. Since 'universities, like people, it cannot be all things to all people.'

Three areas were cited by Orze as examples of where he sees 'excellence within the University or the potential for its development.' First was the College of Education, which he said must 'diligently reassess itself and the scope of its programs: It can and must be on of the pinnacles of excellence.'

Next, in talking about the College of Nursing, soon to offer the Ph.D. program, he described, as a 'recognized pinnacle of excellence.' It also has new facilities undergoing construction.

Finally Dr. Orze touched on the A. A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts soon to become an even greater asset to NSU and to the school of arts. There are, of course, other areas that have excellence and potential for development, said Orze.

He emphasized how effective winning athletic teams are in recruitment, mentioning that those who support athletics usually do the same for academics. Believing that a healthy mind is related to a healthy body, athletics are a 'complement' to academics. He then praised NSU's Intramural department and announced the 'refurbishing and expansion of the building is the number one capital outlay priority for the university and is among the top three priorities of our Board of Trustees.'

Dr. Art Laffer To Speak November 16

Arthur B. Laffer, author of the supply-side theory of economics and the man whose 'Laffer's Curve' was the basis of President Reagan's economic policy will speak on Tuesday November 16 at 11 a.m. in Kyser Hall Auditorium. 11 o'clock classes will be dismissed for the second presentation in the NSU Distinguished Lecture Series. The lecture is open to the public, free of charge.

He first drew the diagram for his 'Laffer's Curve' on a restaurant napkin in 1974 to show a colleague how tax cuts could increase government revenue. Most of the economic establishment dismissed the Laffer Curve as too simplistic.

Laffer's curve shows that as tax rates rise from zero, revenues increase—but only until an optimum point is reached. If taxes are increased further, he says, they discourage consumer spending and business investment, thus reducing revenues.

Laffer's star began to rise when Proposition 13 became a popular cause in California.

He was tagged the "guru of the tax revolt" by writers of different publications familiar with the tax-cutting sentiments of both the state's electorate and Laffer.

The day of the Proposition 13 vote he flew home to cast his "yes" vote and was greeted at Los Angeles International airport by state Republican leaders asking him what they should pursue next.

After that, his rise to celebrity did not curve but shot straight up. He was the first economist candidate Ronald Reagan asked to support his campaign and Laffer's proposals have been examined in every major newspaper and magazine in the country. Laffer currently is a member of the President's Economic Advisory Board.

Laffer supports Reagan though he readily admits that he does not agree with the President on many issues. "The economics, of course, take priority," Laffer says. "They might not always if the economy was not in such trouble, but now they have to, and I agree with Reagan's views on that."

NSU Graduates Rank High In Law School Study

A study of first-year performances at the Louisiana State University Law School in Baton Rouge reveals that in 1980-81 Northwestern graduates had the highest rate of success among students receiving their undergraduate pre-law training at Louisiana public universities other than LSU.

According to "Performance of LSU Law Students: The 1980-81 Freshman Class," which was published in the summer issue of "Louisiana Law Review," nine of the 15 students from Northwestern who entered the LSU Law School that year were successful and declared eligible to enroll for the second year of studies.

The 60 percent success rate for Northwestern's pre-law graduates in their first year of law school was the highest for the nine institutions classified in the study as Louisiana public universities.

Northwestern also ranked third overall in the study's evaluation of success rate by universities. Ahead of Northwestern were Centenary College—3 of 4 for 75 percent—and LSU Baton Rouge, 106 of 151 for 70 percent.

As a group, students trained at the undergraduate level at the nine Louisiana public universities ranked third behind LSU-Baton Rouge's 70 percent success rate and the 56% achieved by students from out of state.

According to the study, one-third of the LSU Law School's freshman class in 1980-81 came from the Louisiana public universities.

Conducting the research for the study and authoring the article in the official journal of the LSU Law School were Carolyn Hoper Hargrave, provost and vice-chancellor for academic affairs at LSU, and Lee Hargrave, a professor of law at LSU.

IET Program Granted Full Accreditation

The accreditation board of the National Association of Industrial Technology has granted full accreditation for two years to the baccalaureate degree program in industrial technology at Northwestern.

Northwestern is the first college or university in Louisiana to have an industrial technology program at the associate, baccalaureate or masters level accredited by the professional organization.

Dr. Charles Wommack, head of the Department of Industrial Education and Technology at NSU, said the National Association of Industrial Technology has recognized only 26 programs in industrial technology nationwide as meeting its standards for accreditation.

"Our department, which prepares undergraduate students for management position in industry, has been strengthened through the efforts of the faculty and administration during the year-long accreditation study to ensure that the department met the rigid standards of the organization," stated Wommack.

He added, "The recognition given the industrial technology program by an outside organization was very encouraging. Program direction provided by representatives of education and industry should have long-range benefits for Northwestern."

Wommack was in San Francisco last month when the association's accreditation board reviewed Northwestern's application and on-site evaluation report. He was notified this week that the program has been granted full accreditation.

Northwestern's Department of Industrial Education and Technology applied for accreditation in 1981, and in the spring of 1982 a three-member accreditation team visited the NSU campus to conduct an evaluation of the four-year program.

Alison Breazeale, Cindy Duke, Lytt Allen, and Joe Stamey won the primary elections for Mr. and Miss NSU last Wednesday, and now the four will meet again in a runoff this Wednesday for the University's highest honor.

Dr. Ford Attends SCMLA

Dr. Christine Pickering Ford attended the thirty-ninth meeting of The South Central Modern Language Association in San Antonio, October 28-30, where she chaired the Modern Drama session. Prior to this chairmanship, Dr. Ford has presented papers on Henry Adams and Eugene O'Neill.

On campus, Dr. Ford is an Assistant Professor of English in the Department of Languages. The founding sponsor of ARGUS, the University's multi-media magazine, Dr. Ford is also sponsor of Sigma Tau Delta, Choir Received

Well By Audience

The 1982-83 NSU Artist Series opened Tuesday night, November 2, with a performance by the Norman Luboff choir. The 8 p.m. concert, held in the Concert Recital Hall of Northwestern's new A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts, was performed before a crowd of over 400 which included NSU students, faculty, staff and people of the Natchitoches community.

Concert-goers did not seem to mind sitting in the portable folding chairs set up in the recital hall--since most of the furniture for the center is not yet available. At least twenty persons were standing in the back of the hall or sitting in the aisles.

The choir was well-received by the crowd and was awarded a standing ovation at their performance's end.

The choir's performance included songs from the 17th century to the 20th century by such composers as Frederick Handel, Vivaldi, Verdi, Pablo Casals, Hoffman, and Robert Schumann. One number especially enjoyed by the crowd was "Saul", written by Hoffman. "Saul", combining narration with singing, told the biblical story of the conversion of the disciple Saul on the road to Damascus.

The Norman Luboff choir was well received by the audience and was awarded a standing ovation at their performance's end. They performed three extra numbers as encores.

With over 50 LPs, a decade of concert engagements, and many television appearances to their credit, the Norman Luboff Choir is composed of 18 singers--9 males and 9 females--a pianist, and the conductor/composer Norman Luboff. According to Tony Smith, NSU Artist Series chairman, "The Norman Luboff Choir is certainly the most professional vocal group touring America today".

Student Union Governing Board In Process Of Changing Game Room Into "The Pub"

The Student Union Governing Board is in the process of changing the atmosphere of part of the Student Union Games Area. But as with project of such magnitude at a university, it cannot be accomplished without student input. All students of Northwestern State University will have equal access to this project--before it is completed because of their input and after it is completed with their support of the facility.

For the past few years the SUGB has been working on his project in the Games Area that would basically enhance the social needs of the NSU students as well as the faculty. Once completed the area should provide a better place for entertainment at NSU. The SUGB tries to fill those hours that the student is not in the classroom or studying and this area in the Games Area would fill some of this idle time.

For lack of a better name this area in the back of the Games area is being referred to as "The Pub." It will be a place for students to meet socially after class and provide an area for coffeehouse type entertainment.

If anyone is interested in the project and would like to be in on this major renovation, contact Floyd James, 2nd Vice-President of the SUGB.

Opinion

A few weeks ago as I was flipping through Parade magazine, an interesting article caught my eye. Since this was right before Halloween and the moving of NSU's acclaimed ghost, Isabella, anything having to do with spirits or unusual happenings quickly captured my attention.

I have read many ghost stories, but somehow this one has remained on my mind. I really believe it is because of my sympathy for the lost souls of those who have lost their loves. It is for that reason I would like to share this story with you. I hope that because Halloween is over you may feel a deeper emotion other than fright.

Judith was the daughter of Robert Sheegog, the man who built Rowan Oak—a big white house in Oxford, Mississippi in 1844. She was a lovely, strong-willed, black-haired 14 year old when the Yankees came to Oxford for the first time during the War Between the States. She fell in love with her blue-coated soldier the moment she saw him. And, although their time together was all too brief, she believed with all her heart that, after he left her to rejoin his Illinois regiment, he would come back for her as soon as he could.

The war years were long and hard, but Judith waited patiently. When she heard that Yankee soldiers were entering Oxford for the second time, she did not doubt that her Yankee would be with them and that he was coming back to claim her, his only love.

As the Yankees swarmed into the town square and put their torches to the clapboard buildings, Judith waited calmly in the shadings of a huge magnolia tree at home, barely a mile from the blazing devastation. Her small bag was packed, hidden beneath the low-hanging branches, and she wore her only good dress. She knew he would come, and she was ready. She waited all night and through the endless hours and minutes of the next day.

By twilight, she knew that he was never going to come for her. She slowly climbed the wide steps that led to her bedroom, where she carefully unpacked her bag and put her things away. She smoothed her dress and walked out onto the balcony high above the brick wall below. She looked out into the tall cedars that bordered the driveway as if she were seeing it all for the first time.

No one knows whether Judith jumped or fell from the balcony, but her parents buried her beneath the old magnolia tree where she had waited for her Yankee.

Today, the spirit of Judith is still alive. She made her presence felt as recently as last Halloween, in the Parlor of Rowan Oak, which the University of Mississippi now maintains as a museum. At twilight, when the day's guests were gone and the old house was silent, the assistant curator was alone in the kitchen. He heard soft strains of a Chopin Waltz. Someone was playing the piano. Puzzled at how someone could have entered the locked house after visiting hours, he hurried through the dining room toward the parlor. Just as he entered the doorway, the music ceased. He stared intently into the still, quiet parlor. There was no one there at all—except, of course, Judith. —Lesla Hatley

Cut The Bull And Play Ball

by John L. Hess

On Sundays in TV-land, the empty hours between mornings services and the first ballgames are whiled away by heavy talk about public affairs. On one recent Sabbath, they invited Background Noise to comment on labor relations in pro football.

John Hess

He blew his stack.

It seems that the peasants were demanding a share of the gross. The old charmer snorted:

"Management takes all the risk!"

After a thoughtful pause, one of the panelists said: "Howard, what about the player who gets crippled in his first season?"

Never at a loss, Howie snapped: "He knew the chance he was taking."

Only those who never watch football will think I made that up.

Howie and I are old enough to remember when fans and journalists alike identified with the home team. That of course meant the players; it was dimly known that they had owners, but hardly anybody even knew their names.

Then one day the Brooklyn Dodgers were sold to Los Angeles, and pro ball became a business like any other. The name on the shirt might say Mudville, but that was only until some other town made a better offer.

As I write, the city of Oakland is in court trying to keep the Raiders from skipping to L.A. It tried a novel approach: to seize the team by right of eminent domain, the way it might take property for a downtown development.

It lost the first round, and will probably lose all. The courts are reluctant to mess with private property unless it stands in the way of a developer's bulldozer.

Yet the city has a point. The name of Oakland or Mudville or whatever belongs to the place. Why shouldn't the team belong to the team belong to the town, the way a school team belongs to a school?

The New York Yankees belong to one George Steinbrenner, who may be the most disagreeable master since Simon Legree. His chattels, last year's champions, publicly plead to be sold down the river rather than toil in his cotton fields at any price.

Jaded by Steinbrenner's snarls of class hatred for his losers, the local sports writers have given up. They now shrug and say, "Well, it's his team."

Yet New York's taxpayers have invested well more than $20 in the Yankees for every dollar Steinbrenner put in. Just before he bought the club, the city bought Yankee Stadium and rebuilt it, allegedly to keep the club from departing.

It could have acquired the club for $10 million. Counting interest, the stadium bill many top $250 million.

The city can't afford to repair its bridges or police its streets, but it has just granted $5 million a year in tax subsidies to keep its hockey team from pulling out.

The argument is that the team brings big bucks into town. But the hotel keepers, theater owners and restaurants who receive these bucks do not volunteer to shell out a few to keep the team in town.

The problem is that we Americans don't savvy private enterprise the way Adam Smith did. From his observation of businessmen in Britain, Smith noted their penchant to rig the game. He said they never met together but what they'd end in a conspiracy against the public.

Pro sports became a cartel early on. A cartel is the opposite of free enterprise. The owners locked up the market, and traded players like cattle. An infamous Supreme Court opinion held that sports were not a business and therefore athletes were not entitled to the protection of the 14th Amendment or the Sherman Act.

Unions finally emancipated the slaves. Then along came the TV megabucks, and the business spun out of control. The game is still a good show, in some ways better than ever, but the audience, isolated in its living rooms, has itself become a commodity to be traded like the players of yore.

Wouldn't it be nice to return the game to the players and the fans?

Ghost Moving A Success

Dear Editor:

The ghost Isabella is moved and has a new home. The last time we spoke with her she expressed her surprise at the large number of NSU students, Natchitoches citizens and other friends who joined her in her historic journey. Some crowd estimates reach as high as 750 people and needless to say, we were all very pleased. Although you may have only seen a few people working hard that night, there were many people who had worked very hard behind the scene to help produce the Halloween night extravaganza. I would like to thank all those people: they include Loran Lindsey,, August Baxter, Camille Hawthorne, Dr. Sally Hunt, Robert Oje, Nolan Bailey, Dr. Dennis Oneal, Melvin Moreau, all the fine and helpful employees at the NSU Bookstore, Michael W. Atkins and Nan Stevenson for answering the phone for our last minute questions and help, Troop E, Det. 1 of the 256th Cavalry, Louisiana National Guard and the Natchitoches Municipal Airport for their special effects assistance, Scott Repp for last minute stand-ins, Jim and Anna Bechtel, Debbie Keene, Joe Cunningham, Jim Johnson and Don Sepulvado for their quick action, Mrs. Ora Williams for the history and background information, Mr. Richard Senate of Ventura, Ca. for his ghostly advice, Joe Stamey and the SGA for all their help, Alicia Haynes and the SUGB for all their help and for the use of their equipment, all the NSU fraternities, sororities and organizations who came out to participate, the fine people of Natchitoches for joining NSU in our celebration, the NSU marching band for adding the necessary sounds and music for our little march, Tammy Lloid for her provisions and help and of course, Tommy Whitehead for his advice, phone numbers and support.

Of course none of this could have been possible without the fantastic work of the staff of KNWD. Their advice, input and cooperation in producing the move was key to its success. These people behind the scenes were: Paul Rino, Ginny Whitaker, Randy Adcock, Ferrell Sonnier, Tommy Mayweather, Ted Schouten, Gary (state queen jester) Minhardt, Stephanie Samuels, Lisa Denmon, Jeff Harris, John Luttrell, and Cecile Saltzman. Special thanks go out to Greg Lloid for all the time, running around, late night work, advice suggestions, and so forth and so on etc. etc.. It would have been impossible without your help. Also special thanks go out to Leslie Gregory for your work as Isabella and for enduring the human element on your special voyage. Someday, you'll be a star.

A special and separate thanks go to our very own Dr. Joseph Orze for encouraging the return of a sense of humor and fun to the Northwestern State University campus. (Now, about the bathrooms for KNWD....) Eric B. Maron General Manager, KNWD

Commentary

Let's Leave Isabella Alone

Dear Joe:

While it is true that our lives are full of uncertainty, there are certain matters about which we have no doubt. There are rules of behavior, so to speak, that we hold to be true. For instance, a golfer does not head out in a lightning storm for a quick eighteen holes dressed in his best aluminum foil suit. Especially if his language is prone to the typical exhortations to God that accompany wayward five-iron shots. In the same light, a photographer doesn't stand at an arm's length from the space-shuttle upon lift-off just to get a good shot at the exhaust fumes. Even more to the point, it's common knowledge that you don't stand in a bear's cage and slap him in the face for not observing proper table manners while you are feeding him. (Doubly important if the bear is coming off a hunger strike.) To list a few less obvious points, you wouldn't steal the Bat-mobile, laugh during confession, eat Iberville food with a hangover....but you get my drift. It is these subtle little standards of behavior that make life's real choices easier. With this in mind, I ask you why certain folks at Northwestern would want to irritate a ghost who has just recently burned the most valuable building on campus? Permit me to explain.

Ghosts, by their very nature, have difficulty communicating with persons of the flesh. This problem stems from the fact that ghosts, with the notable exception of Caspar, can't speak. As a result, they must communicate in other ways. I read with interest the supposedly chilling accounts of Isabella, Northwestern's ghost-in-residence, turning radio dials and appearing at odd hours of the morning, purportedly to scare some Northwestern coeds. Has it occurred to anyone that Isabella may not have liked the radio station in question? How better to communicate this dislike than a mere spin of the dial? As for the late night appearances, she probably wanted everyone to leave. Quickly. Judging by the typical reaction to a ghost's presence, I would say this is an effective way to convey her dissatisfaction with her company. Bear in mind, this is all by way of a lesson illustrating the manner in which ghosts communicate; with actions not words.

Considering all of this, you can imagine my dismay at the recent, much publicized attempt to move Isabella from her age-old home on scenic Normal Hill to a spot in that tenement of a woman's gym (across the street from a laundrymat for God's sake). Talk about your classic errors.

The old bag didn't want to move from Caldwell. She just wanted some peace and quiet, i.e. everyone out and don't come back. I could imagine, then, her shaking her head in disbelief thinking that she'd burned Caldwell for nothing. The perpetrators of the "move the ghost" fiasco need to brush up on their ghostese. Anyone who can become invisible and walk through walls can almost certainly manage to move herself to a new neighborhood if she so desires. Therefore, lest Caldwell Hall have burned in vain, let us make no mistake about the whereabouts of Isabella. Northwestern can hardly afford to lose another building by provoking the ire of a ghost (A female ghost no less). The following is submitted, then, not so much in rebuttal to a crass ceremony, as to pay retribution to an offended spirit. To set the record straight, this is dedicated to Isabella.

Self righteously yours,
Mike Rukavina

Isabella

I'm sure she laughed a little when they tried to move her soul. Seems no one learned the lesson of her inferno's sooty toll.

Passed many years, a small request—a place to call her own. A fortnight before Halloween she let her wrath be known.

Isabella wanted space; Normal Hill was her demand. The fire was her construction—Isabella clearing land.

So please take note, there's no one in the building they proclaim. Around the ruins of Caldwell the ghost will still remain.

The nosey crowd that gathered at that commercialized event, only moved a name that night. Isabella never went.

Forget decrepit women's gyms. The lady lurks not there. She set a fire to burn a place she simply wouldn't share.

Ceremonies don't move ghosts. Must you all again be shown? Her soul just wanted breathing room. Leave Isabella alone.

And come each late October, and the feast of Halloween, beware the one room school house. Likely there's where she'll be seen

-Mike Rukavina-

What Kind Of Class Cutter Are You

Students, Identify Yourselves!

Although almost no student likes to admit that he occasionally cuts a class, almost every student realizes that cutting class is a definite option for him. Students who cut class can be classified as one of three basic types, and the nonchalant type.

The practical class cutter cuts class for "practical" reasons. Often, this student is one with neat notebooks, clean textbooks, and good posture. The "Practical" reasons for which this student cuts class usually concern health or grades. The practical type of class cutter may cut class to study for an exam in another class, or to do research at the library. Often, he is so practical that he manages to cut a class in which he is doing exceptionally well, and even then obtains the missed notes from the most intelligent and reliable source that he can find. Sometimes the practical class cutter takes notice of his lack-luster eyes, dull expression, and tired body, which are the results of his excessive studying, and decides to cut class to recuperate. Since this type of class cutter cuts class for such practical reasons, he is, more often than not, confident about his standing grades, and truthful to instructors who noticed his absence.

The second type of class cutter is the reluctant type. Sadly enough, this type would like to believe that he is really the practical type. He tries to turn impractical reasons for cutting class into practical ones, and often succeeds in believing that he has done so. However, the reluctant class cutter never cuts class without a struggle. He always needs to be "talked into it"—either by himself or by a friend. He is the type who lies in bed for at least half an hour debating whether or not he can afford to miss the class meeting. The reluctant type of class cutter cuts class for a myriad of reasons. He may be exhausted, or lazy, he may need to cram for another class, or he may want to kill time with a good friend. The reluctant class cutter is reluctant because he is very conscientious about his grades. Often, he is the student whose grade may shoot either up or down, and whose academic achievements are extremely sporadic. Because of his reluctance, this type of class cutter feels guilty when arriving for the next class meeting, makes a mad dash for missed work, and plays upon an instructor's sympathy when giving reasons for his absence.

Our most relaxed type of class cutter is the nonchalant type. The adventuresome, impulsive student may find himself in this classification of class cutters. The nonchalant class cutter cuts class whenever something more appealing than class presents itself. This something is often sleep, which is why the nonchalant class cutter is often nowhere to be seen on Monday morning. An advantage that this type of class cutter has is that his nonchalance allows him to feel free of guilt. However, the nonchalant class cutter is the student who usually hasn't an iota of understanding during the new lesson, and who is the most anxious when progress reports are given out.

Although this type of class cutter is indeed nonchalant, he is pragmatic enough to fabricate to the instructor about why he missed class.

Every type of class cutter has his own advantages and disadvantages in his methods for cutting class. It is the advantages, coupled with the student's personality, that determine which classification of class cutters a student finds himself in. Even though some students may not wish to classify themselves as a "class cutter" at all, the fact is that when a student cuts class, he is, invariably, either practical, reluctant, or nonchalant about it.

Letter to The Editor

Dear Editor,

I noticed in last week's paper a letter from a student about the fire alarm situation. She was tired of the many drills and fake alarms. She was right—someone could lose their life one day because of the immaturity of others. But, at least her dorm has fire alarms. Varnado has none. The burning of Caldwell has made us realize that it could just as easily have been Varnado. Some of us investigated the dorm and found that not only are there not any fire alarms, but also many of the fire extinguishers are missing or have faulty gauges. Last Wednesday night we had quite a scare. The dorm smelled like smoke but firemen couldn't find a fire. Eventually, they discovered that a water pump in the buzenent had blown a fuse. It could have easily been a fire. How much does it take, people! We have already been given two warnings. This university can shell out the money for a new Fine Arts Complex but not for fire alarms. Why have any rules about hot plates and cooking devices if you won't enforce them? Now is the time to do something about the situation. This university will not have to worry about fire alarms because if the situation remains the same they will soon have no students anyway. Some of the students were wondering which building on campus was the oldest after Caldwell Hall burned. At this rate, it will be Student Union!

Sincerely,
Susan Fortenberry

Don Hatley- From Cornfields To Folk Festival

When Don Hatley was plowing corn on his family's farm in East Texas during the 1940's and 50's, he often dreamed of what the future would hold for him. Four decades later, now holding a doctorate in English and calling the shots for the growing Natchitoches Folk Festival, Hatley marvels at the distance he has come since then.

"Everything considered, life was pretty tough back then," Hatley said. "We raised mostly cotton and corn and of course sold some dairy products. That's how we made our living."

Like most farmers of the day, the Hatley's borrowed money in the Spring and paid it back in the fall. However, sometimes when the yearly harvest was bad, pay back seemed almost impossible.

"If you didn't have a good harvest then you couldn't pay back the loan. A lot of folks got into a never ending cycle of debt that way."

Educated in the local Van Dyke community school and Later in Sulphur Springs, when the two schools were consolidated, Hatley credits his academic success at least partially to his mother, Gladys Hatley.

"My mother really believed in the benefits of an education. She believed in the benefits of an education. She believed that the way to climb the social and economic ladder was through an education."

During her prep years, Hatley's mother went through the 11th grade twice just so she could say that she had 12 years of schooling.

"My two older brothers and I knew we were going to college. There was never any doubt about it. I guess we were kind of trend setters in those days."

Hatley's father quit school during his ninth grade year because his coach couldn't get him out of an Algebra class. That fact didn't hurt him much though as he later became a Trustee member of the school system. He also managed the local baseball team, Hatley remembers.

After graduating from high school, Hatley attended college at East Texas State University where he received a B.A., M.A., and later Ph.D. in English at the age of 29.

During this time, he married the former Michail Sue Skeen and since the two have had two children, Lesa 18, and John 7.

In 1968, Hatley came to Northwestern as an assistant English professor.

"NSU seemed to be the Louisiana equivalent of East Texas State. That's the reason

I chose to teach here and of course the fact that this was the only school that offered me a mid-semester job."

Besides being an educator and director of the Louisiana Folklife Center, Hatley has also held leadership positions on the NSU Faculty Senate and worked on the NSU branch of the American Federation of Teachers.

Today's way of life certainly is nothing like it was back for the Hatley's on their 160 acre farm in Van Dyke, Tex.

"I still like to remember back to those farming days, but I really don't think I'd like to go back," Hatley laughs.

Volleyball season got off to an excellent start for the brothers of the Epsilon Upsilon chapter of TAU KAPPA EPSILON. For team no. 1 a 2-0 record was posted. The victories came in defeating both the Sig Tau's teams. Team 2 fared almost as well. We split a series with the dogs winning against 2, and, in a tight game, being by the Canines' first team. Now that team 2 has posted its first win we are more confident than ever to go on and post a winning record. The TKE's were out this past week helping to raise money for the Christmas Festival. Through all the participating fraternities and sororities we managed to raise alot of money.

To end things up--remember this as the football season comes to an end:

“El Grande de Coca-Cola” Nov. 15

By Beatrice Dawson

Starting Nov. 15 and continuing through Nov. 19, “El Grande de Coca-Cola” by Ron House and Dig White, will be presented by the NSU Theatre Department.

Directed by Nan L. Stephenson, director of theatre, the production will open every night at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom, with live music by Inda Espinoza, vocalist; Johnny Espinoza, cauto player; and Ivan Maldonado, guitarist. In addition, alcoholic beverages will be served at the cash bar.

“El Grande de Coca-Cola” is the story of the zany Hernandez family and their impractical attempt to achieve stardom by pretending to be international stars in a show sponsored by their cousin, the local coca-cola bottler,” explained Miss Stephenson, when asked about the plot of the play.

The setting of the play is a coastal resort village in Honduras. The cast involved several people who portray the family, and two stagehands who want to be dancers and are distantly related to the family.

Acting as mistress of ceremony will be Angie Rome, in her role as Pepita Hernandez as she introduces various members of her family in this humorous musical revue, stated Nan.

The other six members of the cast include Darlene Winslow, Marva Moxey, Ann Police, Betsy Corley, Tim LeBoeuf and Ben Bryant, along with the stagehands-Stephanie Ryals and Mitzi Adderly. ## Aviation Courses Restructured

Larry Varnado, department head of Aviation Sciences, says that there will be some changes made in the structure of their courses for the Spring semester.

Aviation Science 105 and 106 which are ground school courses for private pilot licenses will now be offered twice a week on Mondays and Wednesdays from 5-8 p.m. rather than the previous tri-weekly 1 hour course. This will enable it to become a half semester course.

The main purpose for the restructure of the courses is to give local people a chance to enroll in a ground school course. Aviation Science 105 and 106 are a good way for people possibly interested in aviation to discover if it is something they would like to pursue without becoming involved in a four year program. Aviation Science 105 is not a pre-requisite for Aviation Science 106.

Also the aviation department will be offering for the first time on the Natchitoches campus an air traffic control course. It will be listed as Aviation Technology Control (AVTC) 101. It is an introduction to air traffic control 101. It is a classroom, lecture class.

If you have any further questions please contact Larry Varnado at either 357-5102 or 352-8412.

Demon Playground

Last week the intramural department began the volleyball season with a full list of games.

In the women's division AKA opened their season with a win by way of forfeit by the Tri-Sigs, due to a lack of players. Zeta Phi Beta took two of three from Phi Mu by scores of 15-6, 8-15, and 15-9.

Brotherhood forfeited to Los Amigos, while the Jocks had an easy time beating YANG Two 15-3, and 15-4. E'Raps didn't have much trouble either, as they stuck G.D.I. Omen 15-5, 15-4. Phi Beta Sigma also had little trouble in their first match of the season as they tagged Theta Chi 15-5, 15-6.

KA took care of Sig Tau's second team with a 15-4, 15-10 victory. Sig Tau's first team; however, came away with identical scores of 15-6 in their triumph over Kappa Sig's second team. The Sig Dog's first team took a season opening 15-9, 15-7 win over TKE's second team, in the last match of the night.

On Tuesday Delta Psi Kappa walloped Delta Zeta 15-0, 15-3. Zeta Phi Beta improved their record to 2-0 with a 15-6, 15-12 decision over Sigma Kappa.

Football Out, Basketball In

It's time now to go from the football field to the round ball court and Coach Wayne Yates and the Demons. Demon basketball starts on November 18 with the Demons playing an exhibition game against the National Team of Yugoslavia. The game is being sponsored by the Natchitoches Lions Club with proceeds going to the Lion's Crippled Children's and sight conservation program. Tickets are four dollars for adults and one dollar for students.

From last year's squad the Demons are returning three starters. This year's squad has four seniors. Yates feels that these seniors are providing the team with tremendous leadership. This years Demon roundballers have alot more depth than the Demon team of last year. Yates is expecting a lot more of a press and change in defenses this year with the depth. Yates has this to say about this year's squad, 'I'm not sure our starting five will be as good as last year's, but on the other hand, our top ten players will be deeper. We have more depth and we will have good flexibility with the people we have playing inside.'

The Demons however will have to be ready at the start of the season as their first home game is December 1 against defending league champion Arkansas-Little Rock. After that tough opener the Demons will then have to play always tough Houston Baptist. Let's everybody come out next Thursday night and support Coach Wayne Yates and the Demon roundballers.

Demons Demolish Nicholls State Colonels 38-6

Northwestern insured itself of a winning season Saturday night by whipping the Nicholls State Colonels, 38-6. The Demons played before a very disappointing crowd of 4,500 fans.

Wide receiver Victor Oatis lead the Demons on the night with eight catches for 198 yards and two touchdowns. V.O.'s 198 yards receiving broke the single game receiving record of Dick Reding set back in 1966 against South-eastern. Reding on that night had six catches for 187 yards.

Senior quarterback Bobby Herbert got his second start of the season and completed 10 of 15 passes for 195 yards and two touchdowns. Stan Powell also threw for 105 yards on eight attempts and six completions.

Nicholls State's defense came into the game ranked number one against the rush in 1-AA allowing only 63.1 yards per game. At halftime, however: the Demons already had 70 yards rushing. On that night Northwestern rushed for a total of 129 yards. Tony Green lead all rushers with 64 yards on 16 carries and one touchdown. The Demons had a total offense of 444 yards, while the Demon defense allowed Nicholls State only to total 151 yards. Other Demons to score on the evening were Leroy Ellis with one touchdown, Roy Fontenot with a five yard touchdown pass and Dale Quickel had five extra points and one field goal.

Nicholls State record now falls to 6-3, while Northwestern's record also goes to 6-3, with now a possible chance to go the Division 1-AA playoffs. Also the Colonels wereranked number 10 in the nation in division 1-AA.

Nicholls Head Coach Sonny Jackson said about the Demons victory, 'Northwestern State simply gave us a good whipping tonight. They just wanted the game more than we did.' Northwestern quarterback Bobby Hebert said, 'Louisiana Tech is the rival game up here in Natchitoches and a lot of importance is placed on the game. But I'm from the same area as Nicholls and for me this was the big rival same--this one meant the most to me personally.' The Demons will now get ready for the Southeastern Lions.

BEOG CHECKS

ARE READY IN THE CASHIER'S OFFICE, SECOND FLOOR ROY HALL. THEY'VE BEEN THERE FOR A WHILE, COME BY AND PICK YOURS UP.

Roark Leaves NSU For North Texas State

Dwain Roark, Northwestern's assistant basketball coach for the past two years, has resigned to accept a similar position at North Texas State University in Denton, TX.

At North Texas, State, Roark will serve as an assistant under Coach Billy Blakely and will be in charge of recruiting for the Mean Green, who will be competing in the Southland Conference basketball race for the first time this season.

While at Northwestern the past two years, Roark has been in charge of recruiting and recruited most of the players on the current Demon squad. The Demons have posted a 30-26 record in the past two years under head coach Wayne Yates and Roark, including a 19-9 record last season.

"We certainly hate to see Dwain leave," said Yates. "He has been a big reason for the success we have enjoyed in the past two seasons and he will be missed. Dwain did an outstanding job for us in the two years he was here."

Roark came to Northwestern to start the 1980 school year, after serving as the head coach at Arkansas

College for two years. In each season at Arkansas College Roark guided his team into the NAIA national playoffs.

"I'm looking forward to the new position," stated Roark. "But at the same time I will miss not coaching the players I recruited for Northwestern. Hopefully at North Texas I will be able to recruit the same type of players we were able to get at Northwestern. I think I can do that because the philosophy of Coach Blakely is very much like that of Coach Yates."

"The success in recruiting that I had at Northwestern is due to the help and support of Coach Yates," added Roark. "I was able to be in total control of recruiting and at the same time Coach Yates was always very helpful and easy to work with."

At North Texas Roark will be assisting with a team that posted a 15-12 overall mark last season as an independent. "Dwain is an excellent recruiter," said Blakely, who is heading into his eighth season at North Texas. "We feel he can really help us in that area. His recruiting certainly has played a big part in the success Northwestern has enjoyed in the past two years."

Roark received both his bachelor's and master's degrees from Ouachita Baptist University and is a native of Jena, La.

Dear Students:

Below are the new standards for "good standing and satisfactory progress" effective Fall 1982 for continued receipt of financial assistance at NSU.

A student must have an overall 2.00 GPA in the four major subjects (English, Math, Social Science, and Social Studies) in order to be in "Good Academic Standing" to qualify for financial assistance as a Freshman. To continue receiving financial assistance a student must make satisfactory academic progress. This calls for a student to maintain a 1.50 GPA the first year in college. The second year a student must maintain a 1.75 GPA. After the second year the student must maintain a 2.00 GPA to continue receiving financial assistance. If a student fails to maintain the required GPA (in order to continue receiving financial assistance), he or she will not receive financial assistance for the following semester. The student must make a 2.00 GPA and enroll in the same number of hours as the previous semester in order to make satisfactory progress and receive financial assistance the following semester.

Transfer Students

Transfer students are required to comply with the above standards of satisfactory progress in order to receive financial assistance at NSU.

Time Limits on Financial Aid Eligibility

A student may receive financial aid for a maximum of five years (10 semesters) in order to complete a four year degree program.

From the Registrar's Office...

1. The repeat rule is effective starting in the spring semester. This rule means that the second grade will count as the final grade. On your transcript, a line will be typed through the course that has been repeated and a "R" will be placed in the left margin by the course.

2. If a student fails to satisfactorily complete a developmental course in 3 attempts, the student will be permanently suspended from NSU. (Reading 98 99 100; Math 100; English)

3. When a Freshman or Sophomore receives excessive unexcused absences (10% of total classes) the instructor may recommend to the student's academic dean that the student be withdrawn from the rolls of that class and given the appropriate grade. (10% of MWF classes 5 days absent, and 10% of T Th classes is 3 days absent)

Oliver Files Suit

Against P.P. Panel

Diamond Jim Oliver filed a 1.6 million dollar defamation suit against the Porker Picker panel Thursday after reading remarks in the Current Sauce that he felt to be slanderous and offensive. Named as co-defendants in the suit were Sports Editor Roger Reynolds, Sauce editor Joe Cunningham, advisor Frank Presson, NSU President Dr. Joe Orze, Oliver's roommate and ex-guest selector Dean Napoli, and Demon baseball coach Herbie Smith.

Oliver felt that the nickname given to him in the paper, "Diamond Jim 'Please coach can I play now' Oliver," and the remark, "Diamond Jim lists as his greatest accomplishment that warm spring day last April when he fouled off three consecutive pitches in a meaningless intra-squad baseball scrimmage," and "this year 'O' hopes to have a batting average" were slanderous and generally not totally correct.

In his suit, Oliver said that the article should have read, "O" lists as his most memorable moment the afternoon that he fouled off four consecutive pitches and then walked in his next at bat during a meaningless scrimmage with the Natchitoches-Central High School baseball team.

Following up on his prediction of a week ago, Porker Picker Rookie, John Cunningham rolled to an 8-2 record en route to his second finest week as a P.P. panel regular and vaulted into fourth place in the thickening race for the Highman Trophy, the symbol of football forecasting excellence.

Also hitting on eight of 10 tries for the week was guest panelist Barbi "I finally got to pick" Hall, and Joe "I try to keep away from trouble but trouble just finds me" Cunningham who moved one game up on first place.

Faltering last week were panel regulars Roger "See you in the Super Bowl" Reynolds and Alison "My luck ran out" Breazeale who sported 6-4 records as did Donna Jo Kelly and Diamond Jim "Ya'll went crazy last week, man" Oliver.

In related news, the Vatican announced today that it was bestowing its highest civilian award on Barbi Hall and John and Joe Cunningham for their unselfish devotion to Notre Dame. The trio, in face of insurmountable odds, picked the fighting Irish to defeat the Number One ranked Pittsburgh Panthers Saturday and the Irish did.

Demon Booster Club Seeks Revenge Against Lady Demons

Seeking revenge for the loss of a year ago, the Demon Booster Club Bombers will take on the Lady Demons tonight (Tuesday). Game time is 7:30 p.m. in NSU's Prather Coliseum.

There will be no admission charged for the contest, although donations will be taken during the contest to help cut the cost of the Lady Demon trip to Reno, Nevada in January.

In the first annual pre-season scrimmage between the two units last year, the Lady Demons won handily. That setback did not sit to well with some of the booster club members, who vowed the outcome would be different this time around.

Mayor Joe Sampite will again act as the head coach of the booster club team. Squad members include Raymond Arthur, Wayne McCollun, George Younger, Lee Posey, Joe Peck Payne, Tom Anselmi, Ed Breedlove, Gary DeBlieux, Layne Miller, Terry Downs, Mike Henry, Booster Club President Steve Wiggins and several others.

The Lady Demons have been improving each week and earlier this week played well in a scrimmage against a junior college team. "I thought we showed a big improvement," said Lady Demon Coach Pat Pierson of the progress her team is making. "We are shooting the ball better and our freshmen girls just look better everyday they are here."

Pierson is also pleased with the improvement shown by veteran center Tracy Taylor, who missed much of the pre-season because of having her tonsils removed. "Tracy is shooting better and is getting into shape," added Pierson. "It's nice to have her back in the line-up."

When asked if the contest against the booster club could help her team, Pierson replied, "Yes, financially."

"We know it will be a tougher game than it was last season," added Pierson, somewhat more seriously. "We have been working on our defense because we know what an offensive minded team we will be playing."

"Really, I think it will be good for us," continued Pierson, getting more serious with each comment. "It will be good for us to play against a physical team. The guys we are playing against are mostly former athletes and they will be competitive. Our squad knows we can not take it lightly."

The Lady Demons will open the regular season November 27 when they host McNeese State.

DWI Rules Getting Tougher Legislature Passes Stiff Laws

Five bills dealing with drunk driving that were presented to the legislature by Governor Dave Treen, were passed this past session and will take effect January 1, 1983. Products of the special drunk driving task force appointed by Treen in response to public pressure from such groups as Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the new drunk driving laws are designed to provide for stricter and more uniform sentencing for the offense.

The most noteworthy change in the new DWI regulations is an automatic 60-day drivers license suspension for first time DWI convictions. Accompanying this is a fine of not less than $125 and either two days in jail or four days working on a community project. The offenders will also be required to complete substance abuse and drive improvement programs.

Some other provisions in effect January 1 will be:

-For second offense, the jail fine will be not less than $300 no more than $500, a minimum of 15 days in jail or a minimum of 30 days of court-approved, community service work and participation in substance abuse and driver improvement courses.

-Jail terms will be at least one year but no more than five years, fines no more than $1,000. At least six months of the sentence must be served without probation, parole, or suspension of sentence.

Penalties for driving under suspension or revocation or license will not be less than $300 and a minimum of one week on jail and up to six months.

-A requirement that car owners be notified if a person is convicted of a DWI offense committed while driving the owner's car.

Northwestern Gifted and Talented School: One Of Three Test Centers

The new Louisiana School for Math, Science and the Arts located on the NSU campus has been selected as one of only three testing centers nationwide to utilize and evaluate computer software provided by Science Research Associates, Inc., of Chicago.

John E. Guth, Jr., president of Science Research Associates, said the Louisiana School and institutions in Chicago and Omaha, Neb., have been requested to serve as testing centers for the computer materials that will cover several areas of academic specialization.

SRA, a subsidiary of IBM, will provide computer software without charge to the Louisiana School and institutions in Chicago and Omaha, Neb., have been requested to serve as testing centers for the computer materials that will cover several areas of academic specialization.

SRA, a subsidiary of IBM, will provide computer software without charge to the Louisiana School, which will open next fall on the Northwestern State University campus. In its first year, the school will serve 200 high school juniors from throughout the state.

Louisiana School director Dr. Robert Alost said students and faculty members at the new institution will "utilize and critique the computer materials, which Science Research Associates plans to develop for nationwide use."

Alost said computer materials in the areas of mathematics, science, social studies, English, art, music and other academic fields "will be invaluable to the Louisiana School, because our plans call for a heavy concentration and emphasis in the utilization of computers."

He added, "We consider it a significant recognition of the goals and purposes of the Louisiana School to have been selected as one of only three testing centers across the United States for the computer software. The program is also of great financial benefit to the school, because computer packages cost from $3,000 to $4,000 for each academic area."

Following the enrollment of the first class of 200 juniors in 1983, an additional 200 juniors will be admitted to the school the following year. Class sizes will be increased to 350 in 1985, giving the Louisiana School an enrollment of 700 juniors and seniors by the 1986 school year.

SUGB Opens New Positions

The Student Union Governing Board announced the opening of the Public Relations and Advertising Chairman position at their meeting Monday on November 28. This committee handles all of the advertising for the Board's events plus arranges displays and promotional material to publicize the SUGB. Since this is one of the Board's most important committees, the SUGB would like to encourage anyone who has served on a committee and would like to become more involved to run for this office. This opening is not only an excellent opportunity to further your leadership abilities but also offers the opportunity to promote the Union Board and its events so that all students are aware of them. Anyone interested may come by room 214 of the Student Union and fill out an application. The election will be after the holidays so get those applications in before you go home!

Other business during the meeting was the passing of the spring film package. These movies include: Mad Max, Road Warriors, World According to Garp, Night Shift, Psycho, Hollywood Knights, Time was Time, Stir Crazy, Altered States, Heavy Metal and two video program-Conan the Barbarian, and Stripes.

The Black Knights precision drill team of Northwestern State University performed recently for Brig. Gen. Cary B. Hutchinson Jr., who was at NSU to review the Reserve Officers Training Corps and military science programs. Hutchinson is commanding general of the U.S. Army Third ROTC Region, which is headquartered at Fort Riley, Kan.

Electrical Failure Causes Mass Exodus

A failure in the electrical back-up systems late last month cause the residents of Varnado Hall to be moved to other dorms.

According to Coordinator of Housing, Micki Townsend, a power failure on November 18 prompted the discovery that the major electrical cable leading to Varnado "had burned out--broken. After a while things just deteriorate," she said. Repairmen did not have the splicing kit to fix the cable, so they ordered it. In the meantime, the backup system that was being used failed. It was in worse shape than the original one."

The repair kit "had to come from Nashville, Tennessee" and at the earliest, repair could not have been expected before Tuesday, November 23. "So, we had no other decision to make but to move the students somewhere else. Fortunately, we had a place to move them to." Female residents were put in a spare wing of Sabine Hall, with male residents going to a spare wing in Rapides.

"After the first initial grumbling from the students, they reacted very well," remarked Townsend. "It's only normal to complain a little"

Rainstorms delayed the repair process on Tuesday, but repair began the next day and was completed by that night.

Students returning from the Thanksgiving vacation were able to move back into Varnado.

NSU Joins SBA Consortium

Northwestern has joined a consortium of public and private universities forming a statewide Small Business Development Center program to provide management and technical assistance to the small business communities in Louisiana.

Dr. Eugene Williams, head of NSU's Business Administration and Economics Department, said the consortium was established this fall following last year's successful Small Business Development Center pilot project conducted by Northeast Louisiana University in Monroe.

Williams said the consortium's proposal for 1982-83 funding by the Small Business Administration will be sent to Washington, D.C., for consideration in December. Matching, non-federal funds will be provided, stated the NSU professor.

As part of the statewide program, a Small Business Development Center will be established at NSU and 11 other public universities and six private institutions.

"The center to be located at Northwestern will provide a convenient, simple-to-reach place for small business owners to obtain information on the 15 to 20 federal agencies whose services they might use," explained Williams.

According to Williams, Northeast will be the "lead university" and "coordinating unit" for the consortium, which already has more than $800,000 committed to the statewide program by the participating universities.

NSU Sponsors Indian Crafts

The annual Indian Crafts Day, sponsored by NSU's Anthropology Club was held in the Williamson Museum, Saturday. The public was invited to watch several Louisiana Indian Tribes demonstrate their crafts and also were able to buy some crafts.

NEW STANDARDS FOR GOOD STANDING AND SATISFACTORY PROGRESS

A student must have an overall 2.00 GPA in the four major subjects in order to be in "GOOD ACADEMIC STANDING" to qualify for financial assistance as a Freshman. To continue receiving financial assistance a student must make satisfactory academic progress. This means a student must keep a 1.5 GPA the first year in college. The second year he must maintain a 1.75 GPA. After the second year he must maintain a 2.00 GPA. If a student fails to maintain the required GPA, he or she will not receive financial assistance the following semester. The student must make a 2.00 GPA and enroll in the same number of hours as the previous semester in order to make satisfactory progress and receive the financial assistance the following semester.

TRANSFER STUDENTS

Transfer students are required to comply with the above standards of satisfactory progress in order to receive financial assistance at NSU.

TIME LIMITS ON FINANCIAL AID ELIGIBILITY
A student may receive financial aid for a maximum of five years in order to complete a four year degree program.

Collegiate Radio Finally In The Spotlight

The next time you turn on your radio and hear the professional voice of your favorite disc jockey the odds are he or she began their announcing career at a college radio station. Finally, within the last year, collegiate radio stations are receiving the attention that is long overdue. Major markets and radio companies are realizing that the future of professional radio is in college radio.

Because of the large amount of mass communication majors in the United States, experience will be a definite key for those trying to find a job after graduation. Eric Maron of KNWD at Northwestern commented, "College radio gives people the chance to learn the business and make mistakes." Furthermore, the type of music played by college stations varies and the disc jockeys are exposed to various types of music. The college format also gives announcers the chance to give airplay to unknown artists.

In a recent article by "BILLBOARD" Denis McNamara, program director of WLIR - FM in Garden City, urged collegiate disc jockeys to be creative and keep ahead in their pursuit for a professional broadcasting career.

Keeping a step ahead and being different will give a disc jockey a style and personality all his own. This is extremely important in the radio starting place for the person who aspires to a career in radio broadcasting.

Pre-Registration Seems Good

Pre-registration, the long awaited, often prayed for process of foresaking the long lines at the regular registration for shorter lines and fewer headaches of early registration, was a terrific success according to Dr. Austin Temple, NSU's Registrar.

Dr. Temple says that possibly 90% of the people on this campus who are coming back in the spring went through pre-registration. Over 1900 students actually signed up for classes during the two-day procedure.

The whole process was relatively short and sweet and compared to the absolute agony and drudgery of the regular enrollment process. It took little over an hour for most of the people to get in and out, and in some cases, it was just a matter of popping in, grabbing a couple of cards, and popping right back out. A far cry from the old way!

Dr. Temple notes that if anyone made a mistake in signing up for a class, and took a class that they don't really need, and want to drop it and add something else more important, the resulting process is just as simple.

When you come back in the spring, you need to pay your fees, and then bring your fee sheet by the regular registration. Show the fee sheet to the admitting people and they will let you in on the floor. You must also have a drop/add card signed by your advisor. Show the D-A card to the people at the desk where you want your class card and pickup a new class card. Then go to the department where you are going to drop a class and have them drop you from their roles. Remember this important thought: Have that drop card signed by all the right people.

But back to pre-registration. It seemed like it went over extremely well. It was relatively short and sweet, and definitely to the point. I think that Dr. Temple and his staff, as well as Dr. Orze and all the teachers who made it to the pre-registration and handed out our cards should be thanked. The SGA also deserves a note of credit.

It just goes to show you how much good can come out of a little cooperation.

Support Those Basketball Players

This is just a short note to urge each and every one of you to go out and support those Demons and Lady Demons this year on the basketball floor.

Both come into the season with high hopes and great expectations, and it would be a shame if we weren't right out there behind them supporting them all the way.

The Demons of Coach Wayne Yates are predicted to finish second in the Trans America Athletic Conference this year. The TAAC has always been a tough and competitive conference and every little bit of vocal support that we give our Demons helps.

The Ladies come into the season as one of the top teams in Louisiana, if not the South. Coaches Pat Pierson and James Smith have taught the Ladies well and we are definitely going to see some more winning basketball in the winter months to come.

Federal Gasoline Tax Not Bad Idea

By John L. Hess

President Reagan's proposal of a five-cent increase in the federal gasoline tax is not a bad idea. Indeed, President Carter should have had the vision and courage to propose a much larger tax years ago.

John Hess

Still, it raises the issue of fairness. The tax would hit hardest those of moderate income. And although the money would be earmarked for roads and transit, it would amount to only a patch against the need.

There is hypocrisy here. The administration had slashed funds for transportation; now it would restore them at the motorist's expense. At the same time, it suggested that the next cut in the income tax be moved up, from July to this January.

Looming over every decision is the monstrous shortfall in the budget. On this, the president declared:

"A propaganda campaign would have you believe these deficits are caused by our so-called massive tax cut and defense buildup. Well, that's a real dippy doodle because, even after our tax deductions are fully in place, they will barely neutralize the enormous payroll tax increases approved in 1977."

The statement is breath-taking - a real dippy doodle. There would have been no deficit at all so far in his administration if he had not cut taxes and raised military spending. But it is useful to remind us how the burden of taxation has shifted.

It began long before this administration. We might date it with President Kennedy's program of investment credits, fast write-offs and income-tax cuts. Since then, lobbyists have cut many a new loophole and fashioned many a new tax shelter.

As a result, the share of taxes paid by corporations and wealthy individuals had shrunk to a minor fraction by 1980. Meanwhile, to finance Medicare and later to adjust Social Security pensions to inflation, Congress voted those enormous payroll tax increases Reagan mentioned.

(It should be emphasized that up to now these two programs have never cost the Treasury a penny. They were paid for by those payroll taxes, and went directly into the economy - largely to the flourishing health-care industry.)

It is true that from time to time the Internal Revenue Service and some remorseful congressmen try to correct abuses. One effort deserves to be recalled as a classic of its kind.

Last year, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., proposed to curb high living on the expense account. The hotel and restaurant industry and its unions raised such a fuss that the "three-martini lunch" deduction was rescued.

But to make up the loss of revenue, Congress inserted what amounted to a tax on the waiters' unreported tips. It was they who would pick up the tabs on those three-martini lunches...

It has been observed in this column that there is no such thing as a fair tax, at least not to the person who pays it. The question to be asked is how effective it is.

The Reaganauts came to Washington persuaded that taxes were strangling business.

They promised that if these were sharply reduced on the upper brackets, capital would be freed for investment, the economy would take off, and lower tax rates would raise so much more money that the budget would be balanced.

It didn't work. One reason, surely, is that taxes had not been discouraging investment.

Then what has been discouraging investment? A shrinking market, reflecting the squeeze of taxes and inflation upon the general public, and high interest rates, reflecting runaway federal deficits.

President Reagan clings to policies that would aggravate these conditions. The result is, as he said, in an unguarded moment, "a hell of a mess."

John P. McAndrew, President

Dear Editor,

As an alumnus and former band member of Northwestern State University, I would like to say that the Demon Marching Band has improved tremendously in their half-time performance.

Their marching drill on November 6, 1982 was stimulating, interesting and held the attention of the spectators.

At this time, I would like to extend my congratulations to the director and marching band on a job well done.

I am proud to say that I am an alumnus of Northwestern State University and the Demon Marching Band.

Sincerely,
(Miss) Pricilla Wolf

Lady Demons Down McNeese 78-77

Lady Demon basketball Coach Pat Pierson would be the first to admit that it wasn't pretty, but still she was happy that her Lady Demons opened the 1982-83 season with a 78-77 win over McNeese State.

"We made more than the expected first game mistakes," noted Pierson. "There were areas that were not good, but on the other hand for a first ball game we saw a number of things that were encouraging."

Most of what was encouraging to Pierson and assistant Coach James Smith was the play of the freshmen, and the rally that saw the Lady Demons win after trailing by five points with just under four minutes left in the game.

Freshman Lonnie Banks was the second leading scorer with 18 points and freshman point guard Teresa Thomas added 11 points. Freshman forward Val Williams added six points on three important offensive rebounds.

The leading scorer for the Lady Demons was senior Stephanie Washington with 24 points and the 5-8 forward also added eight rebounds to match the total of Banks and junior center Tracy Taylor.

The Lady Demons shot just 39 percent from the field and 52.2 percent from the free throw line (24 of 46) and that is one area that Pierson says her team will improve. "No doubt our shooting has to improve," said Pierson. "But I'm sure it will. A lot of it was nervousness of the first game. The encouraging thing was that by running our offense we were able to get good shots. It wasn't that we were taking bad shots, we just weren't hitting the good ones."

The Lady Demons were also guilty of 30 turnovers, although that was eight less than McNeese committed.

"We expected turnovers because of our running game," admitted Pierson.

"We know we will have some mistakes, but on the other hand we were happy with the number of mistakes that our defense caused."

One concern for Pierson this season will be her teams lack of height, but the Lady Demons were only out rebounded by four against the much taller Cowgirls. "We still have to work on our rebounding," said Pierson. "But the strength of McNeese is the inside game and for the most part we stayed in there with them."

Mississippi State Rolls Over Demons 97-59

The Mississippi State Bulldogs handed the Demon roundballers their second loss of the year on Saturday night. The Bulldogs soundly beat the Demons, 97-59.

Mississippi State played everyone dressed out in the game and had three players in double figures on the evening. Bulldog guard Jeff Malone led all scorers with 23 points, as he was 10 for 15 from the floor and three for three from the line. Forward Terry Lewis followed with 20 points as he to was red hot from the field shooting 9 for 11 and two out of three from the charity line. Reserve Chauncey Robinson came off the bench with 15 points and 13 rebounds to lead everyone.

Northwestern was paced by guard Kenny Hale with 21 points as he was also 10 of 15 from the field and one for one from the free throw line. Center Johnny Martin had 14 points and only seven rebounds to lead the Demons in rebounds. As a team the Demons shot 49.1 per cent from the floor and the Bulldogs shot 53.7 per cent.

The Demons other three starters only combined for a total of eight points and nine rebounds on the evening.

Northwestern must improve own its shooting percentage from the floor, if they expect to have as good a chance to win the conference as they did last year. The Demons must also cut down on turnovers as they had 33 and the Bulldogs only had 20. Northwestern must also get a more balanced scoring and rebounding attack from everyone involved.

The Bulldogs had good support coming off the bench as their bench scored 40 points and the Demon bench only scored 20 points.

If You Have A Past Due Account-- You May Not Be Able To Register

In view of the large size of student bad debts on the books, and the large number of students who have reached this date without completing their schedule of payments agreed upon at registration time, it is essential that we re-evaluate our credit granting procedure.

Any student with an outstanding balance at the end of November 1982 must pay it in full by means of cash, money order, or cashier's check, in order to be able to register for the Spring Semester 1983. Furthermore, students with outstanding balances may not receive their grades or transcript until said balances are liquidated.

In order for a student's registration to be completed for the Spring Semester 1983 all tuition and fees, including room and board, must be paid in full at the time of registration. Students who have not completed registration will not appear on class rosters. Any deviations from the above must approved by the Vice President for Fiscal Affairs.

Yang Downs Kappa Sigma 28-19

David Saylor hit Wayne Lupo with a touchdown pass with just over seven minutes to play to give the University of Yang a 21-19 lead over Kappa Sigma, and the Yangster's added another touchdown moments later to win the intramural Super Bowl 28-19.

Yang won the opening toss and took possession on the 20 yard line and mounted a drive that stalled on a missed fourth and 13 around midfield.

The Sigs took over but Bryan Childers anticipated a Randy Bonnette pass early in the drive and made an interception for Yang.

Saylor then took over and drove Yang downfield on several out routes. On the seventh play of the series, Saylor found Joe Cunningham in the right flats for the first score of the night. Saylor then connected with Lupo for the extra-point to put Yang up 7-0.

On the very next series, Kappa Sig put together their own drive as they ran four and a half minutes off the clock. The drive ended with Randy Bonnette to David Webb pass in the left corner of the end zone. Bonnette then ran it in himself to tie the game up.

Yang took over from there, but their drive was short-lived when Scott Sledge came from out of nowhere to make an interception and raced untouched 20 yards into the end zone to put the Sigs up 13-7. A Bonnette to Webb pass was incomplete when Webb caught the ball three feet out of the end zone.

Down by six points with just three minutes to play, Yang started what would be their final drive on the half. After Saylor guided them to a first and goal from inside the 20, a series of penalties set the Yangsters up with a fourth and goal from the other side of midfield. With just 11 seconds left, Saylor lofted a "Hail Mary" pass to the end zone and Cunningham outjumped two Kappa Sigs for the go ahead touchdown. The 46 yard pass tied the game 13-13 and Joe Bienvenu, who had been playing the last two playoff games and the Super Bowl with a fractured rib, made a timely catch as the halftime whistle sounded to add the extra point, putting Yang ahead 14-13.

On the first series of the second half, the Sigs were forced to punt when the Yang defense wouldn't yield. However, Yang couldn't move the ball either in their first possession and Saylor was forced to punt.

The Sigs took over and Bonnette made use of four different receivers to move the ball to the 15 yard line. From there he scrambled for the touchdown to put the Sigs up 19-14 with just over 10 minutes to play. Bonnette then tried to hit Webb on an "alley-oop" pass for the point-after conversion but a high-flying Lupo knocked the ball away from Webb.

Yang got the ball again and had 60 yards between them and the go-ahead touchdown. It took just two minutes for them to run the length of the field when Saylor hit Lupo for the game-winning catch over the middle. Lupo outraced everybody the last 20 yards for the touchdown. Saylor then found Dean Napoli who had to make a crucial comeback reception for the extra-point.

The Sigs took the ball and mounted another drive hoping to go back ahead, but Chris Moran made a clutch flag grab and downed Jay Vail three yards shy of a first down on a fourth and long situation.

The Yangsters took over and started down field trying to put the icing on the cake. A Saylor to Cunningham pass fell incomplete in the end zone, but on the very next play the same combination produced a touchdown on a safety blitz. Napoli added his second extra-point catch of the night to put Yang up by 28-19.

Kappa Sigma took its last possession and started a final drive. A pass interference call gave them first and goal on the one-yard line. On the next play, Robert Delrie and Donny Harrison poured on a furious rush and Harrison tipped the ball which landed in the hands of Bienvenu who raced all the way down to the other six yard line before Bonnette caught him.

From there, Saylor just ran out the clock on two quick plays, and the Yangsters had their first Super Bowl locked up.

For the evening, Saylor was 21 of 33 with four touchdown passes and only one interception. Delrie threw one without a completion. For the Sigs, Bonnette completed 13 of 22 passes for one touchdown and two interceptions.

Cunningham led the Yangsters with six catches for three touchdowns and Bienvenu caught five passes. Napoli added four grabs to go along with a standout defensive performance and Lupo, Delrie, and Jim Burke grabbed the other six passes.

For Kappa Sigma, Roger Reynolds and Jeff Leachman each caught three balls and David Deville and Mike Brown caught two each.

Un Kappa Fifth Routs VIP's 40-8

Lonnie Bank was a one-woman show as she scored 22 points (three touchdowns, four extra-points) and threw another touchdown pass to lead Un Kappa 5th to a 40-8 victory over the VIP's in the Intramural Women's Super Bowl.

The VIP's won the opening toss and got first possession on the cool wet evening. They couldn't move the ball and were forced to punt. Un Kappa 5th took over at that point and put together a balanced drive, with skillful running and precision passing.

The drive ended in seven points with a Banks to Tandra Lewis touchdown pass. Banks then ran around right end to add the extra-point.

The VIP's took over and tried to even the mark, but a Lisa Lennau pass fell incomplete on a fourth and six try.

Un Kappa 5th took over and their offense picked right up where they had left off. The Un Kappa's put together another massive drive that ended in the first of Banks' touchdown runs. A Lewis to Banks pass produced the 14th point of the game, which also ended the half with the score Un Kappa 5th 14, VIP's 0.

Banks finished the first half by completing three of eight passes and Lewis was two of two for the Un Kappa's. Lennau threw nine times in the first half and completed four of them.

Un Kappa 5th started the second half with the ball on the 20. They drove down to the other 20 yard line, but Banks had a pass picked off by an alert VIP defender. The VIP's were suddenly back in the game.

However, Un Kappa 5th's defense proved tough and Susan Prince was forced to punt.

Tandra Lewis fielded the punt and returned it well over 60 yards to put Un Kappa 5th in command 20-0. This time, the extra-point failed. But the damage had been done. The wind had seemingly been blown out of the VIP's sails.

The VIP's again failed to score and Un Kappa 5th took possession again, and the drive ended in another Lonnie Banks touchdown to up the score to 26-0.

The VIP's turned the ball over again on a missed fourth down conversion and Un Kappa 5th started up again. This time the drive ended with Banks to Kim Paulk touchdown pass with just over five minutes to play.

The VIP's finally got on the scoreboard when Lennau threw to Sheila Chance with two to play. Lennau then threw to Prince for the two point conversion to make the score 32-8.

Un Kappa 5th took over the 20 yard line and capped off the drive, and the game with a Lonnie Banks touchdown run with just 11 seconds to play. She then finished her evening by running in from 10 yards out for the two point conversion.

For the evening Banks completed 11 of 21 and had one T.D. pass while throwing one interception. Lewis completed three of four attempts for one touchdown pass for Un Kappa 5th also. Lewis scored twice for UK5 who finished the season undefeated.

The "Choker" Chokes, But Panel Fails To Capitalize,

It came sooner than expected, but miraculously, he survived it. Yes for the third straight year, Porker Picker Panel member Joe 'Choke City' Cunningham fumbled his way to a miserable week in P.P.-land and would have lost his year-long lead to Sports Guru Roger 'Always A Bridesmaid, Never The Bride' Reynolds, except for Reynolds' miserable first place showing.

Reynolds won the P.P. Panel's weekly, (or should it be weakly?) picks by blowing six of 10 games for a 4-6 worksheet. Tied with Reynold's for the dubious honor of winning were Mr. and Mrs. (or is it Mr. and Miss) NSU, Cindy Duke and Lytt Allen, or vice-versa, and Sports Info Director, Steve Roe, an all-league receiver for the University of Yang.

Tied with his older brother for last place was John 'I'm so confused' Cunningham and Alison 'I'm glad it's almost over' Breazele, who incidentally is NOT Joe's older brother.

With just one week remaining in the P.P. Panel's selectioning, the annual bowl games jump into the spotlight, and they will decide the winner of the 1983 Highman Trophy, symbol of football forecasting excellence. Past winners of the Highman Trophy were David Owen Stamey, Business Manager of the CURRENT SAUCE and currently vice-president of Stamey and Son's Women's Undergarments Inc., and also coach and general manager of the University of Yang, intramural flag-football champs. Stamey won the accolade in 1981. And also, Dr. Ray 'Boom-Boom' Baumgardner who won last year, but who got caught in a salary dispute with business manager David Saylor's earlier in the year, and opted to sit out the season and sign with another panel next year as a free-agent.

Odds makers in Las Vegas have installed Reynolds as a 2-1 favorite to capture his first Highman Trophy, and thereby becoming the first 'rookie' ever to receive the coveted award. Reynolds is currently one game behind P.P. leader Joe Cunningham, but Las Vegas, remembering his past chokes, has not given any odds on Cunningham for first place. However, they say that he is a sure winner for at least fifth.

The odds makers have picked two of the three guest selectors to take the second and third spots. This would be the first time in P.P. history that guest selectors would break into the top four.

Rounding out the odds were John Cunningham and Alison Breazele who were both picked at 15-1 longshots.

Heading into the final week of picks, the P.P. Panel picked up three local sports freaks, one of whom is a past winner of the Highman Trophy, for what should be an exciting bowl lineup.

James 'Doc' Smith, the smartest animal on a softball field, and assistant coach of the Lady Demons basketball squad will be joined by David Saylor, an All-American flag-football quarterback for the University of Yang, and D.O. Stamey, who has already been afforded more publicity in this rag column than he deserves.

NSU Nips Yugoslavia

Northwestern led at only one point in the exhibition basketball game with Yugoslavia, and fortunately for the Demons that was in the final seconds as the Demons scored a 96-95 win.

Northwestern started slow in the contest, trailing by eight points in the first four minutes. Although they narrowed the gap at times, the Demons found themselves trailing by 15 points with just 6:59 left in the game.

"The best thing that I saw on Thursday night was that these kids didn't want to lose," said Demon Coach Wayne Yates. "When we got down to the final minutes the young men saw the chance for victory and were able to get it."

"One of the best things you can have is that attitude," added Yates. "They just decided they didn't want to lose and the enthusiasm on the floor and with the players that were on the bench was very encouraging."

The Demons got their winning points with just 15 seconds left when senior guard Kenny Hale made of two of three free throws to bring the Demons from behind. After those free throws the visitors had a chance to win but missed the final shots as time ran out.

"It was good to win and that type of game was what we needed," continued Yates. "We found out the areas that we need the work and now we know we have a lot of things to work on before that first game on December 1."

The Demons had three players in double figures, led by Johnny Martin with 30 points and 12 rebounds. Hale added 20 points and junior forward A.J. Culbreath added 11 points. Culbreath was second behind Martin in rebounds with five as the Demons won the rebounding battle 46-38.

Ten of the 14 Demons who played in the game found their way into the scoring column and Yates says that is an indication of some good and some bad. "I've felt since the start of practice that we would be nine or ten players deep," noted Yates. "And I continue to feel that way. But while ten players scored, there were several players who did more on offense than they did on defense."

"Our physical conditioning isn't near where we should be and we must improve our defense," continued Yates.

Reconstruction Begun on Museum

Northwestern officials have begun the reconstruction of the Center for History of Louisiana Education, an outstanding museum lost in the Oct. 19 fire which destroyed historic Caldwell Hall.

"We are disheartened and discouraged, but we are not defeated," said Mrs. Maxine Southerland, director of the state depository that told the story of the birth and growth of education in Louisiana.

She added, "I am determined to reconstruct from the ashes, to give our children and grandchildren a living record of our educational past. A portion of our history died in that fire, but how much more will be lost if we fail to rebuild; for then we have lost not only a lot of artifacts, but also an idea and a dream."

Mrs. Southerland said the museum had been replete with priceless, one of a kind photographs, books, charts, machines and numerous rare artifacts. "They were all valuable bits of antiquity but were lost to us forever," she stated.

Within the museum's walls were "lovingly-placed treasures, rich in Louisiana's educational heritage."

"Some things can be done," Mrs. Southerland said.

"Louisiana can reconstruct this state repository for the history of her educational past. Surely within the state there are many who will feel a responsibility to Louisiana's children to replace their valuable, interesting and lovely archives of Louisiana's educational history."

Artifacts the museum are in need of include, books, photographs, college year-books, children's early school clothes, teachers' bells, slates, maps, desks, lamps, wooden water buckets, lunch pails, letters, scrapbooks, charts, diaries and other items which will tell generations of Louisiana's proud roots in education.

"To reconstruct the museum, we need the aid of our alumni," said Mrs. Southerland. "They might have some small artifact that they consider insignificant; it is not insignificant to us. We must rebuild one book at a time, one piece at a time. We need everything and anything connected with education in our state."

Tynes Hildebrand Appointed Athletic Director

-New A.D.

Tynes Hildebrand, who served as Northwestern State University's head basketball coach from 1965 through 1980, has been appointed athletic director at NSU.

Hildebrand replaces A.L. Williams, who held the dual responsibilities of athletic director and head football coach before resigning to become head coach at Louisiana Tech University.

Orze said, "I have been impressed with Coach Hildebrand's organizational and administrative abilities, his knowledge of athletics, his loyalty to Northwestern and his commitment to excellence in every endeavor that he has undertaken."

The NSU president added, "Coach Hildebrand is highly-respected in athletic circles across the state and nation and has long enjoyed the admiration of the people of the university and the community."

We are fortunate to have an individual of his ability and integrity directing the university's athletic program."

Hildebrand, who is the second-winningest coach in Northwestern's 70-year basketball history, retired from coaching in 1980 to become director of placement and assistant professor of health and physical education at NSU.

Tynes Hildebrand

Hildebrand, who fell just nine wins short of the 200-victory mark in his 15 years at Northwestern, guided the Demons to the NAIA District 30 crown and the NAIA National Tournament with a 21-9 record in 1973-74. His 1974-75 team won the Gulf South Conference championship.

GSC Coach of the Year in 1974-75 and Coach of the Year in the old Gulf States Conference in 1966, Hildebrand was one of only 12 college coaches in the nation selected to train the U.S. Olympic basketball team in 1972. He was also chosen as the coach for the GSC All-Star team's tour of Central America in 1974.

Dr. Bienvenu Named President Emeritus

The Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities has named Dr. Rene J. Bienvenu as president emeritus of Northwestern.

Bienvenu served as Northwestern's 14th president from 1978 until his retirement on June 1, 1982. He was succeeded by Dr. Joseph J. Orze, who was elected last December to become the university's chief executive.

In 32 years of service to Northwestern, Bienvenu was not only president for four years but also held the positions of dean and department head.

Bienvenu, a nationally-known scientific researcher and writer, was appointed acting president of Northwestern in 1977 and became the university's president on Feb. 1, 1978.

He was a faculty member and administrator at NSU for 27 years before serving briefly as assistant dean of the School of Allied Health at the Louisiana State University Medical Center in Shreveport, the position he held when he was appointed acting president of NSU.

Before moving to the LSU position, Bienvenu was dean of the College of Science and

Argus Winners

Sam Goodwin To Be Head Football Coach

Sam Goodwin, offensive backfield coach at the University of Arkansas for the past two years, has been appointed head football coach and assistant athletic director at Northwestern, according to NSU President Dr. Joseph Orze.

The 38-year-old Pineville native succeeds A.L. Williams, who has served as Northwestern's head coach since 1975. Williams was informed before the season that his contract would not be renewed for 1983.

Responsible for coaching quarterbacks and running backs at Arkansas, Goodwin was selected from among 27 applicants for the Northwestern position. The NSU Athletic Council narrowed the field to three finalists, and Orze made the final selection of the new coach.

Orze said Goodwin and Billy Laird, Northwestern's assistant head coach, "were the two outstanding candidates for the position in my evaluation." Orze said Laird was offered the job but declined the position "for personal reasons."

The Northwestern president stated that he was "impressed by Sam Goodwin's enthusiasm for football and his philosophy not only of the game but also of how it fits within the university environment."

College of Science and Technology Receives Microcomputer System

A laboratory equipped with 20 Olivetti M20 microcomputers has been established by the College of Science and Technology at Northwestern.

The microcomputers were purchased with a $160,578 grant which NSU received from the National Science Foundation to provide computer-assisted instruction for students in science and technology academic programs.

"The microcomputer," said science and technology dean Dr. Edward W. Graham, "incorporate most of the advance computer technology currently available, including 16-bit microprocessors and high resolution, color graphics."

He added, "Northwestern has the first microcomputer of this type in the South. The laboratory will be used for computer-assisted instruction in mathematics and sciences."

According to Graham, "This system will be unique for teaching problem-solving, simulation and model building. In addition to this effect to provide the most effective educational technology for our students, we will seek to have all graduates of our programs competent in the use of computers."

The NSU dean said computer modeling will be developed and applied in various courses in chemistry, physics, geology, ecology, physiology and genetics.

Experiments will be simulated with the computers to allow students to develop proficiency and understanding before doing the actual experiments.

"On-line computer control of experiments will be used to optimize results and to collect and analyze data," stated Graham, who added that a team of faculty and students is being formed to develop computer-assisted instructional programs.

"This computer-assisted instructional system will not replace the personal commitment of the faculty to the students but rather will supplement and extend the more conventional lecture system," said Graham.

Goodwin Named Football Coach

"Obviously," said Orze, "I am deeply impressed with Sam's winning record as a high school and college coach but most of all with his winning attitude as a person."

He said Goodwin "comes from one of the outstanding major football powers in the country, and his young, proven, dynamic leadership will help develop excellence in the football program at Northwestern."

Another factor in Goodwin's selection, Orze said, "is his close association through the years with high school coaches players in Louisiana. He was an outstanding athlete at Pineville High School and has recruited the state for the University of Arkansas."

Goodwin said he is "extremely happy and excited that the administration and athletic council of Northwestern have shown the confidence in me to lead the university's football program."

He added, "I know there is a tough challenge ahead, but I also see a golden opportunity. I am grateful to Coach Lou Holtz at Arkansas for his support on my behalf but most of all for the personal interest he has taken in me in the past two years. I will never forget my experiences with the Razorbacks."

PRSSA To Hold Monthly Seminar

A series of eight professional development workshops has been organized by the North Louisiana Chapter of the Public Relations Society of America and will be offered to public relations practitioners, students and the general public, according to series chairman Gregg Trusty, public relations specialist at Western Electric's Shreveport Works and immediate past president of the PRSA chapter.

The series will be conducted on the first Thursday of each month in 1983 except January, July, August and October, Trusty said, and will cover a wide range of topics from community relations to problem-solving. All the workshops will be at the Ramada Inn, Monkhouse at I-20 in Shreveport.

Creating and implementing a community relations program will be the topic of the Feb. 3 workshop and developing a total communications program will be discussed at the March 3 session. The April 7 program will deal with public research and a photographic workshop is set for May 5.

Working with public relations/advertising agencies is the topic of the June 2 session; organizing special events will be discussed at the Sept. 1 workshop, and audiovisual/multi-media presentations will be the Nov. 3 program. The series will conclude with a round-table discussion on Dec. 1 designed to give ideas on how to solve the participants' actual public relations problems.

Each workshop will begin at 10 a.m. and conclude at 3 p.m. Lunch will be included in the $15 registration fee. Discount rates for the series are available to persons who register by the Jan. 13, 1983, series registration deadline. Persons may also register for individual workshops throughout the year. Additional information may be obtained by calling Trusty at 459-6164.

Northwestern State University students from all majors are eligible to attend any or all the seminar sessions. A special student discount rate is available and may be paid in installments.

Franklin Presson, Room 225-E Kyser Hall, phone Ext. 5339, is the NSU coordinator for the seminar series and for transportation to and from Shreveport.

Fisher Appointed Director of ROTC

Col. William R. Fisher has been appointed professor of military science and director of the U.S. Army Senior Reserve Officers Training Corps program at Northwestern.

Fisher, whose appointment was approved recently by the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities, succeeds Lt. Col. Walter B. Harris, who retired this fall after 26 years of service in the military.

In addition to his duties on the Natchitoches campus of Northwestern, Fisher will also manage the university's cross-enrollment ROTC programs at Louisiana College in Pineville, Louisiana State University in Shreveport and Centenary College in Shreveport.

Fisher's last assignment before moving to Northwestern was at Fort Ord, Calif., where he was director of training at the U.S. Army's Organizational Effectiveness Center and School. The school trained military and civilian personnel to become organizational consultants.

Northwestern's military science professor and ROTC director was graduated from Colorado College as a distinguished military graduate with a bachelor of arts degree in education. He also holds the master's degree in counseling from Dominican

Faces In The News... And Out Of The News

Major reshuffling in the personnel structure of this school during the Christmas holidays produced some new faces in new positions and some old faces in new positions. By now I'm sure all of you are aware that our new football coach is Sam Goodwin, formerly assistant coach under Lou Holtz at the University of Arkansas.

Our old coach, A.L. Williams is now the head coach at arch-rival Louisiana Tech, joining former NSU track coach Jerry Dyes, who produced his share of All-Americans here, as did Williams.

Taking over Williams job as Athletic Director is Tynes Hildebrand, former NSU basketball coach and more recently, Director of Student Placement.

Now all of this is probably old news to most of you, but I can't resist the opportunity to express a few last thoughts on the situation surrounding the positioning of these three men in their new jobs.

Northwestern just brings bad publicity to itself when it uses cutthroat policies to "get rid of people we don't like."

We didn't want A.L. Williams because he wasn't a winner, or so they said. Actually, when he was hired, he was told he wouldn't have a winner for at least five years. This, the then president of the university told him. He fooled us. By year five he had had a couple of winners. We fired Williams because he couldn't beat Tech. Whereupon, after we fired him, Tech made him their head football coach! According to a very knowledgeable football source and former Tech assistant football coach, "A.L. Williams had, collectively, the best group of assistant football coaches in the state. And Williams is as fine a head coach as their is." Now who does that make look dumb?

We offered the head coaching job to Billy Laird, Williams offensive coordinator here. Laird asked if things were going to be different money-wise around here. Specifically, was the athletic department going to operate under the same budget it had when Williams was here? He was told that the athletic department would indeed have the same budget. Laird said; find another head coach.

Sam Goodwin was the next choice. Goodwin has an outstanding resume. Sam Goodwin seems to be the same kind of outstanding person and coach that Williams was. I've seen him recruiting students for NSU already, and not just the football kind of student either. He is friendly, pleasant, and indeed very enthusiastic about NSU. He is a credit to Northwestern. It is, in my opinion, an unfortunate thing that we released A.L. Williams. But I firmly believe that Sam Goodwin was the best possible choice to replace him.

What more can be said about Tynes Hildebrand than that he is a super person. He took a nearly non-existent Placement Office and really worked hard to make it something. He was ALWAYS thinking of the student first. I don't believe that NSU could have found a better replacement. Hildebrand has always been very respected at whatever job he has had. When he was a basketball coach here, he was asked to train young players for the Olympics. That right there shows you something about the ability of the man to do a job right.

Now that the new positions have been filled, it's time to turn our attention to helping Northwestern's image. This whole ugly affair didn't do much good to that image, and it's time to start doing some positive things.

First of all, we need internal support. We can start by showing up for some basketball games and supporting the teams that carry the Northwestern name. Just once I'd like to see our president, the other vice-presidents, teachers, and of course, students, who don't make the basketball games come to them. And I'm not talking about showing up only when you give out an award or receive one.

Northwestern needs our support. And it's up to us to show it. We can do other things in addition to going to basketball games. The GSGA needs committee members. KNWD needs DJ's. The SAUCE could always use more writers and I'm not just talking about students either. Teachers, you need to realize that this is the UNIVERSITY paper. Your articles are appreciated too.

We all need to get behind NSU, and really make it the place for you. --Joe Cunningham

Put The Poor Out Of Sight

The trouble with the poor is that they are no longer invisible.

An affluent citizen of Phoenix complained to ABC that he couldn't watch a news broadcast or open a paper without seeing "negative" reports about the jobless and the homeless.

John Hess

He said this had to discourage people from getting off their duffs and finding work.

The chap said things were lots worse during the Great Depression of the 1930s but he didn't know it, because there was no television then. And he came out fine, he did.

By the same reasoning, some people say TV made us lose the Vietnam War. The army would have gone ahead and won it, only the media kept rubbing our noses in it until we got fed up with it and changed the program.

The man from Phoenix has a point, of sorts.

The poor we have always had with us, but until recently, we could keep them out of mind. They were mostly hill folks in Appalachia or blacks and Hispanics. When we did think of them, we might tell ourselves that their trouble was something they had brought on themselves by being born what they were.

But those auto workers losing their homes, those farmers losing their farms, those shopkeepers going broke - they could be any of us. That's scary.

Something like one out of seven adult Americans are counted as out of work or have quit looking. As that Phoenix fellow said, that leaves most of us still in pretty good shape, so why don't they show the happy ones on TV?

Actually, he's a bit too sensitive. The TV I watch blooms with prosperity: commercials full of goodies, and soap operas set in luxury. Even the cops and secretaries on TV live in apartments you couldn't touch for less than $1,500 a month.

But let that pass. It is true in the 1930s as many as one of four were out of work, and we didn't need TV to tell us. So we threw out the GOP and brought in the WPA. We adopted unemployment insurance, home relief, Social Security, public housing and programs to save the farmers.

Beginning with World War II, the picture changed. Credit was cheap and easy; sign here and buy a house, a car, a color TV, a swimming pool. Whole generations grew up believing that prosperity was forever. And the poor, the undeserving poor, became a burden on the taxpayers.

In 1967, a longtime publicist for General Electric named Ronald Reagan said anybody had a right to go fishing, but "he doesn't have the right to force his neighbors to support him."

Yeah, right on. So the shock became all the more demoralizing when members of his audience tumbled from affluence to pauperdom overnight.

President Reagan, busy dismantling the welfare state, has earnestly proposed that every business consider hiring one more employee. Since there are 14.7 million businesses, he explained, that should take care of the problem.

Since most of those businesses are one-man or even part-time operations, many of them having a hard time staying above water, that would be quite a trick. What it would do to the sacred goal of productivity is another question.

Switching gears, the president waves the want ads and insists that there are plenty of jobs, for those with the right skills and the right frame of mind. He had of course killed the federal job-training program, but he works hard at improving our morale.

His chief obstacle is those lines of jobless, those growing Reaganvilles, those farm auctions. And the solution is simple: Put them out of sight, and we can stay the course with a clear conscience.

RADICAL RAG

Fourth V.P. Idea Seems Dumb

Multiple Choice Quiz: Northwestern Needs: (a) 35 story dormitory (b) 35 story classroom building (c) 4 Vice-Presidents (d) None of the Above

Correct Answer: (d) None of the Above

As preposterous as the three choices a, b, and c may seem, there are plans afoot for Choice c to have four vice-presidents. In the reorganization proposal President Orze presented to the faculty in November, he outlined four vice-presidencies. As plans go now, this proposal will go the Board of Trustees in February for final approval prior to implementation.

Faculty members have related how under President Kilpatrick there were four vice-presidents. When Dr. Bienvenu came in to office, he decided there should only be two--Administration and Finance and Academic Affairs. Now Dr. Orze has decided to add two more which is hard to comprehend in times of decreasing enrollment and declining revenues. The title alone costs the university to pay the person a higher salary than a dean or other lower ranking position.

To Dr. Orze's credit he does propose to delay hiring the Vice-President of University Affairs until funds are available. However to have a Vice-President of Student Affairs, and a Vice-President for Academic Affairs makes little practical sense in light of the costs involved in extra salaries, secretaries and the other costs associated with maintaining an office.

What this writer sees as more important is the jobs being performed in the offices where they exist now rather than creating new levels of bureaucracy for students to attempt to figure out how to shuffle papers or get things done.

With our small student body, possibly the university could manage to operate quite efficiently with no Vice-Presidents and in the process save lots of money and really be more efficient. Let there be a Dean of the College to handle all the academic matters associated with a Vice-President of Academic Affairs--in other words this Dean would be Dean of deans and paid a dean's salary. Then a Controller could perform the financial affairs of the university and Northwestern already has one of those in addition to a Vice-President of Financial Affairs.

The Dean of Students could still serve in the same capacity he is doing now with no addition in title, no increase in salary, and no new administrative assistants with impressive titles of Assistant

More Radical Rag Fourth V.P. ...

Deans and probably corresponding pay increases.

The other new vice-presidency is University Affairs which includes academic support such as recruiting and admissions as well maintenance of the physical facility. The basic question is do we really need a V-P of maintenance when a much lower paid position could supervise the physical plant and maintenance. The recruiting and admission function, as important as it is to our future could be directly responsible to the President or the Vice-President of Academic Affairs or the Dean of Students. Do we need another layer of bureaucracy to further confuse or impeded our recruiting function? From the experience of the student body and contact with the university, what is needed is one person that can speak with authority and knowledge rather than just more people speaking in every direction without the ability to make decisions.

The concept of administrative reorganization is important to Northwestern and one that needs to be done quickly; however adding more top level jobs to a school already top heavy with administrators does not seem like a solution, instead only a worsening of the problem.

A university is important because it is here to serve students, and any way that it can better serve the student body should be a goal of Northwestern. However it is difficult from the vantage point as a student to see how four vice-presidents can help achieve the goal of better serving our student our student population. Hopefully Dr. Orze and others in Roy Hall will re-examine the need for four vice-presidents before submitting the reorganization plan to Baton Rouge.

Phi Beta Sigma

The Zeta Iota Chapter of Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity would like to extend best wishes and much success for a good semester to returning students and incoming freshmen. The brothers of the blue and white are prepared for the second half of the year to exemplify themselves brotherly, scholarly and in service.

The brothers of Sigma this past year were able to send a brother to Atlanta, Georgia for the fraternity's National Convention. Larry Hall had the pleasure of residing with distinction in the world's tallest hotel, the Westin Peachtree Plaza. The experience was a joyous one as he had the honor of meeting distinguished individuals such as Mrs. Coretta Scott King and the president of the National Urban League John Jacobs. He also met with former New York congresswoman Shirley Chisom, her successor and frat brother Edolphus Towns who won the 11th congressional seat in the Nov. elections.

The brightest experiences of Hall's days in Atlanta were touring the historic sites of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the Greek show, concert shows, beauty pageants, discos, restaurants and observing Atlanta's rich and progressive growth in business and industry.

Applications for the position of editor for the 1984 volume of the POTPOURRI, student yearbook, are being accepted until Feb. 8, according to Dr. Christine Ford, chairperson of the Student Publications Committee.

An interested student should write a letter to Dr. Ford, a member of the Languages Department faculty, stating his/her desire to be editor and qualifications.

The letter should include names of students who would be key members of the staff if the applicant is appointed editor.

Dr. Ford said that an interested student should refer to the Student Handbook for more information concerning the application and the editorship.

She said the committee will meet to interview applicants at 3 p.m. Feb. 9.

After being appointed, the new staff will begin work immediately on the 1983-1984 yearbook.

Panhellenic Begins Rush

Panhellenic Spring Rush began Monday, Jan. 17 and will continue until Friday, Feb. 4. Members from various sororities worked in Iberville and the Student Union lobby on Jan. 17-18 signing up girls in order to have "name banks," or lists of those interested in going Greek.

"Panhellenic thought it would be helpful to have names to pull from and we figured we would get more response this way," said Kathy Carroll, Program Advisor. Nine girls have signed up thus far.

It was decided at the Panhellenic meeting on Jan. 19 to have a "continuous open bidding" situation in which sororities can give bids "at their own discretion." This policy and the "name blanks" are both new spring rush ideas.

Although it is not mandatory to register for informal rush, you may do so in room 214 of the Student Union anytime from 8:00 a.m.-4:30 p.m. Monday-Friday. The dates and times of rush parties are also listed there.

Joe Stamey Elected Kappa Sigma National Man-Of-The-Year

Joe Stamey of Nat-chitoches, a senior accounting major at Northwestern is the recipient of the 1982 Hamilton W. Baker Award as Kappa Sigma Fraternity's national undergraduate "man of the year."

The prestigious honor for Stamey, past grand master of ceremonies of NSU's Theta-Mu chapter of Kappa Sigma, carries with it a $2,000 cash award from the Kappa Sigma Endowment Fund.

The NSU senior, who was one of several hundred Kappa Sigma members at colleges and universities in the United States and Canada nominated for the honor, will have his name engraved on the award plaque which is permanently displayed at the national fraternity's memorial headquarters in Charlottesville, Va.

NSU Receives Lignite Grant

Two scientists at Northwestern have received a $27,585 grant from the Louisiana Board of Regents' research and development program to study the wet combustion of lignite.

Conducting the one-year investigation of a new process for utilizing lignite as an energy source are Dr. Edward Graham, dean of the College of Science and Technology, and Dr. Wayne Hyde, chairman of the Department of Chemistry, Physics and Geology.

Graham, a nationally-known chemist who has conducted extensive research on the wet oxidation of coal, explained that in the proposed process, "Lignite suspended in water is oxidized with air at high pressure, preventing

In addition to his fraternity activities at NSU, Stamey is currently serving his second term as president of the university's Student Government Association. He is also the state's student representative on the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Stamey and a 1979 graduate of St. Mary's High School, Stamey is chairman of the Student Advisory Council, president of Phi Eta Sigma National Honor Society and a member of Phi Kappa Phi National Academic Honor Society.

He served as freshman class senator, senator-at-large and president pro tempore before being elected in the spring of 1982 to his first term as SGA president. He won re-election last spring.

cooling by evaporation."

The NSU dean, who is directing the research project which will involve several students, said that determining the reaction conditions will be the primary concern of the investigation.

"For this to work," he said, "we have to determine the right conditions for processing. Temperature, slurry concentration and pressure are some of the conditions we must consider."

According to Graham, the study, which is being conducted in cooperation with the Lignite Research and Development Institute at Northwestern, will provide information "to test the economic feasibility of the process."

Orze to Chair Board of Directors

Northwestern president Dr. Joseph J. Orze has been elected to a two-year term as chairman-elect of the board of directors for the American Association of State Colleges and Universities.

Orze, who has been president of NSU since June 1, will hold the office until November of 1984, when he will assume the chairmanship of the AASCU. Northwestern is one of 354 state colleges and universities which hold membership in the national association.

Orze was one of 11 college and university presidents from across the nation elected to terms on the AASCU's board of directors during the organization's recent annual meeting in Nashville, Tenn.

Orze has been a member of the AASCU's board of directors since 1978. He as elected to the board while serving as president of Worcester State College in Massachusetts, the position he held for seven years before his selection as NSU's 15th president.

Northwestern's president, who is recognized nationally as an art historian and sculptor, has served on AASCU committees on international programs, cultural affairs, athletics and humanities.

Earlier this year, Orze led a five-member delegation to Poland to finalize an educational exchange agreement between the AASCU and the Polish Ministry of Science, Higher Education and Technology. He was also chairman of the delegation to Poland in 1980 which established the exchange agreement.

Orze, who has been active in international higher education programs since becoming a college president, was also a delegate from the AASCU's educational good will visit to the National Republic of China in 1978.

President of Worcester State from 1975 until his election as NSU's chief executive in December of 1982, Orze holds bachelor and master's degrees from Syracuse University and a doctorate in higher education from George Peabody College.

He was dean of the College of Fine and Applied Arts at Southeastern Massachusetts University for six years and served for one year as acting dean of the faculty and interim treasurer at the institution before becoming president of Worcester State.

The Demons and Lady Demons Need Your Support

Saturday night at 5:45 the Northwestern Lady Demons downed the Lamar Lady Cardinals 68-62 in an exciting game that wasn't over until it was over. Five hundred people showed up for that game according to the official score sheet. I counted 212.

At 8:00 that same night, the NSU Demons played the Mercer Bears. Mercer came into the game undefeated in the Trans America Athletic Conference. The very same conference that NSU competes in. Officially 1175 people showed up for that one. That figure was probably close to 406.

What I don't understand is this: What ELSE is there to do on a Saturday night in Natchitoches?

The Student Body, Boojangles, Plantation, or anything else doesn't start jukeing at 5:45. And you know as well as I do that the only people out at 8:00 are the high school kids who drive the strip.

Right now, the Lady Demons are playing ball with the top teams in the country. They lost to two top twenty teams by less than 10 points. One of those teams lost to La. Tech in the women's basketball FINALS last year. And they only beat our Lady Demons by eight points. The other was the University of Alabama and they're ranked something like 19.

At Stephen F. Austin, a team that has been consistently ranked in the top twenty the last several years, the Lady Demons were actually playing against six competitors. The starting five girls for SFA were tough enough, but the students at Stephen F. Austin came out en masse for the game and heckled the mess out of the Lady Demons. And don't let anyone tell you that heckling doesn't mess up your concentration out there. It does.

The NSU men are starting to play the kind of ball that won them second place in the TAAC last year. The 4-11 record is deceiving. They lost to Mississippi State of the Southeastern Conference and they lost a pair of games to Houston Baptist, the only team in the TAAC that is still unbeaten in conference play. And they lost most of their games when they were without the services of Johnny Martin, a pre-season all-conference pick.

The Demons have now won four out of their last five games and appear to have the momentum building them up to the conference tournament in late February. But they, and the Lady Demons, need your support desperately. A good heckling section is worth at LEAST 10-12 points. And don't tell me that you don't know what to say. I read the bathroom walls.

Don't try to fool anybody. You have nothing else better to do than come out and support our basketball teams. Don't tell me that you're studying either because you and I both know better.

The play this Thursday night at 7:30, and they play a very good Samford University team. The Lady Demons play tonight (Tuesday) against the Southeastern Lady Lions. So please, go out there and heckle; support your teams and give the other guys on the other teams a real bad time. You'll feel better for it. I know I do.

Lady Demons Outscore Lamar

Northwestern's Lady Demons survived their worst shooting night of the season making only 33 percent of their shots from the field, and still downed the Lady Cardinals of Lamar University 68-62 before a small crowd in Prather Coliseum Saturday night.

Although the Lady Demons had trouble scoring from the outside, they hung tough by making 21 of 33 free throws for the evening.

The Lady Demons started the scoring on a Tracy Taylor 18 foot jump shot, and expanded that to a four point lead on a Kim Paulk steal and assist to Stephany Washington who made the layup. Moments later Teresa made a three point play and the Lady Demons were seemingly in command at 7-2.

The rest of the half was pretty even as both teams took turns missing shots and throwing the ball away.

The Lady Cardinals pulled to within one point of the Lady Demons when Coleen Solseth scored on her own rebound. The Lady Demons hung tough from then on however, and denied the Lady Cardinals a basket after the 2:17 mark of the initial half.

It looked like the Lady Demons would run away with the game in the second half, increasing their lead to 13 points with 10 minutes to play, but missed shots let the Lady Cardinals move to within two points, 55-53, with an even four minutes to go.

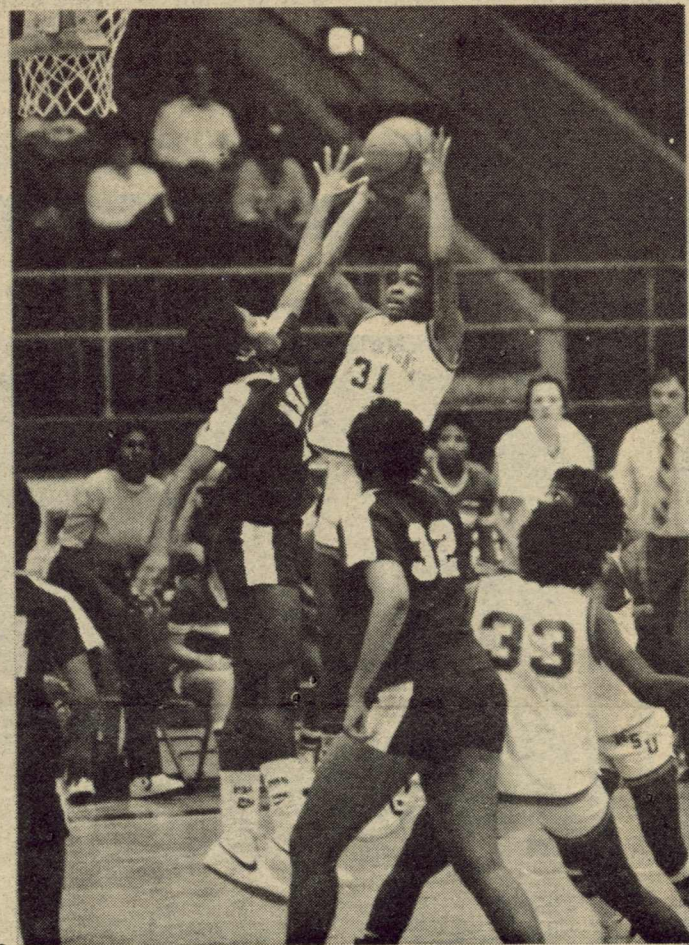

Paulk made a key bucket to put NSU up by four and after a missed shot, the Lady Cardinals were forced to start fouling the Lady Demons.

The NSU female basketballers were up to the occasion making their last eight straight free throw attempts. Paulk hit four straight and Washington and Taylor each canned two to put the game out of reach.

Taylor capped an outstanding week of basketball by scoring 23 points and hauling in six rebounds. Paulk added 12 points and seven rebounds to go with four assists, while Washington and Lonnie Banks each made 10 points. Washington also managed six rebounds and Banks handed out four assists on the night. Banks also picked up six important steals and Thomas added three more for the Lady Demon cause.

Another Sure Two

Stephany Washington goes up for two more points during a recent Lady Demons basketball game. The Lady Demons are undefeated at home with a 5-0 record going into tonight's game against the Southeastern University Lady Lions. Tipoff time is 7:30, students get in free with NSU I.D.

Lady Demons Crush Centenary 75-55 in Team Effort

Katie Harris hit a 15-foot jumper with just 28 seconds left to play to put the final nail in the coffin as the Lady Demons buried the Centenary Lady's basketball team Monday night in a standout team effort, 75-55. The Lady Demons were in command the whole way, totally dominating Centenary despite a rather sloppily played first half.

Stephany Washington led the way for the Lady Demons with 17 points and she was followed closely by freshman point guard Teresa Thomas who sank eight of 15 shots for 16 points. Also hitting double figures for the Lady Demons were Tracy Taylor who hit 14 points and Lonnie Banks who canned 10.

It took a while for the Lady Demons to get untracked, they only scored four points in the first five and a half minutes and were losing 6-4, before they scored seven straight to take the lead they never relinquished. Taylor, who had scored the Lady Demons first four points, added four more and Washington made a free throw and Thomas sank a layup after another Banks assist during the spurt. Taylor scored all of her 14 points in the first half. The Lady Demons went in to the lockerroom with a 37-22 halftime lead.

Banks started the the second half by sinking a layup off the opening tip and then Paulk added a free throw and Thomas arched a long one from 20 feet to put the Lady Demons in front 42-23. The Lady Demons hit their biggest lead of the night at 25 points on another one of Lonnie Banks' amazing passes, this one again to Thomas, to go ahead 71-46. That assist was one of six for Banks while Kim Paulk handed out five and Thomas added four of her own for the Lady Demon cause.

Banks also grabbed a game high 12 rebounds to compliment an outstanding all around performance. Taylor and Washington shared second place honors with six caroms apiece, while Val Williams pulled down five. Lady Demon Tandra Lewis was a perfect two for two from the field before being sidelined with a knee injury early in the ballgame.

Demons Upset Mercer In TAAC Matchup

Brian Jolivet hit four clutch free throws in the final 23 seconds to give the NSU Demons a 65-61 upset of the Mercer University Bears in a Trans America Athletic Conference game.

evening. "It got very physical and we got away from our game plan. We were running early and didn't want to."

The Ladies fell behind 42-22 at halftime and were forced to come out running in the second half. And that's when Pierson says they started playing good ball. "We had to run and we did it well, and then Stephany got hurt."

The Lady Demons closed the 20 point gap to nine points with just under eight minutes to go in the game, but SFA outscored the Lady Demons 10-4 to put the game just out of reach.

James Smith, the Lady Demons assistant coach said the defense didn't play bad, and that the Ladies played well in the second half. "We just can't put two consistent halves of basketball slow down offense designed to force the other the Bears to give a lay up. The Demons effectively ran that offense for together," he said, noting that the Lady Demons shot 36 percent from the field in the first half compared to 62 percent in the second half.

Pierson also noted, "We're not playing well until we get 10 points down. If we could get the girls to think that they're 10 points down when we start the game we would do alot better."

The home court advantage for SFA also had alot to do with the outcome. The SFA backers were a very vocal group and pressured the Lady Demons a little bit.

In addition to Taylor's 32 points, Lonnie Banks canned 18 and grabbed seven rebounds in another brilliant performance for the freshman guard. Kim Paulk added 11 points and three assists while Teressa Thomas dished out five assists.

Johnny Martin stole the inbounds pass and fed Hale who got another layup to put NSU up by four. Mercer scored again and then fouled Jolivet, forcing the Demon guard to the line for two free throws. Jolivet coolly responded by banking in both of them and the Demons resumed their four point lead.

Tony Gattis scored two quickly for the Bears and again Jolivet was fouled as he brought the ball upcourt for NSU. This time he missed the first shot of a one and one free throw but grabbed his own rebound and was fouled again. This time he calmly sank both ends of the one and one to give the Demons the 65-61 victory.

The game started off the way it ended, close. The largest lead of the first half belonged to the Demons and they had that five point lead on two occasions. Five minutes into the game Mercer was called for goaltending a Johnny Martin shot. NSU led 9-4. With 40 seconds left in the first half NSU again went up by five when Harry Francis fed Hale with a short pass, and Hale layed it in.

The second half was much the same as the first half with Mercer scoring 10 of the first 13 points and taking a quick lead 37-33. However, the Demons came right back and scored eight straight points to take the lead they never relinquished.

Northwestern was led by Martin's 23 points and seven rebounds while Hale hit 18 markers. Francis picked up six important rebounds and dished out four assists, while being credited with seven steals for the Demons. Calvin Madlock had a game high six assists for Northwestern.

Grappe Receives Latino Memorial Award

Senior defensive end David Grappe received the Lester Latino Award for his play during his career at Northwestern, and he was honored during halftime ceremonies at the Northwestern vs. Centenary basketball game.

The award, which was established this season for the first time, is named in honor of the former Northwestern State standout football player who was killed in an automobile accident in 1981.

The award will be given to a Demon football player each year who demonstrates the courage, teamwork, dedication and desire to excel in which Lester Latino exemplified during his football career at Northwestern.

Grappe, a native of Haughton who was a four-year starter for the Demons as his defensive end position, led the team in tackles this past season as Northwestern posted a 7-4 mark. Grappe was named as Permanent Defensive Captain following the season and was named to the second unit on the Louisiana Sports Writers Association all-state team. Along with being a standout football player, Grappe is also a starter on the Demon baseball team.

Latino was a team captain his final two years as a Demon and earned all-conference honors both as a junior and again during his final season.

Demons Edge Gents By Two

Harry Francis sank two clutch free throws with 37 seconds left in the game to give Northwestern the edge it needed to down the visiting Centenary Gents 77-75 in an exciting Trans America Athletic Conference game played at Prather Coliseum.

Francis' free throws came after he was fouled intentionally by Centenary's Eric Woodard, and it gave the Demons a 77-70 lead. Centenary's try at a comeback fell short and the first of two TAAC games involving these two teams ended in a Demon win.

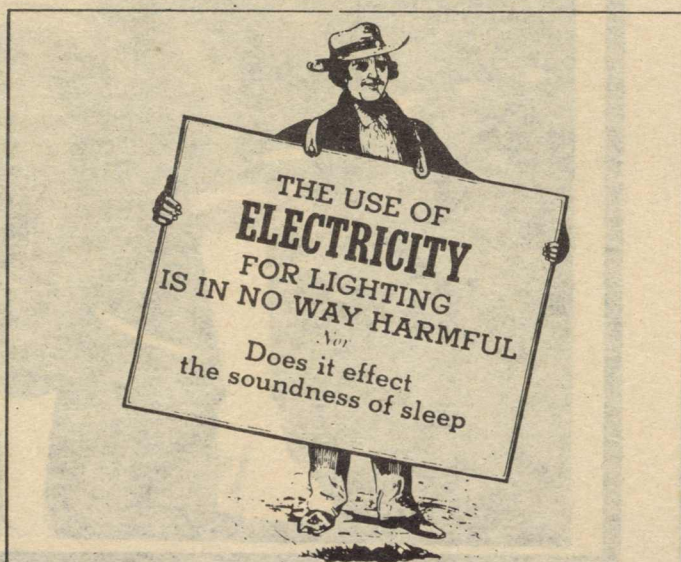

The score was tied at 10-10 when Centenary reeled off 13 points to NSU's three and took a 23-13 lead. Northwestern came right back and outscored the Gents 14-3 to take a one point lead with 4:14 left on the first half clock.

But the first half proved to be a half of streaks as Centenary reeled off seven straight points to move in front 33-27 with two minutes left. Finally it was Northwestern's turn to rally and they scored eight of the final 10 points, including the last two on a Brian Jolivette clutch shot at the buzzer to tie the game 35 all.

The second half was controlled by Northwestern from the start. Johnny Martin hit a turn around jumper on the baseline just seconds into the final half to give the Demons the lead they never relinquished.

Madlock led the Demons in both scoring and rebounds with 27 points and 10 boards on the night. Martin, Francis, Hale, and Grays all contributed 10 points to the Demons win, and Martin added eight rebounds and five assists to his stats. A. J. ## Dr. Rene Bienvenu, NSU's 14th President, Succumbs

Dr. Rene J. Bienvenu, NSU's, 14th president before retiring this past summer, died Thursday morning at 7:14 a.m. in a Shreveport hospital. Dr. Bienvenu was 59.

Dr. Bienvenu served NSU as president from 1978 until June 1, 1982. He was appointed president of NSU in 1977 by the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities succeeding Dr. Arnold Kilpatrick who retired February 1, 1978.

Dr. Bienvenu was a faculty member and administrator for 27 years before becoming NSU's president. Dr.

Bienvenu was dean of the College of Science and Technology at Northwestern for 10 years and was chairman of the NSU Department of Microbiology from 1960 to 1967.

In recognition of his 32 years of service to Northwestern and his five years as the institution's president, the Board of Trustees last month named Dr. Bienvenu President Emeritus of NSU.

A nationally-known scientific researcher and writer, Dr. Bienvenu served Northwestern from 1950 until his retirement except for a brief period in 1977 when he was assistant dean of the School of Allied Health at the Louisiana State University Medical Center in Shreveport, the position he held when he was appointed president of NSU.

A native of Colfax, Bienvenu served as a microbiologist at Confederate Memorial Hospital in Shreveport and as a chemist for Leland Hamner Company in Houston before joining the Northwestern faculty.

Dr. Bienvenu earned the B.S. degree in zoology from Louisiana State University in 1944 and the M.S. degree in bacteriology from LSU in 1949. He received his doctorate in microbiology from the University of Texas in 1957.

Dr. Bienvenu also studied at the University of Pennsylvania, Cornell University, and the Oak Ridge Institute for Nuclear Studies and served as a visiting professor at the University of Texas.

Research conducted by Dr. Bienvenu over the years received nationwide attention through the publication of numerous articles for scientific and scholarly journals.

Dr. Bienvenu's tenure here at NSU was highlighted by the establishment of programs and priorities designed to enhance academic standards at NSU. The NSU master of science program in microbiology received a commendation of excellence from the Louisiana Board of Regents for Higher Education during his term, and his former students established a special microbiology award in his honor.

During his term, the Lignite Research and Development Institute, NSU Press, Louisiana Folklife Center and the Center for the History of Louisiana Education were developed. Normal Hill on the NSU campus was placed on the National Register for Historic Places.

Bienvenu was instrumental in obtaining some $25 million for facilities during his presidency.

Dr. Bienvenu was survived by his widow, Mrs. Catherine Nelken Bienvenu, of Natchitoches; his father, Rene J. Bienvenu Sr., of Natchitoches; three children, Mrs. Clay Franklin of Memphis, Tenn., Elizabeth Bienvenu of Marshall, Texas, and Dr. Steven N. Bienvenu of Shreveport; and three grandchildren.

Treen Exempts Northwestern From State Budget Cuts

At a Tuesday luncheon in the Student Union Ballroom, Governor Dave Treen announced that Northwestern would be exempt from the 4.4 percent budget cut that affected universities in the state.

Saying top quality education was a prerequisite for every advancement made in the state, Treen made his announcement while reporting on the recent Special Session of the Legislature.

The budget cut would have meant $743,000 less that Northwestern would have to operate on in the next fiscal year. Of that amount, $543,000 is being restored and $280,000 will be put in the budget for design and engineering work to rebuild Caldwell Hall, which burned in October.

In his address, Treen also mentioned the new Louisiana High School for Math, Science, and the Arts that will open on the NSU campus this fall for talented high school students.

"This should help those who can be challenged to greater achievement," he stated and then added, "It's going to cost some money, but it will be worth it."

The Chamber of Commerce sponsored the luncheon that drew a big crowd which was welcomed by Natchitoches Mayor Joe Sampite and NSU president Dr. Joseph Orze. Bill Cross, president of the Chamber of Commerce introduced the guests and asked Senator Don Kelly and Representative Jimmy Long to introduce the governor.

Long expressed the appreciation of Natchitoches and Northwestern for the help which Governor Treen has given us. "We've called on him and he has come through," the Natchitoches representative said.

NSU President Dr. Joseph Orze said that the exemption was necessary because the university is operating on a "very barebones" budget.

"We're going to balance the budget and work it out. But it's going to be very, very tight...the problems that the university got into didn't happen overnight, and they're not going to be solved overnight," Orze said.

Luv The Gov

Governor Dave Treen spoke on the NSU campus last Wednesday about Northwestern's exemption from the 4.4 percent state-mandated budget cuts. He also talked about the recent special session of the Louisiana Legislature.

LSUS Chancellor Upset With Treen's Decision

Dr. Grady Bogue, chancellor of Louisiana State University in Shreveport said Wednesday that he wants a public explanation of why Governor Dave Treen exempted NSU from the 4.4 percent cutback in state funds.

Dr. Bogue said the governor's decision to give back a large portion of the state-mandated cutback "has not been easy for us (the LSUS faculty) to understand."

Bogue demanded a public explanation of the reasons behind the move to give back $543,000 of the 743,000 that was supposed to be cut from state allocations to Northwestern.

Bogue said, "I think the most important thing for most of us concerned is to get the full story. It has the appearance of a political action with no facts made public to support it. If there are reasons, I think they ought to be stated, so folks could understand why they were exempted and we were not."

Bogue went on to say, "Two conclusions now seem possible, one... is that we were not sufficiently aggressive in making our needs known to the governor. The second is that there were some extenuating circumstances related to the management of Northwestern that justified special consideration.

A Week of Thanks And One of Sorrow

Last week was a week that saw a true friend of Northwestern come see us, and a close friend of Northwestern leave us. It was a week of celebration and one that just as quickly turned to a week of mourning.

Last Thursday morning, Northwestern lost one of its truly great friends in former President Dr. Rene J. Bienvenu who died in a Shreveport hospital.

Dr. Bienvenu was a man who had as good a relationship with the students of NSU as perhaps any other president in the state or the south. When he was in town, his office was always open and he more than made you feel at home when you got in to see him. I think probably the standard of a college president's relationship with his students should be judged by the relationships between Dr. Bienvenu and his students. It was mutual admiration on both sides.

Dr. B. always seemed to have the students needs on his mind. If there was a problem, he was ready to listen and then work hard toward a solution. He was always in the thick of student activities and he was as big a Northwestern supporter as there was.

Many, many Northwestern students felt a very personal loss with the death of Dr. Bienvenu, words alone don't express the sorrow of not only the NSU students, but the faculty, staff, and the town of Natchitoches.

Another friend of Northwestern, Governor Dave Treen, made a stop in town the other day (Wednesday) and presented us with a little gift. A little gift, that is, of over eight-thousand dollars in budget-cut exemptions. Thanks governor, that was a real nice thing to do.

But along with thanking our governor, let's not for one minute forget about the diligent efforts of Northwestern's two state legislators, Senator Don Kelly and Representative Jimmy Long.

Those two men have long been good, good friends of Northwestern. Their successful lobbying efforts and their much respected records as two of Louisiana's finest legislators actually led to this exemption.

Northwestern is extremely lucky to be represented by these two men, both of whom always think of Northwestern when they are down in Baton Rouge. It was these same two men who just a year ago, got Northwestern selected as the site for the new Gifted and Talented High School that will open up this fall.

That of course, means that dorms that have been previously unoccupied will be filled, and these potential students can see all the benefits that NSU offers them, first hand.

Let's give credit where credit is due. First to Governor Dave Treen who proved to be a good friend of Northwestern by granting us the exemption, knowing full well that somebody like LSU-S chancellor Dr. Grady Bogue would take a cheap shot at us with all the media attention that Shreveport can give him (daily newspapers and television), and sticking to his guns and granting us the exemption. Secondly, a big round of thanks goes to Senator Kelly and Representative Long; they deserve it for all the positive things and hard work that they do for Northwestern. --Joe Cunningham

Environmentalists Losing One-Sided War

Parable for our times is the village of Times Beach, Mo. The former village, that is. Times Beach was a model community, sponsored by a St. Louis newspaper in the booming 1920s as a wholesome place for working people to live.

John Hess

Its only drawback was also a virtue: It was in a flood plain, so land was cheap.

Three years ago, the federal government offered flood insurance, which no private company would give. It set one condition, that houses be elevated and earthworks built, but it offered to pay 95 percent of the cost.

The 2,000 residents debated the proposal. This was 1980, and the message in the air was that the government was a monster on the taxpayer's back. The plan was defeated by a single vote.

Early last December, the Meramec River rose. When it receded, Times Beach was a mud flat dotted with wrecked homes.

As survivors trickled back, one of the first things the mayor did was to appeal for federal aid to rebuild their homes, but fate now delivered an even more shattering blow.

The authorities advised them that their village was heavily contaminated with dioxin. The deadly chemical came from a plant in Verona, Mo., that had manufactured Agent Orange herbicide during the Vietnam War.

Its waste oil had been spread around the state as a spray to harden dirt roads and playing fields. Times Beach appears to have been one of the beneficiaries.

Residents now remembered mysterious plagues that had killed livestock and pets in years gone by. But some of them returned to their ruined homesteads, past new signboards bearing the skull and crossbones.

Looking ironically at the state workmen in "spacesuits" who were gathering up the poisoned debris, they said it was too late for them to avoid exposure and besides, they had nowhere else to go.

So Times Beach was another casualty of the Vietnam War. More broadly, it was a victim of another war, which is still going on. It is the war between the worshippers of the quick buck and those "elitists," those "impractical dreamers," known as environmentalists.

"Conservatives" - an ironic name in this context - charge that alarmists bankrupt industry with their costly regulations. They have rallied workers with such slogans as "Out of Work and Hungry? Eat an Environmentalist."

A fair test of this thesis is the James River in Virginia.

The pesticide Kepone destroyed its rich fishing industry, and the cost of a cleanup is estimated in the billions. An organization called Resources for the Future points out that preventive action at the chemical plant might have cost it $100,000 a year.

But the chemical industry prefers to spend money fighting regulation. And it now controls the Environmental Protection Agency. Its top officials under Anne Gorsuch - Rita Lavelle, Robert Perry, John Todhunter, Kathleen Bennett - all have worked as lawyers and publicists for polluters.

Jim Sibbison, an EPA public man who resigned, told Common Cause that his releases had been edited to delete words like "cancer" and "sterility" as possible effects of a pesticide. Secret meetings of EPA officials with industry representatives have led to rulings in favor of industry.

So in a manner of speaking, we all live in Times Beach.

By a narrow margin, we voted for anti-environmentalism in 1980; we voted the government off our backs. The flood has not hit most of us yet, and the men in the spacesuits are not yet poking around in the debris of our homes, but the pollution is spreading.

Maybe we ought to reconsider our vote, while there is time.

She's The Epitome of an NSU Supporter

She might just be Northwestern's biggest supporter. She has to be considered one of our greatest fans. Last fall she was in the top three for the Current Sauce's "Best Teacher" survey. Her name is Elise James and she teaches Office Administration.

Her dedication to Northwestern and Northwestern athletics runs deeper than most. In addition to being a member of the Demon booster club, Mrs. James is also the only woman on the Athletic Council. Her dedication to her students and her influence on them remain with those students even after graduation. "I still hear from kids I taught 10 years ago," she says, "they know they can come to me if something is the matter."

Last fall, some of her dedication was finally publicly noticed. At the Booster Club's kickoff party at the Louisiana Outdoor Amphitheatre, Mrs. James was given a bouquet of red roses from the Demon football team. She framed the card that went along with the bouquet.

"Sports are very important

to a university," Mrs. James said, "not only from the standpoint that they bring student athletes here, but a good athletic program promotes a good student body. Where there is enthusiasm and school spirit, it creates a feeling of closeness."

Rarely does Mrs. James miss a Demon, or a Lady Demon, athletic event. You can see her at all of the Demon and Lady Demon basketball games in her favorite chair in the courtside bleachers. And she always draws a crowd. An admirer of Mrs. James said recently, "When she gets to the games, people just naturally make a beeline to sit with, or at least around her. It's like she's the picnic that drew the ants."

One of Mrs. James most memorable times as a Demon Booster was the time when she accompanied the football team on a flight to San Angelo, Texas to watch the Demons play.

"It was interesting to see how they traveled. With fifty players and trainers in one motel, there wasn't one bit of trouble. I know you hear a lot about the football team being a bunch of bad guys, but traveling with that bunch of boys was a delightful experience."

Her dedication to NSU mirrors her current optimism about NSU athletics.

"Our program is going well. One of the keys to a successful athletic program is the support from the fans." She adds, "Now is the time they need you the most, we can only continue to move forward if we have a good athletic program and we are getting there."

Lady Demons Trounce Reno 84-72 in Second Game

The Lady Demons recovered from the ill effects that the altitude had on them the first night, by rolling to an 84-72 win over Nevada-Reno in the second game of the two-game series.

The game was never really close as Northwestern built up a 20-point first half lead and coasted to their second win over Nevada-Reno in two nights.

The Lady Demons, up by 20 with about four minutes to play in the first half, substituted freely to give everyone a chance to come to grips with the thinned oxygen supply in the mountain coliseum. Nevada-Reno closed the gap to 44-31 at halftime, but the Lady Demons never let them get closer, completely dominating play in the second half.

Stephany Washington ended the night as the Lady Demons leading scorer with 21 points. She was followed closely by Tracy Talor with 19 points, Teressa Thomas with 15, and Lonnie Banks with 10.

Also scoring for the Lady Demons were Val Williams with nine, Kim Paulk with six, and Lisa Carter and Katie Harris each with two points.

Washington picked up 10 rebounds for the Lady Demons cause and Taylor added nine of her own. Williams grabbed seven boards for the Lady Demons also. Paulk and Thomas each dished out a generous eight assists.

Lady Demons Nip Nevada-Reno In First Game of Road Trip

The Northwestern Lady Demons overcame the altitude and played clutch basketball when it counted the most, in downing Nevada-Reno 69-64 in the first game of a two-game series.

With 1:48 left in the game, Lady Demon center Tracy Taylor picked up her fifth personal foul. Reno made the ensuing foul shots and moved ahead 62-59.

Kim Paulk hit a 15-foot jumper 18 seconds later to pull NSU within one, 63-62. The Lady Demons then forced a Nevada-Reno turnover when the Reno girls couldn't get a shot off within the 30 second time period.

Paulk scored again on a layup to put the Lady Demons up by one and then Stephany Washington stole the ball and layed it in to give the Lady Demons the lead they never relinquished 65-62.

Moments later, NSU had the ball again and Teressa Thomas was fouled and went to the foul line to shoot two. She made both of them and Nevada-Reno took the in-bounds pass and made a quick bucket to pull within one, 65-64.

The Lady Demons got the ball back one last time and again Thomas was fouled. She went to the free throw line and calmly sank both shots to give the Lady Demons their final points.

Washington led the Lady Demons with 19 points on an outstanding nine of 10 performance from the field. Paulk, Taylor, and Lonnie Banks each pitched in 12 points and Thomas threw in 10 for the evening.

Banks continued her domination of the boards by grabbing 10 and Taylor, Paulk and Washington each had five rebounds for the nights work.

Hale Scores 32 As NSU Rips Georgia Southern In TAAC Play

Kenny Hale led a fast-breaking Demon offense, and Calvin Madlock and Johnny Martin dominated the boards as the NSU Demons dominated the Georgia Southern ballclub 78-62 in Trans America Athletic Conference action.

Northwestern never trailed in the contest in upping their TAAC record to 4-5 and push their overall record to 5-13. Georgia Southern dropped to 4-6 in the TAAC and 8-10 overall.

With the scored tied 8-8 early in the first half, NSU scored twice as many as Georgia Southern did for the rest of that half and went into the lockerroom with a 38-22 lead.

Georgia Southern came out strong in the second half, outscoring the Demons 18-6, to pull within four points, 44-40.

Slowly, Northwestern battled back and increased their lead to 20 points when Martin hit both ends of a 1-1 free throw.

Yates emptied the bench over the last two minutes of the game but Georgia Southern couldn't close the gap.

The Demons were led by Hale's 32 points while Martin added 15 and Madlock poured in 12. Martin and Madlock both contributed 10 rebounds to the Demons cause and Madlock and Brian Jolivet each dished out four assists.

no Lady Demons Defense Sparks Win Over SLU

The Northwestern Lady Demons used a standout defensive performance to claim a 66-57 victory over the visiting Southeastern University Lady Lions in basketball played at Prather Coliseum Tuesday night.

The game started off very physical and both teams were quickly whistled for four fouls apiece.

The Lady Demons jumped to a quick 4-0 lead on foul shots but the Lady Lions came right back and went ahead 6-4 with a physical inside game.

When some obviously blatant pushing and shoving went unnoticed by the referee, Rodney Thrash, a member of the famed Baseline Bums, picked up his first technical foul of the season in an exchange of ideas and views with the referee. SLU was awarded one shot and Robin Roberts calmly missed.

That sparked the crowd and the Lady Demons, and NSU scored eight straight points to take the lead for good. The Lady Demons hit their biggest lead at 29-19 on a Val Williams jumper and kept it at 10 points one minute later when Stephany Washington hit a short jumper from the lane. The Lady Demons best overall first half of the season ended with them ahead 31-25.

The Lady Demons charged out and upped their lead to 10 points again when cat-quick Lonnie Banks stole the ball and raced downcourt unmolested for the layup to put NSU ahead 41-31.

Then it was SLU's turn to get hot and they went on a 14-4 spurt to tie the Lady Demons with just under 10 minutes left.

The Lady Demons came back and scored seven straight to pull ahead 52-45 and never looked back as they coasted to their ninth win against six losses. SLU evened its record at 7-7.

Coaches Pat Pierson and James Smith agreed that the defensive performance and the overall first half effort were keys to the victory.

Pierson said, "We showed a lot of intensity and concentration. We're usually a second half team and that was our best first half in a long time." She added, "Our defense was good and our maturity was showing tonight."

After coming off a thumb injury, senior forward

Stephany Washington led all scorers with 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds, while getting eight steals. Tracy Taylor added 16 points and Lonnie Banks cashed in 14. Banks, Tandra Lewis, and Lisa Carter all had five rebounds for the Lady Demons, and Washington and Teresa Thomas dished out five and four assists respectively.

Intramural Ping-Pong Tourney Draws Big Crowd

Last week the intramural department held its table tennis tournament, which consisted of both singles and doubles competition in the men's and women's divisions.

The men's doubles consisted of eight teams. Arman Naghaue and Herianto Suhendra of Kingpins took top honors in the event, while Dani and Iwan Waworuntu of 3-V International were runners-up.

Rounding out the competition was Joe Bienvenu of YANG and Eddie McDugle of Conine tying for third with Los Amigos' Louis Vasquez and Jorge Mancilla.

In the men's singles, it was Kingpins' Suhendra winning first again, and Beto Vasquez taking second for Los Amigos.

Fernando Manual, also playing for Los Amigos tied for third with Dani Waworuntu.

Jutta Green and Elsa Ramirez were the champions in the women's doubles competition, that saw eight teams enter that phase of the tournament also.

Phi Mu's Lynn Clary and

Angela Lasyone took a second place finish. Sigma Kappa's Jenny Johnson and Ghlee Woodworth were beaten in the second round to tie for third with Dwanda Smith and Marion Johnson of Zeta Phi Beta.

21 women entered the singles competition, but it was Los Amigos' Ramirez who took it all when she defeated Sylvia Del Carmen, also of Los Amigos in the championship. Fellow Tri-Sigs, Stacy Maddox and Kim Gill tied for third.

Samford Drops Demons

Samford University took advantage of sloppy team play and a plague of Northwestern fouls to turn back the Demons 90-70 in a TAAC game played Thursday night.

Trailing 69-62 after being down by 20 points in the second half, Demon guard Kenny Hale hit a jump shot at the free throw line and was charged with a questionable foul, his fifth of the night.

Moments later, NSU's Johnny Martin was whistled for his fifth foul of the night and Samford opened up a 12 point lead. Calvin Madlock made both ends of a 1-1 foul shot, but shortly thereafter he too became the victim of the referee's whistle as he was charged with his fifth foul of the night. Northwestern didn't score for the last 2:14 of the game and Madlock's final points were NSU's last ones. Samford added 10 more of their own for the win making them 3-5 in the TAAC, the same as NSU.

Samford went into the lockerroom at halftime holding a 47-36 lead as they shot an outstanding 64 percent from the field in the initial half. NSU was a victim of their own game as they just couldn't control the ball and simply threw away numerous scoring opportunities. Poor shot selection also contributed to their 41 percent shooting average.

Northwestern forced another turnover and could have cut the gap to five on two successive occasions, but sloppy ballhandling thwarted the comeback. One minute later, Hale picked up his fifth foul and the wind seemed to be taken out of the Demons sails.

Hale and Madlock ended the night as the Demons leading scorers with 20 points apiece, followed by Martin with 15. Madlock and A.J. Culbreath each had six rebounds for the Demons.

NSU Loses Heartbreaker

The NSU Demons played about as well as you can, and still dropped a heartbreaker to the University of Arkansas-Little Rock by a score of 50-47.

Down by one point with just under two minutes to play, the Demons were forced to foul and the UALR Trojans responded by sinking eight straight.

The Demons shot an unbelievable 71 percent from the field, including 90 percent in the second half, but were whistled for 17 fouls compared to just eight for UALR. The Trojans went to the line 22 times while Northwestern made the trip just three times.

The first half ended with NSU up by two points 28-26. UALR came back to take the lead and used foul shots to keep it, en route to the Trans America Athletic Conference victory. NSU dropped to 3-5 in the TAAC.

For the night NSU was led by Calvin Madlock with 13 points, including a six for eight showing from the field. Madlock also was the Demons high rebounder with three.

Harry Francis popped in 12 points for the Demons and Kenny Hale added 10. Johnny Martin also had three rebounds on the night and A.J. Culbreath had two assists.

Dr. Barry Smiley Named Dean of College of Business

Dr. Barry A. Smiley, chairman of the business administration department at Louisiana College in Pineville for the past three years, has been appointed dean of the College of Business and Applied Sciences at Northwestern.

Smiley's appointment, which becomes effective July 1, was announced this week by NSU President Dr. Joseph J. Orze following approval by the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities.

As dean of the recently-reorganized College of Business and Applied Sciences at NSU, Smiley will be the administrator of a college comprised of the departments of business administration and management, business-distributive education and office administration, industrial education and technology, home economics, and agriculture and animal sciences.

Northwestern's new dean has served since 1980 as chairman and professor of Louisiana College's Department of Business Administration. While at the Pineville school, he was the recipient of the first endowed professorship in the college's history and last year was elected chairman of the faculty.

Before going to Louisiana College, he was associate professor and coordinator of marketing for two years at Columbus College in Georgia and was associate professor of marketing for six years at East Texas State University in Commerce.

Smiley received the bachelor of arts degree in economics from Duke University, the master of business administration degree from San Jose State University in California and the doctor of business administration degree in marketing from Louisiana Tech University.

During his professional career, the Grove City, Pa., native has received numerous honors, including Marketing Educator of the Year in 1976 from Sales and Marketing Executives of Dallas, Tex.

Kappa Alpha Boxing Tourney To Be Held March 16-17

Getting punched around is no fun, unless it takes place in the annual Kappa Alpha Fraternity Boxing Tournament for Muscular Dystrophy at Northwestern.

Northwestern students with little or no boxing skills have taken hundreds of punches in the eight-year history of the tournament, an event that has been proclaimed as one of the best amateur boxing shows in the South.

The tournament, which is so exciting and popular that it is being featured in the March issue of College Sports Magazine, raised over $2,400 last year for the National Muscular Dystrophy Association. The total contributions to the national MDA since 1975 is more than $14,000.

"Punching One Another for MD" has become the theme for the Kappa Alpha tournament, which is being presented for the ninth year on Wednesday and Thursday, March 16-17, in the Intramural Building (Old Men's Gym) on the NSU campus. The boxing program begins each night at 7:30 p.m.

Northwestern students, both men and women, may sign up for the tournament in the Office of the Dean of Students. Room 309 of the Student Union Building. The official weigh-in ceremonies will be conducted Tuesday, March 15, in the second-floor lobby of the Student Union.

James LaCaze, a graduating senior from Natchitoches, is directing the ninth annual Kappa Alpha Fraternity Boxing Tournament for Muscular Dystrophy. He said the tournament will feature several weight divisions. Preliminary bouts are scheduled for Wednesday night and the championship program will be conducted Thursday night.

Illegal Cooking Results In Sabine Dorm Fire

Illegal cooking by a dormitory resident on 3rd floor, East wing of Sabine Dorm was the cause of a fire on Thursday, February 24 at approximately 9:15 p.m. According to Mickie Townsend, Coordinator of Housing, the student had put a pot of heating oil on a hot plate on the desk to heat some french

Tickets for each tournament session are $3 per person. Additional information about the Kappa Alpha Fraternity Boxing Tournament for Muscular Dystrophy is available by calling LaCaze at (318) 352-9411 or 352-4497.

LaCaze said he encourages each fraternity, men's residence hall and other organizations on campus to sponsor as many boxers as possible in this year's tournament.

One individual who has been closely associated with the tournament since its beginning is Jim Johnson, assistant news bureau director at Northwestern. Johnson has been the publicist and ring announcer for the tournament.

"During the first four or five years of the tournament," Johnson recalled recently, "nearly all campus organizations had at least one student entered. There was a tremendous amount of pride and determination by the students."

Johnson added, "Of course, the interfraternity competition was very keen back then. Northwestern fraternities saw to it that their organization was well represented, and some of the best amateur bouts were fought by members of fraternities."

Johnson said he would like to see campus fraternities sponsor three or four boxers. "Other organizations and students unattached to a particular group are being encouraged to help give the public an excellent show," he stated.

LaCaze said something new this year is women's boxing. "We already have two bouts committed between members of Phi Mu and Tri Sigma sororities," stated LaCaze. "Another sorority has three girls who want to box, but we need someone to fight them."

Ticket Sales Looking Good For "...Virginia Wolfe" Presentation

The University Theatre at Northwestern reports that ticket sales have been very good for Edward Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" which plays March 14-18 in the Theatre West at NSU's A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts.

"We are selling only 127 tickets for each of the five performances," said University Theatre director Nan L. Stephenson. "Because of limited seating, the Thursday night performance is nearly sold out but there are plenty of tickets available for the other shows."

Miss Stephenson added, "Ticket sales look good for the opening performance on Monday night. The Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday performances have lots of tickets available."

According to the University Theatre director, "Nat-chitoches has never been considered a big advance ticket-selling town, but because of the small capacity of our theatre, people who plan to see this outstanding production should purchase their tickets ahead of time to avoid any disappointments at the theatre box office."

"Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" is being directed by Ray Schexnider of Northwestern's Theatre-Speech Department.

Tickets for the production are priced at $3 for adults and $1.50 for non-NSU students. They may be purchased at the box office Monday through Friday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. or reserved by calling (318) 357-6196.

K.A. Boxing Tournament Needs You

Granted, the K.A. Boxing Tournament for Muscular Dystrophy doesn't happen until next week, but James LaCaze, who's directing the tournament says that they need boxers to hurry and sign up for the fights now.

Registration for the tournament, a nationally recognized tournament (see story page 1), has been slow thus far. Consequently, the pleas for registrants have been going out all over campus.

It matters not if you can box, or even if you think you can box. Consider your signing up as an act of charity. The more fighters we have, the more people will become interested in the event, and the more money that can be raised for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

I noticed that there was a Phi Mu-Tri Sigma bout scheduled. Great! Those inter-fraternity (sorority) bouts always provide the most excitement. How about a Kappa Alpha-Kappa Sigma bout? How about about an Omega Psi Phi-Kappa Alpha Psi fight? How about ANY inter-fraternity (sorority) bout?

Last year two of our most distinguished (&) football players laced up the gloves and slugged it out for a couple of rounds. How about another one of those matches?

Of course, what I'd really like to see is a battle of the administration heayweights.

But really, we need to find some more people to get out and box. It's really for a good cause, and besides, for you macho men out there, you get to take your shirt off and parade around in front of everybody, showing off those rippling muscles.

Remember, although the weigh-ins are a week away, now is the time to start signing up for the tournament. And for those of you who are pacifists and not even considering the physical part of the tournament, at least show your face at the events and make your donation to a very worthy cause, the Muscular Dystrophy Association. Joe Cunningham

Letter To The Editor

Mr. Cunningham,

I think that this could probably be as good of a place as any to take advantage of my privileges as a reader to protest against what was written in the last issue of the Current Sauce since this is obviously the publication in which to do so. I am responding to your article published in the March 1, 1983 issue of Current Sauce. It was titled "Quick Congratulations and Other Stuff". It should

...And Another

Mr. Cunningham,

Your editorial which appeared in the March 1 edition of the Current Sauce in my opinion is headed by a misleading statement. Instead of using the headline "Quick Congratulations and Other Stuff," perhaps you should have titled it "My personal feelings about Ed Dupuis as Editor of POTPOURRI."

In this editorial, you mention poor relations between Current Sauce and POTPOURRI and SGA and POTPOURRI. It's really a shame that you had to hide behind your publication with this statement. I have wonderful relations with the Current Sauce and receive it's complete cooperation every Tuesday while reading it. It is not the Current Sauce and POTPOURRI that have relation problems, it is you and I who have our differences. I don't have to or want to hide behind the POTPOURRI with that statement. As for the SGA, I seem to have no problems with that body as a whole, it is Joe Stamey and I who have our differences. He, unlike you, did not use his office or the SGA to hide behind to express

...And The Rebuttal

Dear Mr. Dupuis,

Welcome to the world of the "Free Press". It was very considerate of you to respond so quickly to my editorial. In doing so, you proved the exact point of the editorial.

I assure you that my editorial should not have been entitled, "My Personal Feelings About Ed Dupuis..." I can safely say that those were not my personal feelings towards you.

The editorial stated simply that a yearbook is not a place where personal feelings should influence the content of the book, because there is no place in that particular yearbook for a rebuttal.

In your letter you go on to dispute my claim that there were bad relations between the Current Sauce and the Potpourri by saying that the bad feelings were between you and me. I have two questions. If that is so, then how come, (1) I wasn't informed that there have been titled "Extremely Quick Congratulations and My Personal Vendetta Against Ed Dupuis."

There is no doubt in my mind that Janice Williams will be an excellent editor for the Potpourri, and you are to be commended for striving for a good relationship between the Current Sauce and the Potpourri. However, one must not accuse others of doing what he himself has mastered as an art. It seems as though our editor of the Current Sauce used the Current Sauce his disapproval of the 1982 POTPOURRI. While I did not enjoy the face to face confrontation that occurred, I can certainly respect him for doing it. You however, speak of my allegedly using the POTPOURRI as a vector for personal vendetta. I cannot respect a hypocrite.

Concerning the "controversial" and editorial" statements in the 1982 POTPOURRI to which you allude, I assume that you are referring to the stories on the SGA and Current Sauce which I authored and which are included in the Organizations section of the book. The story on the SGA states no opinions and is in no way an editorial. It is simply a collection of facts concerning the SGA impeachment of Diana Kemp recorded for posterity. The story on the Current Sauce states an opinion, but it is one which, as you are well aware, was voiced by many students on campus -- the large number of errors in your publication. Both of these stories were included because they were the major events surrounding the respective organizations for the year. I should remind you that a yearbook has an obligation to the students to record the events of the year, were bad relations between you and me before the yearbook came out (there didn't seem to be any bad relations when members of the Potpourri staff came into my office asking if they could have old pictures that we had already used), and (2) instead of just saying something derogatory about me, you took a cheap shot at the entire Current Sauce? Yes, Virginia, the entire Current Sauce includes each one of my staff members.

Also, you say that there were no bad relations with the SGA, only with Joe Stamey, yet, when the Potpourri came out, you focused the attention on the SGA as a whole, sensationalizing one unfortunate issue, and totally ignoring the many, many, positive things that Mr. Stamey's administration did for the students at NSU.

Mr. Dupuis, you contradict yourself. For shame.

Ed, we could go on and on, but, it would do little good. In for his personal vendettas as a form of "get back". Could this be so? Yes, I think so. I didn't want to be the one to break it to you Joe, but I believe that dream you had about editorializing being "left to those mediums on this campus which can present both sides of a view", will remain a dream until you learn how to use a publication much more wisely.

Leisa Kennedy

whether they be good or bad.

As for your statement that I was placed in charge of the 1982 POTPOURRI following the illness of the editor, Jim McKellar, this statement is totally erroneous. I was never in command of the 1982 POTPOURRI. My position was that of section editor and remained so until my appointment as editor of the 1983 POTPOURRI. Russell Williams was managing editor of the 1982 POTPOURRI, and although the "buck" was never officially passed, he was next in command. Jim McKellar, however, personally checked and edited every proof sheet that was sent to us by our publisher and in this fashion remained editor. The two stories mentioned above bore his approval as editor. The SGA story was even sent to the publisher approximately one month before his illness.

There is little that I can do or care to do to change your opinion of me or the POTPOURRI. I must say, however, that you and those who share your opinion have no role in my future, and consequently, your opinions mean little to me.

Sincerely,
Ed Dupuis, Editor
1983 POTPOURRI

my opinion, you abused your power with the Potpourri by initiating a personal vendetta against the Current Sauce and the SGA by authoring personally biased statements, when you knew full well that we could not reply with a rebuttal in your yearbook. Who does it look like is hiding now?

Furthermore, I recommended that the editorializing be left up to those mediums who could present both sides of the story. Whereby, you promptly proved my point by writing a rebuttal to the Current Sauce, of the article that was printed in the Current Sauce, which you felt was offensive. It's a pity that the Current Sauce and the SGA were not given the same consideration in the Potpourri.

Mr. Dupuis, it now appears as though the finger of hypocrisy is pointing right back at you.

Sincerely,
Joe Cunningham

Intramural Basketball Heads For Playoffs

During the final week of intramural basketball the divisional races tightened and many teams started and ended their run for the playoffs.

On Monday night YANG 1000 took its unbeaten record to the court to play Rapides Knights. With Rodney Thrash and Jerry Norvell combining for 30 points, YANG 1000 whipped the Knights 55-38. Jarvis Shaw was the games leading scorer with 20.

The Lakers also assured themselves of a playoff spot as they used a 13-point difference in second-half scoring to down the Maffia 49-35. Odessa Turner paced the Lakers with 15 and Victor Oatis followed with 12.

B.S.U. outscored YANG 1 27-18 in the first half to coast to a 51-42 victory. Although YANG started with only four players, they were never far off the pace. YANG's Joe Cunningham was the game's leading scorer with 16.

Armadillos crushed Conine 2 by 20 points as they rolled to a 67-47 loss. That's right, with just a few minutes to play, the Armadillos were winning 67-47 before they got their third technical foul, which meant they had to forfeit.

Omega Psi Phi downed K.A. 56-46 behind Floyd James' 15 points. Chris Maggio led K.A. with 12. B.S.U. outscored Phi Mu 30-13 in the first half to record a 44-30 triumph. Phi Mu lost its second game of the night as they were downed 30-28 by Odyssey.

On Tuesday night Conine defeated 10 Blind Boys 37-30 behind Charles Jackson's 12 points. Pat Chamberlain also hit 12 for 10 Blind Boys.

B.S.U. won its second game in as many nights as they edged by Armadillos 57-54. Although B.S.U. came out the victors, Armadillos boasted leading scorer Terry Mobley, who hit 26 points.

A few hours later Mobley was the leading scorer in the Armadillos' 17 point victory over Kingpins. Mobley connected for 22 points in the second game as his team won 50-33.

In their second game of the night 10 Blind Boys destroyed Knockernuts by a 51-25 count.

Shortly after that F.A.S.T. picked up where 10 Blind Boys left off as they also beat Knockernuts 44-32. Bogie Patton paced F.A.S.T. with 16 points.

YANG 1000 probably had its toughest fight of the season as they slipped by D.H. 47-44.

Rodney Thrash again led YANG 1000 as he tossed in 13 points. Scott Smith led D.H.

with 19.

Kappa Sig eased by Sig Tau 30-28 as Mike Camden hit 14 points.

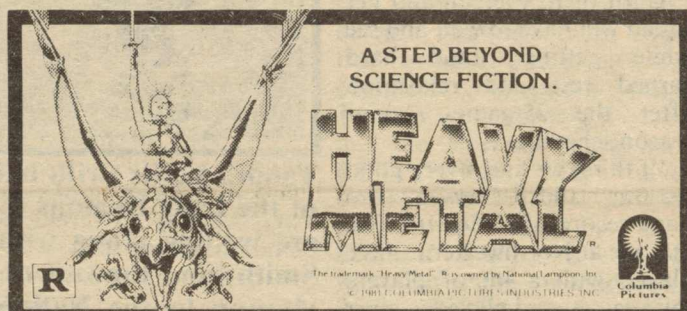

On Wednesday night, the Lakers used Barry Hamilton's 12 points to get by Rapides Knights. 47-41. Keith Washington scored 21 for the Knights.

D.H. just did get by Conine as they recorded a 34-32 victory despite Rick Schweitzer's 14 points for Conine. Conine II also took it on the chin, becoming the victims of a 62-51 Knockernuts victory.

Dwayne Poe hit 20 as the 10 Blind Boys second team downed the Buffalo Patrol 51-33. 10 Blind Boys I whipped F.A.S.T. 49-29.

Sigma Kappa edged Phi Mu in a tense game, 50-49 and Ulysses Frank hit 15 to lead Kappa Alpha Psi to a victory.

Kappa Sig downed TKE 38-13 as Cliff Poinbeuf and Kevin Bartholomew each hit 10 points.

Demon Baseballers Split With Central Missouri Mules, 7-2, 10-5

After leaving ten men on base in the opener, Northwestern came up with some timely hits in the second game to defeat Central Missouri 10-5 last Monday afternoon. The Mules scored three runs in the seventh inning of the opener and scored a 7-2 win.

Northwestern is now 6-6 on the season after splitting with Central Missouri for the second straight day and Central Missouri stands at 5-6-1 on its Southern tour.

In the first contest the visitors scored two runs in the first and one in the second, all on just one hit, thanks to walks and one Demon error. Central Missouri added a run in the sixth and three in the seventh, two of those on a home run by Doug Middleton.

Northwestern got on the scoreboard in the third inning when Jerry Norvell singled, stole second, and scored on a double by David Reynolds. In the fifth catcher David Grappe hit his second home run of the season for the Demons.

Northwestern scored two runs in the first inning and five in the second to quickly gain control of the nightcap. In the first innings Reynolds had a two-run double and then in the third he added a sacrifice fly.

Also in the second Grappe added a single to drive in two runs and Steve Graf added a sacrifice fly. In the third Gil Herndon added a two-run double for the Demons and Norvell followed with a sacrifice fly after Herndon advanced to third.

Northwestern's Joe Jackson went the distance in the second game to improve his record to 2-0 on the season, both wins coming over Central Missouri. In the first game for the Demons Mike Vienne was the starter and loser and he stands at 0-1.

Demon, Lady Demon Netters Remain Undefeated After Sweeping SFA 7-2

Only Donny Lovo at No. 3 singles for the Demons was forced to go three sets as he scored a 2-6, 6-0, 6-4 win over Steve Riza. In No. 1 singles NSU's Jorge Salkeld defeated Jack Sheehy by a 6-3, 7-6.

In doubles action Salkeld and Lytt Allen lost the No. 1 match to SFA's Sheehy and Scott Koth. At No. 2 doubles

Demon Rodeoers Winners In Southern Region Meet

Northwestern timed-event specialists Brian Thomas of Natchitoches, La., and Jeb Barney of Beckville, Tex., were short go-round winners at the Southern Region/National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association rodeo Feb. 24-26 in San Marcos, Tex.

Thomas, the second go-round winner in team roping at the 1982 College National Finals Rodeo, won the calf roping finals at the Southwest Texas State University rodeo with a time of 10.09 seconds. The NWSTU junior was eighth in the long go-round with a 12.6-second effort and finished third in the average with a time of 22.69 seconds on two head.

Barney also placed fourth in the long go-round of steerwrestling with his 5.27-second effort, but received no time in the finals. Thomas, who led the Southern Region in steerwrestling after fire rodeos, was 5.84 seconds for ninth in the long go-round and 15.16 seconds in the finals for eighth.

Helping the Northwestern State men's team to third place in the team standings at the San Marcos rodeo was sophomore Shawn of Eunice, La., in bareback bronc riding. He scored 69 points to place fifth in the long go-round, 68 points to finish second in the short go-round and tied Tom Hickey of Sam Houston State University for second place in the average with 137 points on two head.

Porter Craig of Zachary, the NWSTU sophomore who was second in Southern Region bareback bronc riding after five contest, failed to make the finals at San Marcos.

In bull riding, NWSTU freshman Ronnie Walters of Coshatta, La., scored 67 points to finish seventh in the long go-round, 70 points to place third in the finals and his 137 points on two bulls gave him fourth in the average. He was the fourth-ranked bull rider after five rodeos.

Craig also made it to the finals in bull riding. He scored 66 points to tie Buddy Lewis of Stephen F. Austin State University for 10th place in the long go-round and his 68 points in the finals were good for fourth-place money.

NWSTU saddle bronc rider Joey Howze, freshman from Denham Springs, La., scored 57 points in the long go-round to tie Chad Craigan of Lamar University for sixth place. Howze received no score in the finals.

The next Southern Region/NIRA rodeo for Northwestern State will be March 4-5 at Texas A and I University in Kingsville, Tex.

Grau, Repp In SGA Run-Off

Deana Grau and Scott Repp are thrust into a run-off election for the Student Government Association Presidential slot vacated by two-term president Joe Stamey.

Vice-Presidential candidates Perry Anderson and Noel Nicolle also survived the first round elections and they will appear on the Wednesday ballot for the position vacated by Stacy Soileau.

Soileau, the acting Commissioner of Elections, said some 712 students voted on the Natchitoches campus March 16, with "about 100" voters being tallied at Warrington and "only 4" at ADOS.

In the presidential election, Repp garnered 221 votes to 210 for Grau. Harlan Harvey and John Williams ran closely behind.

In the election for vice-president, Nicolle received 210 votes to Anderson's 208. Bob Pearce and Donna Jo Kelly trailed.

A total of 431 votes enabled Joe Cunningham to claim the office of SGA Treasurer, previously held by Larry Hall. Stacy Baumgardner, who received 470 votes, was elected Commissioner of Elections, an office vacated by Harlan Harvey.

In the race for eleven Senator-at-Large positions, the following were elected:

Tommy Abrusely; Brunetta Anthony, Todd Eppler, Deanna Fredieu, Eileen Haynes, Sandra Lamb, Chris Maggio, Beth McMillian, Lisa Morse, Greg Shoalmire, and Shaun Wyble.

Also appearing on the ballots Wednesday will be six candidates in the election for four Representative-at-Large positions on the Student Union Governing Board. The candidates are Stacy Scroggins, James Hartline, Joy Pilie, Beth Sandiford, Marvin Cruz and Rhonda Lamb.

Everybody won at the Kappa Alpha-Muscular Dystrophy Association boxing tournament held last Wednesday in Prather Coliseum. The tournament raised over $14,000 for the area MDA. Shown here are the actual winners and the runners-up in the two-day tournament which drew large crowds and was well worth it with the intensity of the boxing.

Graduation Compromise

A compromise regarding NSU commencements was reached last week by President Orze, NSU students, and faculty.

Instead of the previously proposed single commencement per year, there will be two ceremonies, both held in Prather Coliseum, - one in the fall and spring semesters. Graduates' names will be announced and a reception for graduates, families, and guests is also planned to follow.

According to SGA President Joe Stamey, two bills were passed at the March 14 SGA meeting, one of which concerned NSU commencements. Bill number 11, sponsored by Dean Napoli, was to hold three commencement ceremonies per year. Another provision of the bill stated that graduates' names be announced. In addition, the bill asked for a reception following the graduation ceremony.

Kappa Alpha Boxing Tourney Raises Thousands For MD

Eight experienced Northwestern students won championships Thursday night during the finals of the ninth annual Kappa Alpha Fraternity Boxing Tournament for Muscular Dystrophy in Prather Coliseum at NSU.

The combined attendance for the tournament, which raised more than 14,000 for the Northwest Louisiana-Texas chapter of the national Muscular Dystrophy Association during its first eight years.

"I just want to say thanks to the people from the city of Natchitoches, in Natchitoches Parish, and the surrounding area for helping make this the most successful tournament in the history of this great event for charity," said Lacaze.

He added, "But our most sincere appreciation goes to the students of Northwestern who got into the ring and demonstrated a tremendous amount of courage. They threw and took a lot of punches, and when it was over most of the participants said the experience had been fun.

For two nights, these students gave the public some real excitement and entertainment."

The heavyweight championship of the 1983 tournament was won by Charles James, 205, of Bossier City. The senior pre-law major defeated 295-pound Don Hill of St. Louis when the referee stopped the fight in the second round.

Oliver "Sugar Rat" Chairs, 150-pound sophomore electronic engineering major from Kenner defeated sophomore Sharlon Barnes, 155 of Zachary for the light welterweight title when the referee stopped the bout in the second round.

The lightweight division champion was William Carnahan, 145, of Cloutierville. The senior accounting major won a unanimous decision against sophomore Rafael Ramirez, 140, of Puerto Rico.

Freshman Michael Bell, 165-pound business major from Alexandria, won the light middleweight championship when his bout with freshman Robert Delrie, 175, of Natchitoches was stopped by the referee in the second round. Delrie sustained torn ligaments in the right shoulder.

The featherweight champion is sophomore Rodney Hendricks, 134, of Bossier City, who defeated Roland Baker, 132, of Glenmora when the referee stopped their bout in the first round.

LeRoy Ellis, 183-pound sophomore general studies major from Troup, Texas, won a unanimous decision over freshman Ken McLaren, of Campti for the middleweight championship.

Tandra Lewis, 120-pound freshman history major from Zachary, won one of the tournament's two bouts featuring women students at Northwestern. She was a unanimous decision winner against junior Debbie Gardner, 115, of Coushatta.

In probably the best of Thursday night's championship bouts, 115-pound freshman Della Roberts of Campti won a unanimous decision in her match with freshman Reatha Cole.

SDA-Northwestern Survey Results

Ancient physician and philosopher, Hippocrates is credited with the adage "Let food be thy medicine". Were this advice applied to the students of NSU, are would have to concede that few get their prescribed daily dosages of fruits and vegetables, milk and dairy products.

Last fall the Student Dietetic Association conducted a Food Habits Survey among students on and off the NSU campus. Preliminary results show that when compared to a model diet suggested by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences, the average diet of NSU students is full of holes.

The model used for comparison was the Basic Four Food Group model. The Food and Nutrition Board recommends that the average, healthy American adult get two servings daily from the meat group (which includes eggs, peanut butter, and dried beans as well as meat), two servings from the milk and dairy group, four from fruits and vegetables and four from breads and cereals.

The men on campus appear to be meat and bread lovers. Over one-half of the men consumed the suggested two servings from the meat group and almost half got the four servings of bread and cereal products. Only one third of the men ate four or more servings of bread and cereal products. Only one third of the men ate four or more servings of fruits and vegetables and less than one-fourth included enough milk and dairy products in their diets.

The women on campus compared more favorably across the board. Almost seventy-five percent of the female students surveyed reported a meat intake of four or more servings. Close to one-half recorded two or more servings of bread and cereal products. One-third of the women included in their diet enough food items from the milk and dairy group and one-fourth got enough from the fruit and vegetables group.

In addition to information about intake from the Basic Four, the survey explored student use of products from a fifth group: sugars, fats and alcohols. Selection of food items from this group soared among males and females as a result of a heavy consumption of chips, soft drinks, candy bars and fried foods.

Judging from these results, our diets are not nutritionally adequate. Because of the high percentage of selections from the Sugars, Fats and Alcohols group, we can expect that caloric intake is probably above average. But low intakes of fruits and vegetables, milk and dairy foods will result in less than adequate vitamin and mineral consumption, especially Vitamins A and C and the mineral, calcium.

So how do you go about correcting the situation? Take vitamin and mineral supplements? No! Simply be more judicious in your food choices using the Basic four as your guide. Replace sugary snacks with raw fruits and vegetables. Substitute milk for some of those soft drinks and don't allow potatoe chips to crowd out the more wholesome foods. Reduce the amount of sugar in your coffee and on your cereal and go for broiled meats instead of fried. Armed with these suggestions you can improve your vitamin and mineral intake and, at the same time, cut calories for spring.

Christine Ford Contributes To Louisiana English Journal

"The TV Monster and the Man Next Door," written by Dr. Christine Pickering Ford, appears in the recent issue of the Louisiana English Journal.

Dr. Ford's article explains how teachers can effectively use television and the community to generate content or subject matter for writing the freshman composition paper.

Dr. Ford first presented her ideas on this subject in a paper, "generating Content for the Freshman composition Paper," at the 1982 annual conference of the Louisiana Association for Post-Secondary Language Arts. At this time, an editor of LEJ asked her to expand it and to submit it for publication.

The Louisiana English Journal is published in the Winter and Fall by the Louisiana Council of Teachers of English under the editorship of John Cooke and Elizabeth Penfield of the University of New Orleans. Dr. Ford's paper offers pragmatic, practical suggestions for teachers of writing.

An Assistant Professor of English at Northwestern State University, Dr. Ford has read academic papers at other conferences and has served as Secretary and Chairman of the Modern Drama section of the South Central Modern Language Association. Her present paper is based upon techniques she has herself used in her classes of composition at N.S.U.

Currently at work on an article tentatively entitled "A Formulaic Approach to Teaching Composition," Dr. Ford is also involved in an effort to add "Wind-surfing" to the N.S.U. curriculum as part of the Sports for Lie program. She combines an active interest in athletics with active academic pursuits.

The Final Vote

The primary elections are over, and now, at least for the top two SGA offices, the real race is on. Tomorrow, everything comes to a head when you, the students of Northwestern, pick who you want to represent you as your SGA President and Vice-President for the 1983-84 year.

It was encouraging to see that over 700 voters took part in this past week's election. It would be nicer still to climb above the one thousand voter mark.

This election is important. It's time to select the person who will step in and fill the void created by the graduation of two-term SGA president Joseph Stamey. Stamey left some awful big shoes to fill, and whoever is elected will have to work mighty hard to be as effective for NSU as he was.

It's probably a moot point to make that whoever is elected president will have to be the kind of person who can respond to the students of NSU and do what is in their best interest. The new president is very fortunate that he or she will be surrounded by some good hard working senators.

But something else that's also important that's also often times overlooked, is that the vice-president plays an important role in the SGA also.

This year, we have two capable candidates in the run-off who will be ready and able to pick up where Stacy Soileau left off.

Again, it's up to you to decide who's going to be representing you. If any of you are looking for the SAUCE to support or endorse one or the other of the candidates--forget it. We think that all four of the candidates can do the job that they are running for capably.

On a related note, it was heartening to see so many people running for office as opposed to last year. Last year as you will recall, more than half of the SGA executive offices were unopposed. This year, only one was unopposed. It's good to see that more and more people are taking an avid interest in what's going on at Northwestern. --Joe Cunningham

NTE Survivor Thinks Test Is Inconclusive

By Kathleen Smith

Being a survivor of the National Teacher's Exam, I naturally, as do most survivors, have some definite opinions as to the nature and validity of this peculiar fashion of determining who is and who is not qualified to teach in the state of Louisiana.

I am well aware of the controversy that has been raging over the NTE for the past three years. And I must admit that I wholeheartedly agree with those who insist that teachers should be able to read, write, and do simple mathematical calculations (in real life there is no algebra). The NTE measures all of these basic skills quite accurately, but after this fact, the test falls short of any true method of determining what makes a successful teacher.

There is no way that the NTE can sort out who will be the creative, innovative or highly motivated teacher...much less who will be able to pass these qualities on to the students. What the NTE does measure is who will be able to write grammatically correct notes to parents, read and possibly understand memos from the school board, average grades, and calculate the percentage of profits that the FFA will make from their gumbo supper.

It does not predict which person will be able to manage a classroom of twenty-five first graders or an unwieldy group of ninth graders who would much rather study each other than civics. Supposedly, education majors have learned how to deal with these situations through their course work and their exposure to students during their practice teaching, but there is nothing like facing thirty pairs of eyes armed only with the teacher's manual to truly test a teacher.

A good teacher must be constantly creative. This does not mean that he/she has the best looking bulletin boards. A creative teacher will cultivate the friendship of the art teacher. Rather, creativity in a teacher means that he/she will be able to present the material to be learned in an interesting, stimulating, and (dare I even suggest?) entertaining manner. Creativity means figuring out ways to make your supply of ditto paper last the entire school year or how to teach science using only laboratory equipment that you have brought from your kitchen because the lab next door has been used as a supply room for the past ten years. The NTE cannot possibly tell who will be able to do this.

What the NTE tells the prospective teacher is how woefully inadequate his/her college education has been. It comes as a rude shock to realize that the college graduate is actually expected to know something about literature, fine arts, and the social sciences...even though he/she is a biology, P.E. or elementary education major. The unsuspecting student sits down in his chair, armed with all of the educational philosophies know since the beginning of time, and is suddenly asked questions about Beethoven, the structure of DNA and the causes of the War of 1812. It can be a very humbling experience.

Unlike many, I do not feel that the NTE should be done away with. The poor test results have shown the weaknesses of the educational systems, and hopefully colleges will make steps to correct them. Students who have applied themselves in school and find that they are unable to pass the NTE should take a second look at what they have been taught and seriously question the quality of their education.

Finally, if you are among the fortunate few who have managed to pass the NTE, it does not necessarily mean that you have had a good education or that you will be a successful teacher. You may merely be a good test-taker or lucky or both. A good teacher is one because he/she wants to be, not because it is the only thing that he/she can do.

Kathleen Smith is currently a graduate assistant in the Theatre/Speech Department. She has an M.A. in Woman's History from the University of Maryland, has taught in Natchitoches Parish and scored in the 99% on the NTE.

Prior to this she had never taken an education course. Kathleen Smith

Letter To The Editor

Dear Joe

I have just finished reading the article in your last weeks (March 15) edition concerning the changes in the commencement exercises.

As someone who has previously graduated from NSU, I know that holding the commencement exercises in Prather Coliseum can be a big hassle. Anyone who has ever been to graduation at Northwestern knows the trouble of trying to get from one side of the coliseum to the other. Trying to go in the opposite direction as the crowd flow is not for the faint-hearted. I have nothing against trying to improve graduation, but some of the things I read, are to put it mildly, STUPID.

(1). Having graduation in Turpin Stadium: I know it's bigger and there will be more room, but where are the parents and family of the graduates supposed to sit, aisle J with a pair of binoculars?

(2). Having only one graduation a year: This might be a mute point since it was voted down, but since it was propose and might possibly come up again in the future, I have a few things to say about it. In reading the article, it said that fall graduates can receive their diplomas at the end of that semester, and then come back for graduation if they wish. I ask you, how many people who complete their college careers in December, then become employed, are going to take the time to come back, put on a silly black choir robe, to sit and listen to a bunch of people talk, not many I know of I assure you. It's like running the race after you've already got the prize, the thrill is gone.

(3). Having to pay cap and gown fees even if you don't participate in commencement exercises: Hey, I know Northwestern needs all the money it can get, but this is ridiculous.

(4). Lastly, I quote from the article, "names of the graduates will not be called in order to decrease audience uproar." and "spring candidates will graduate as usual. The diploma cover will be presented as a person walks across the stage..."

Graduation is for the students who have spent the last 4 or 5 years working toward it. It is also for their families who have probably paid for most of it. The students and their families deserve to hear their name called out, they deserve that special recognition. Besides, if they are going to walk across the stage anyway, why not call their names, it doesn't take up that much extra time. If someone wants to yell at them, let them they'll do it anyway. Sure it's undignified, but it doesn't hurt anything and the student sure as hell earned it.

I sincerely hope the Graduation Council and the Faculty Senate will reconsider some of their proposals, especially the last one. The people graduating this spring deserve to have their names called, they deserve the individual recognition.

Sincerely,
David L. Ulmer

McNeese Sweeps Demons In Baseball Twinbill

Northwestern's baseball team dropped its eighth straight game Thursday, losing to McNeese in the final inning by a 3-2 score.

The game was scoreless up until the sixth inning when McNeese's David Perez claim jumped a fast ball to give the Cowboys a 1-0 lead going into the final inning.

The Demons got Scott Huscroft on base and then advanced the third baseman when Rufino Suarez got a single. Wayne Lup followed Suarez's hit with another single which scored Huscroft. Centerfielder Gil Herndon was then hit by a pitch to load the bases, but David Grappe was put out on a fielder's choice to keep the bases loaded with two outs. Jerry Norvell was walked, forcing in a run to give NSU a 2-1 lead.

After the Demons got their third out, two walks and another man safe on a fielder's choice loaded the bases with Perez coming to bat. Perez delivered a two-RBI shot to end the contest.

With the loss, the Demons now stand at 12-17 on the season and are scheduled to play Louisiana Tech at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Demons Snap Streak, Split With Centenary

Northwestern snapped a nine-game losing streak Saturday as the defeated Centenary 8-2 in the second game of a doubleheader. Centenary won the opener 6-5.

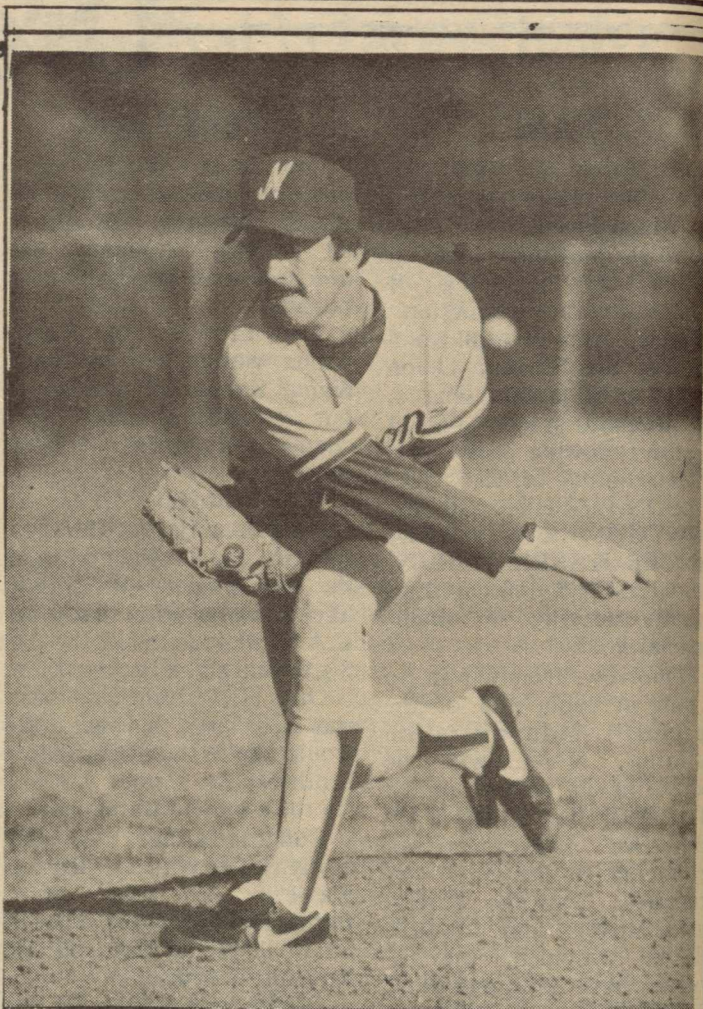

In the first game, Northwestern took a 4-1 lead after two innings. Two of the runs came on Gents' errors and catcher David Grapped singled in two runs.

But Centenary scored four in the fifth and won the game in the sixth on Wayne Rathbun's homer.

In the second game, the Demons scored three runs in the third on a homer by David Grappe and a triple by Steve Graf, and singles by Graf, Reynolds, and David Bailey accounted for the runs in the sixth and seventh.

Joe Jackson was the winning pitcher for Northwestern. Jackson, now 4-0 this season, allowed, five hits and fanned four.

Northwestern is now 13-18 for the season.

Joe Jackson, one of NSU's brightest newcomers, fires away on another pitch for the Demons. Jackson and the rest of the Demons host Grambling today in a baseball doubleheader at Stroud-Brown field.

Northwestern Tennis Teams Win Matches Over UNO

Northwestern men's and women's tennis teams both won matches Saturday, taking decisions over the University of New Orleans, the men winning by a 9-0 score and the Lady Demons getting a 7-2 decision.

The Demon men's squad now stands at 7-1 on the season and the Lady Demons are 8-7. The scheduled matches at Tulane for Sunday were rained out. Both the men and women will play at McNeese State on Wednesday before the Spring break.

In men's action on Saturday Jorge Salkeld won at No. 1 singles by a 6-1,6-1 margin over Neil Tourdo. Donny Lovo followed with a 6-1,6-1 win and at No. 3 Morris Brown scored a 6-4,6-1 win. Jorge Salvo won his No. 4 singles 6-0,6-1 and Lytt Allen was a 6-0,6-0 winner at No. 5. Hugo Molina picked up a forfeit win at No. 6 singles.

Salkeld and Allen teamed for a 7-6,6-4 win at No. 1 doubles and Salvo and Francisco Acuna won No. 2 doubles 6-0,6-1. Molina and Lovo won by forfeit at No. 3 doubles.

In women's action the Lady Demons won four singles matches and swept all three doubles. Liliana Isaza won at No. 1 singles 6-2,6-2 and at No. 2 Begona Fabregas had to go three sets for a 6-1,4-6,6-4 win. Pam Aud won at No. 4 6-0,6-1 and Kim Tollett won No. 6 singles by a 6-1,6-2 score.

In doubles Isaza and Mara Salano defeated New Orleans' No. 1 team 6-4,3-6,7-5 and Aud teamed with Karla Tubbs for a 6-4,6-2 win at No. 2. Tollett and Carmen Sirera won the final match of the day by a 6-2,6-2 margin.

Begona Fabregas, the Lady Demons number 2 seeded player, smashes a return in a Lady Demon dual match earlier this month. Fabregas and the rest of the Lady Demons sport an 8-7 worksheet on the young year.

Lady Demons Crush Lamar Twice, 9-1, 6-3

Janet Guerrini and Julie Robinson both collected five hits as Northwestern's Lady Demon softball team defeated Lamar 9-1 and 6-3 here Wednesday. The Lady Demons are now 8-3 on the season and Lamar falls to 0-9.

In the first contest Robinson collected three hits and drove in four runs, one of those hits a two-run homer. Guerrini also had three hits in the opener, including a three-run homer in the bottom of the sixth.

In the second contest Guerrini blasted two solo home runs while Robinson had two singles. Sherri Brooks drove in two runs with a pair of hits and Carla Peters also had two RBI's for the Lady Demons.

Sydney Forrester pitched both wins for Northwestern, raising her record to 7-2 on the season. In the first game she allowed just three hits and although Lamar had 10 hits in the second contest it left nine runners stranded on base before getting two runs in the seventh inning.

Here are the line scores: FIRST GAME: Lamar 000 001 0--1 3 2 Northwestern 013 023 x--9 10 1 Ballard and Huff. Sydney

Forrester and Jackie Calandro. W-Forrester (6-2); L-Ballard.

Track Team Successful At Tech

Northwestern's track and field team captured two first places Saturday at the Louisiana Tech Invitational, and along with those four wins, placed second three times and third four times.

"We are continuing to show improvement with every meet and that is what you look for," said Demon Coach Leon Johnson following the meet. "In some areas we are improving more rapidly than in other areas, but everyone on the team is showing improvement, not just some individuals and not just in certain areas."

Winners for the Demons on Saturday included Mario Johnson in the 100-meter dash and Steve Stockton in the javelin. Both are juniors and both are NCAA All-Americans. Johnson won the 100-meter dash in a time of 10.60, his best of the outdoor season. Stockton threw the javelin 234-8 to win the that event for the third straight meet.

Placing second for Northwestern were the relay teams in the 400, 800, and 1600-meter events. Running the 400 event were Rod Hendricks, Edgar Washington, Percy McGlory and Mario Johnson in a time of 40.59. Those same four ran a 1:23.53 in the 800-meter relay.

The 1600-meter relay team of Washington, Johnson, Hendricks, and Wilson Brown placed second in a time of 3:11.19. All three times are season-bests in those events for the Demons.

Senior hurdler Carlos Minor collected a pair of third places in the hurdle events. Minor ran a 14.70 in the 110-hurdles, his best time this season, and then turned in a 54.51 clocking in the 400-meter hurdles. Bob Waddell also placed third in

Schweitzer Wins

Decathlon

Northwestern's Rick Schweitzer, who is being redshirted this spring, won the decathlon competition at the Rice University Southern TAC decathlon meet in Houston over this past weekend.

Schweitzer, who holds the Northwestern and Louisiana collegiate record in the decathlon, placed 11th in the nation at the national meet last year. Schweitzer plans to complete his college eligibility in 1984 while preparing for the U.S. Olympic team.

In Houston this past weekend Schweitzer won two of the 10 events outright, tied for first in three other events and set a meet record in the javelin. Schweitzer ended the competition with 7,576 points.

Schweitzer threw the javelin 206-10 to set a meet record and won the overall competition over 15 other competitors.

the javelin with a throw of 197-5, his best effort of the season.

"I was pleased with the entire team effort," added Johnson.

"Our field events people also did well," continued Johnson. "Kevin Johnson didn't place in the shot, but he had his college best of 55-9½. Steve Stockton threw well and Bob Waddell also had his best college throw in the javelin, so it's easy to see the improvement."

Mankato St. Runs Past Northwestern

Northwestern's dual track meet against Mankato State was unable to be completed because of rain, as just 12 events were run. Of those 12 events Northwestern had four first places and Mankato State had won seven events while Steve Grenchik of Centenary won the 5000-meter run.

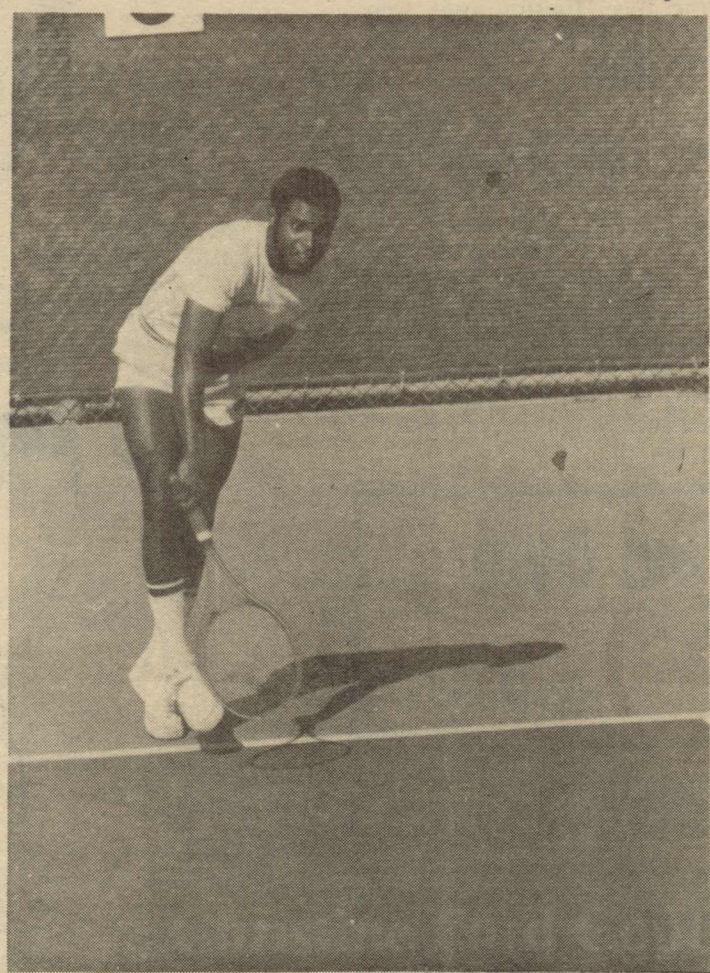

"With this type of weather and the wet track we weren't going to run any of our sprinters in either the sprints or relays and take a chance of injury," said Demon track

Coach Leon Johnson. "Our distance runners and field event people got some good work for this weekend at Tech, but other than that the meet helped Mankato State much more than us."

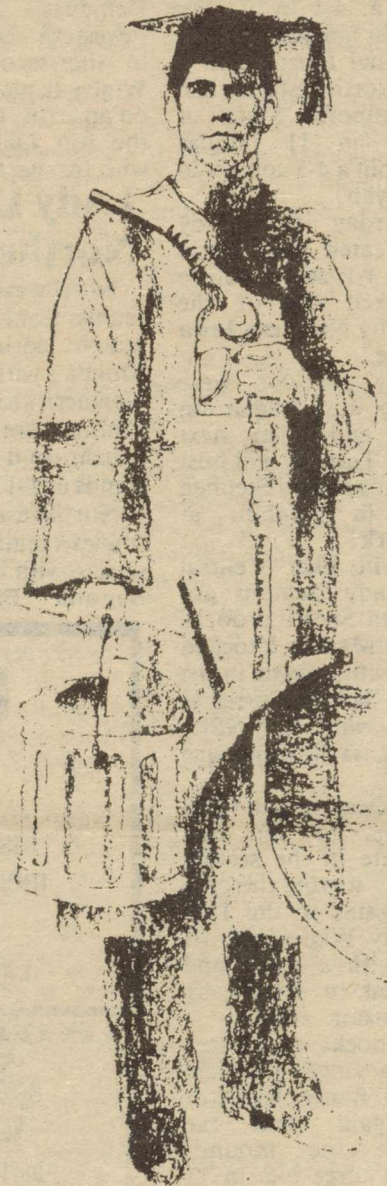

Northwestern's Steve Stockton won the javelin with a throw of 235-0 and Demon Bob Waddell placed second. Kevin Johnson won the shot put for the Demons with an effort of 154-0.

Northwestern's Rodney Hendricks won the 400-meter dash with a time of 48.84. Wilson Brown in second place and Mario Johnson in third made it a clean sweep for the Demons. Northwestern also claimed first in the 400-meter hurdles with Carlos Minor winning in a time of 53.9.

Demon netter Morris Brown, the Demons number 3 seed, uncorks on a serve in an NSU tennis match earlier this season. The Demon netters are 7-1 as of press time.

"We're getting an education to run a filling station."

So ran the words of an old song popular during the Depression. No, we're not in a depression, but if our energy sources dry up so will our jobs. Industry and business depend on energy to survive. And to supply that energy, utility companies must make full use of today's technology and of every available energy source including nuclear power and coal. The failure to utilize these two sources of energy, along with others available, could seriously jeopardize the industrial and economic growth of our area. And growth is what we need to provide jobs.

Lady Demons Do Well In Central State Tourney

Houston Sweeps Northwestern In Baseball Doubleheader

Northwestern's Lady Demon softball team raised its record to 6-3 on the season by winning three of five games in Central State University tournament here over last weekend.

The Lady Demons opened play with a 4-1 win over Central State, a team that was in the national tournament a year ago. Northwestern then defeated Emporia State of Kansas 1-0 in 11 innings before droppin a 4-3 contest to Texas Wesleyan.

On Saturday the Lady Demons defeated West Texas State by a 4-1 score before being knocked out of the tournament by Northern Iowa by a 2-1 score.

The Lady Demons were scheduled to host Lamar on Wednesday and then next Monday and Tuesday will host Eastern Michigan and Stephen F. Austin in twinbills at Highland Park.

In the win over Central State the Lady Demons got two hits from Sherri Brooks and Annette Manuel knocked in two runs with a single in the first inning. Sydney Forrester pitched the win for NSU, allowing just six hits and one earned run.

The Lady Demons had to go extra innings to get past Emporia State in the second round, finally scoring the only run of the game in the 11th inning. Cindy Wigley led off the inning with a single and was sacrificed to second by Julie Robinson. After a strikeout Brooks ended the game with a single to score pinch-runner Renee Richard. Forrester again went the distance on the mound, allowing just three hits in 11 innings.

In the loss to Texas the Lady Demons scored two runs in the bottom of the seventh and had the tying run on third when the final out was made. Annette Manuel drove in two runs with a seventh inning double and Jackie Calandro drove in a run in the fifth with a single. Texas Wesleyan scored its runs in the sixth, both of them scoring on errors. Cindy Berry started on the mound for Northwestern before Forrester came on in relief.

On Saturday the Lady Demons started out with a 4-1 win over West Texas State with Forrester getting the win on the mound. Julie Robertson had two doubles to knock in two runs, Cindy Wigley had two hits and scored twice and Sherri Brooks added two hits and an RBI.

In the final contest Northwestern Iowa scored two unearned runs in the fifth inning to hand the Lady Demons a 2-1 defeat. Northwestern scored its only run in the second when Cindy Wigley tripled and later scored on an error. Manuel was again the top Lady Demon hitter with two base hits in the game.

Lady Demon Netters Rip Northern Iowa 8-1

Northwestern's women's tennis team snapped a five-match losing streak here Monday with an 8-1 win over Northern Iowa. The Lady Demons are now 6-7 on the season and Northern Iowa stands as 1-1.

Northwestern won five singles matches in straight sets, with Liliana Isaza, Begona Fabregas, Mara

In a doubleheader played Monday, the University of Houston kept its perfect record intact with a 5-1,2-0 sweep of the Demons. The Cougars, ranked fourth in the nation, are now 20-0 this season, including nine wins by shutout.

Northwestern saw its losing streak go to five games against the Cougars as their record dropped to 12-14 after the doubleheader.

In the first contest the Cougars took advantage of six Demon errors as only two of the five Houston runs were earned. Houston got a single run in the second, added three in the third and scored its final run in the fifth.

Kevin Warner went the distance for Northwestern as his record falls to 3-2. Warner gave up nine hits while walking one and striking out two.

In the second contest Demon hurler John Kowalksi gave up just six hits, but the Demons got just three singles and failed to score. Houston got one in the third on an RBI single by Dan Larson and one in the fifth on a sacrifice fly by Corky Swindell.

The Demons threatened in the fifth when Ronnie Howell reached on a fielders choice after a walk to David Bailey. After Grappe singled Houston got a pop-up and a ground out to end the inning.

Natchitoches Dorm Residents Faced With Fall Evacuation

Natchitoches dorm residents were informed Thursday that starting next Fall semester, they would be forced to evacuate their rooms in favor of the male NSU athletic teams, in a move created by the acquisition of Caspari dorm (formerly the football dorm) by the new Louisiana High School for the Gifted and Talented.

Mickey Townsend, Coordinator of Housing, sent out a letter informing the Natchitoches dorm students of the meeting. NSU president Dr. Joseph Orze, Demon head football coach Sam Goodwin, and Director of Student Services Sam Smith, attended the meeting.

Under the new proposal, those students who are already living in Natchitoches dorm would be dispersed to several other dorms which are partially unoccupied and located at opposite ends of the campus.

The football team, forced to evacuate Caspari, would then take over the dorm and use that as a permanent residence.

Townsend tried to soften the blow to the Natchitoches residents by saying, "Knowing this (change) will displace alot of students, especially female students, I want you all to know that you will have first priority of any empty space on any dorm on campus."

After Townsend had finished her say, Orze walked in and added, "One of the problems which this university has to deal with is the use of its dormitories."

He added that in order to offset the underutilization of NSU dorms, "We had to make some tough decisions. We have two dormitories now that as of next year will be half full according to occupancy, Natchitoches and Louisiana. I'm going to ask you, if you were the president of a university and had two and a half dormitories to fill, what would you do?"

Orze continued, "and if you were faced with the decision of having to run two and a half empty dormitories or to consolidate and fill two dorms what would you do? There's a saying that says the President has to make the decisions that are not necessarily popular ones. I will stand up and say what I did was done in the best interest of the university and of all people concerned."

Orze finished his justification of the issue by saying that if the students would look at the situation and come up with a better solution, he would accept it. "I'll give you a week to solve it," he said, "if in a week it isn't solved, the decision stands."

Natchitoches dorm resident Leah Sherman asked Orze why the football players could not be moved to West Rapides and Orze replied that "that solution would have to be worked out with the athletic department."

Goodwin spoke next and asked if the students wanted a successful football program. "I would hope that you want that kind of program as much to make you give up something, and I hope that it's not much that you have to give up," he said.

He went on to say, "If we had a choice, we would be in Louisiana," citing the suite type situation that exists there and is popular among other big-time athletic departments.

Later, Chuck Dupree, an NSU football player said, "alot of students think we're animals. If we could just move into Louisiana Hall, we could prove that we're not. We need to know where we're going to be next semester whether it be West Rapides or whatever."

Another Northwestern football player added that "there's time now that we could fix up Rapides if that's where we have to go--painting the walls or whatever. I don't want to make anybody mad. It's a no win situation for everybody."

Several Natchitoches, and other dorm, residents were critical of the plan. Student Government Association president Deanna Grau urged dorm residents to submit alternatives to the situation.

One Natchitoches dorm resident Donna Jo Kelly, in a letter to Goodwin, stated that the athletic department were given options between dorms that they prefereed living in, and after turning down West Rapides, Natchitoches dorm was decided upon. However the residents of Natchitoches dorm were not given a choice of whether to go or stay.

Kelly's letter went on to point out the contradiction in a previous statement by Orze in which he said that, "if the only reason that you stay at Northwestern is because of the dormitory that you live in, then Northwestern is failing you."

Kelly's letter pointed out that one of the arguments for moving the athletes was in fact, because of recruiting athletes. (For more on the issue, see Page 4)

Southerland Appointed Executive Vice-President

Dr. Thomas Paul Southerland, an administrator at Northwestern for the past 17 years, has been appointed to the position of executive vice-president of NSU.

Southerland's appointment, which was approved recently by the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities, will become effective July 1.

Northwestern president Dr. Joseph J. Orze, who announced the appointment this week, said Southerland will continue to serve as the university's vice-president of academic affairs, the position he has held since 1978.

Southerland, a native of Bossier City, was employed in the state's public school systems for 19 years before joining the Northwestern staff in 1966 as dean of the College of Education.

After serving for nine years as Northwestern's education dean, Southerland was appointed dean of the NSU Graduate School in 1975. Three years later, the widely-recognized authority in education became the university's vice-president of academic affairs.

As Northwestern's education dean, Southerland was instrumental in establishing admission standards for teacher education and developing 14 new programs. Specialist and doctorate degrees in education were also established during his tenure as dean.

Under his administration, the College of Education achieved full accreditation of all programs by the National Council for the Accreditation of Teacher Education. Also, the Teacher Education Center and Laboratory School and the Health and Physical Education Majors' Building were designed and constructed.

Southerland's honros while serving at Northwestern include selection for faculty membership in Phi Kappa Phi national academic honro society in 1972, the Service Award in 1972 and runner-up for Natchitoches Parish Man of the Year in 1972.

He has also deliered more than 40 major addresses on education and has authored several articles in prestigious professional journals.

Southerland began his education career in 1947 in Rapides Parish as a high school mathematics teacher and coach at Bolton High School in Alexandria. He later served as principal of Cherokee Elementary School, principal of Alexandria Junior High and as supervisor of instruction and assistant superintendent of instruction for the Rapides Parish School Board.

Northwestern's new executive vice-president and vice-president of academic affairs has served as president of the Rapides Parish Louisiana Teachers Association the Louisiana Supervisors Association and of Phi Delta Kappa at Northwestern.

History Repeats Itself

Remember the red measles scare that threatened an entire sorority and a few others here last fall? Well, it seems that there is another red measles outbreak that has threatened to send quite a few people home from school for an extended "rest".

Happily though, this outbreak is not here, or even in Louisiana for that matter, this time the victim are from the universities of Indiana, Purdue, and Houston.

It seems as though there were several students from each of these schools visiting the Land of Sun and Fun (Florida) over the Spring Break, and among other things, students there picked up the red measles virus.

Now before you stop with your plans to go to Florida for the rest of the Spring and Summer, remember that chances are that you have already been inoculated for the disease.

When the outbreak was reported here, almost all of the people who had come in contact with the original carrier had been given the necessary shots when they were alot younger.

Ten New Insiders Chosen For Summer

By Pat Skidmore

Ten students will serve as staff members of the 5th "Inside View," a freshmen summer orientation program at NSU. These "Insiders" and six alternates were chosen from among 40 applicants:

technology major from Alexandria; Ginger Francis, freshman elementary education major from Alexandria;

prelaw emphasis major from Bossier; Deanna Grau, junior public relations major from Shreveport and Jeff Shifflett, sophomore computer science major from Natchitoches.

Barbara Gillis, Coordinator for Orientation and Freshmen Programs said, "We can't have all of one type, we look for enough talents to put forth a total group, people that complement each other". She went on, "If one of the ten can't come, an alternate would closely replace the strength of what the person was selected for".

For the first time, training for the Insiders/alternates will be during two weekend workshops in April and May. Each Insider has an assigned committee, check-in, cabaret, or organizational, for example. Many return to help in the orientation assemblies each semester. Each receives $300 at the end of the program as well as free meals, room and board.

The program, designed for recent high school graduates produces campus leaders and those active at an earlier time than those who don't, commented Gillis. Last summer, all but seven returned to attend NSU.

University Driving Record Excellent

Whether it's a 75 chevy sedan or an 82 ford sedan, you can bet the operator is a safe driver.

NSU's 85 vehicles traveled 851,359 miles during the fiscal year: July 1, 1982 - June 30, 1982. Within that period, there were only three accidents (of which we were at fault) - nevertheless, an outstanding record.

Physical Plant Director, Loran Lindsey stated, "The bulk of our off-campus travel for class purpose is made from here to Fort Polk, England AFB and Shreveport." He noted many miles were driven under adverse conditions, rain or early morning fog, for example.

Of the total mileage, 543,509 were pool, meaning driven by faculty. And 83,450 belonged to Nursing - Shreveport. The latter are treated as motor pool vehicles, commented Lindsey. A few administrative and academic departments have their own "departmental" vehicles.

NSU - Fort Polk has their own. Other classifications are "general travel" for organizations and athletics, "farm", and "maintenance."

Regarding insurance, The Office of Risk Management, which handles all state agencies, reduces the universities annual premium in terms of a credit on the next premium based on the percentage of accidents or driving Record.

Lindsey added that with the efforts of Faculty, staff and maintenance, the vehicles are kept in the best possible shape.

Reuche To Be Guest Speaker

Dr. Suanne Roueche, a nationally known educator in literacy programs in higher education will address the faculty at Northwestern on April 13.

Dr. Roueche, from the University of Texas at Austin is the featured consultant for seminars being hosted by the College Success Programs under the College of Basic Studies.

Dr. Roueche will discuss current trends in basic literacy programs and The College Success Program at Northwestern.

A session is scheduled for 9:00-10:30 a.m. and again at 3:00-4:30 p.m. in Rm. 142 Kyser Auditorium.

Champlin Addresses NSU

Charles Champlin, Arts Editor and columnist for the Los Angeles Times spoke as part of the Northwestern Lecture Series. The lecture began at 9:30 a.m. and was held in Kyser Hall Auditorium.

Champlin graduated Cum Laude from Harvard University with a degree in English. He has worked with Time Magazine and Life Magazine before joining the Los Angeles Times.

Among the topics Champlin discussed was this years Academy Award nominations.

Champlin explained briefly how nominations are made, and how Oscar winners are chosen.

As a film critic, Champlin agreed with the nomination of E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial as a fine movie production. He gave his opinion on the nominations for best movie, best and supporting actors, and best and supporting actresses.

Dr. Bill Bryant Pens Book On Armadillos

Dr. Bill Bryant of Northwestern has written and illustrated "The Armadillo Book," a humorous collection of 122 caricatures and cartoons featuring an animal that has established itself in the folklore of several Southern and Southwestern states.

Published recently by the Pelican Publishing Company of Gretna, "The Armadillo Book" will sell for $3.95. It will be available at major book stores throughout Louisiana and in other states across the South and Southwest. Bryant's pen and ink drawings are, according to the publisher, "delightfully humorous" and document the antics of a strange looking animal that "can readily be identified by its tough, scalelike coat of armor, elongated snout and its propensity for doing battle with 18 wheel vehicles on America's highways."

The NSU professor and Art Department chairman has been illustrating the armadillo for some three years. The 122 drawings for "The Armadillo Book" were completed within one year. "But I have enough drawings to produce another book," said Bryant, who will be promoting the book this month at the Book Fair in Dallas and at the Texas Library Convention in San Antonio.

We Just Want To Stay

(Editor's Note: As you can see by the front page, there seems to be quite a ruckus brewing about the relocating of Natchitoches and Caspari dorm residents. The following guest editorial was co-written by several Natchitoches dorm residents.)

The decision to move all male athletes into Natchitoches dormitory, at the expense of having to relocate some 150 fee-paying, largely non-scholarship students seems to be just a "little" unfair.

With the acquisition of Casperi dorm by the new Gifted and Talented High School, the football players are now without a dorm. So, in their infinite wisdom, the athletic department figured to give them "our" dorm as compensation. Of course, we, the students who are paying to go to this university were given no say-so in the matter, except a token proposal of, "you have one week to figure out a better solution, or else you leave this dorm." We really kind of imagine that it took the athletic department and our president a little LONGER than one week to figure out THEIR proposal. At least we hope it did.

So, a meeting was called and we were "allowed" to hear the reasons why we would be forced to evacuate the building we have been calling home for the last several years.

Demon Head Football Coach Sam Goodwin said that if we wanted a good football program we would have to give up something. Dr. Orze said there were no other options. What? And now, after he said that, he is giving us a week to solve the problem.

Dr. Orze also said that we would have two half-filled dorms next fall. Where are all the figures coming from?

Coach Goodwin said that newer, brighter dorms were a key selling point to new recruits. Although this was in direct contradiction to Dr. Orze's statement of, "If the only reason that you stay at Northwestern is because of the dormitory that you live in, then Northwestern is failing you," it also is a pretty weak argument.

Several years ago, we had a brand new athletic field house, arguably the best in the state, and a brand new astro-turf football field and they said that this would bring in the recruits. Well now, you can look at this statement in one of two ways.

First, if it is true, then why would you risk losing the potential two thousand new freshmen coming to Northwestern who will have to live in the "Dispersment" dorms, from the approximately 25 new football players who come in each year?

Second, if you want to argue that a winning football season brings in the recruits, then let it be known that our football team has been consistently ranked in the Top Twenty in Division 1-AA for the past several years, and probably the biggest reason we haven't been invited to a post-season tournament is not our dorm rooms, but the fact that we don't have a television station here that can generate the much needed media attention.

We don't want to sound like a bunch of radicals just looking for a fight. We just want to be able to live in our dorm. Our dorm provides us with several important advantages, not the last of which is our SAFETY. Since it is close to the main learning building (Kyser Hall) and right across the street from the center of student activities (Student Union) we feel at least semi-safe when we walk back to the dorm. Fortunately for us, that place is at last semi-lighted. Not as much can be said for other dorms on campus.

All we ask is for a little consideration. It is our sincere opinion that in this instance, "the needs of the many outweigh the needs of the few."

EPA Beginning To Look Like Waterloo

By John L. Hess

In Napoleon's army, every soldier carried a marshal's baton in his knapsack. In Reagan's army, every recruit seems to carry a hit list.

Young Louis Cordia drew up his list in the early months of the Reagan revolution. He was toiling for the Heritage Foundation, a hotbed of policy and talent for the new regime.

Louis's assignment was the Environmental Protection Agency.

With praiseworthy attention to detail, he canvassed the pollutin lobbies and drew up judgments on hundreds of EPA staff members. He also produced a list of suitably anti-environmental replacements.

It was only natural that Louis himself would be rewarded with a key job at EPA. It was perhaps inevitable that he would ultimately be purged himself.

Kenneth Adelman did not prepare his own hit list. When he was tapped to head the arms control agency, a memo was handed to him by its chief negotiator on strategic arms, Edward Rowney.

Adelman's nomination got into trouble because he fudged about that list before a Senate committee, because it included two congressmen who favored arms control among those to be frozen out of the discussions, and because he had written on the memo (which he had forgotten), "these are Ed's real views."

Ed's real views were similar to Ken's views, expressed in a paper for another rightist think tank nearly five years ago. In it, he deplored SALT I and SALT II, which was then pending, and expressed the hope that SALT III would be flung on the dung-heap of history. That Ken said, would end the nonsense about detente.

Regan's first appointee for the arms control job, Walter Rostow, seemed to have the same outlook; he said at his confirmation hearing that he didn't see what there was to negotiate about.

But as sometimes happens with bureaucrats, Rostow became seduced by the idea of actually accomplishing something. He endorsed a tentative deal with Moscow on cutting back missiles in Europe, and he had to be fired.

Revolutions devour their young, but this one has been remarkable in its appetite. The Reign of Terror did not begin until four years after the taking of the Bastille. Here, it began on Inauguration Day.

On that occasion, Alexander Haig submitted a memo claiming sole command of foreign policy. His policy, including a virtual declaration of war in Central America, was quite acceptable. His pretension was not.

Soon Cap Weinberger and Jeane Kirkpatrick, the ambassador to the UN, were publicly squabbling with Haig and White House sources were slipping him the shiv with the media. Eventually, he had to go.

Policy differences have had little to do with the bloodletting in this administration. For Haig, the breaking point was over precedence, symbolized by his place in the receiving line. For others, it was survival.

When toxic wastes hit the fan at EPA, Rita Lavelle was found to have wildly accused a colleague of trying to enforce the law, Ed Meese said he hardly knew her and Anne Gorsuch Burford-to-be fired her.

The heat continued, and others went to the scaffold. Among them was Mrs. Burford. Reagan said she had done a great job and he would never have asked her to leave. Naturally, he blamed the media.

Actually, his top aides had been sowing off-the-record allegations that Mrs. Burford was incompetent, that she was competent but implicated in scandalous doings and that she was an embarrassment to the administration. She finally took the hint.

The tumbrils are rolling. After Danton came Robespierre. After EPA, what next? In every Washington henhouse, the foxes brought in to guard the chickens must be trembling.

Slobberville Fire Destroys NSZoo Campus

A devastating fire broke out late last night somewhere behind Slobberville cafeteria and quickly spread across the NSZoo campus engulfing buildings and students. Preliminary reports show losses at several million dollars and police say that well over half of the NSZoo student population 1200 have perished in the blaze.

Natchitoches Parish Fire Marshal Arson N. Matches said that the fire, initially starting in the Slobberville cafeteria, quickly engulfed the serving establishment and in minutes the building was leveled.

From there the fire spread to Rapides dorm and shortly after it reached the dorm, a tremendous explosion ripped through that building, leveling it. Marshal Matches said, "Apparently the fire hit a case of vodka that was located somewhere on the fourth floor. It was probably near the baseball part of the dorm, but we can't be sure."

While the fire was ripping away at Rapides dorm, a diner who was caught in the Slobberville fire, and was himself ablaze, ran screaming wildly into Sabine dorm, catching that dorm on fire.

Firemen were able to save the outer structure of Sabine but the entire insides were gutted.

A sudden shift in the wind moved the blaze to Freck Hill, where it quickly devoured the dilapidated buildings on NSZoo's last existing mortgaged property.

From there the fire spread quickly to the Saudi Arabian dorm but for some mysterious seemed to almost avoid it, and didn't even singe the bricks.

After bypassing the Saudi dorm, the fire spread to Natchitoches dorm and in just seconds the coed dorm was a blazing inferno. Hundreds of students perished in the dorm, where most of the casualties happened.

It was at about this point that Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. was called in and they dumped tons of water on the fire from the Goodyear blimp. The fire was all but stopped when the blimp melted from the intense heat and the whole crew plunged into the fire. It was gross.

Finally about 4:30 a.m., the fire was brought under control, but not before it had swept clean across half the campus and threatened to wipe out the rest of the classes for the Spring semester.

However, NSZoo President, Dr. J. Orgy promised that classes would continue under a circus tent in Caldwell Hall.

The remains of the NSZoo campus after the devastating fire that destroyed several million dollars of school property and left over 600 dead.

Crazed Ducks Eating Terrified Townspeople

Three NSZoo students have been eaten alive, and another seven have had body parts ripped off as the so-called "Killer Ducks" continue to strike fear on the NSZoo campus.

Waterfowl biologists from around the world have been sent here to try and discover why the ducks, usually tame and willing to eat FROM your hand instead OF your hand, have been attacking people.

Dr. Wadder Fowle, of the United States Department of the Interior suspects that the cause of the duck attacks has to do with the chemicals found in the sludge pit at the east end of Lake Chaplin.

"I have found various quantities of an unknown chemical that scientists have never before uncovered anywhere in the world, except in the rivers of the Amazon," Dr. Fowle said.

NSZoo Biology Department head, Dr. Razor Vegetablegarden, agreed with Fowles theory and added a few thoughts of his own.

"Three years ago, I was commissioned to do a study on the sludge pit. In my study, I noted the potentially dangerous effects that the sludge, which is being poured in from the industries plant behind the lake, has on the marine animals found there. My preliminary reports suggest that the ducks have been ingesting quantities of dioxin and nuclear radiation. If this continues, the two dozen or more ducks on this lake could wipe out the entire population of Natchitoches."

The roommate of one NSZoo student who was dragged off by the ducks into the murky waters of Lake Chaplain implored the government to do something about this situation.

"If you saw what I did," NSZoo Junior Sociology major Karen VanTrollop said, "then you would realize the need to do something. Mitzi

Current Sausage Head Killed By Picturebook

Current Sausage Editor, Vendetta N. Slapstick was gunned down early yesterday morning, and hours later, Campus Insecurity head General Robert E. Lee announced that the NSZoo police had captured their chief suspect, NSZoo Potofporridge editor, Izod Picturebook.

Police say Slapstick was shot 27 times from close range at approximately 6:30 a.m. as he went through trash cans at Loseranna Dorm, apparently looking for ideas for next week's paper.

Police also said that Picturebook had followed Slapstick from his house to the dorm before shooting him.

A terrified NSZoo coed saw the shooting and quickly phoned Campus Insecurity because she was afraid that Professional Fishfood Mismanagement, NSZoo's meal people, would take the bloody victim and make a casserole out of him.

When police arrived on the scene, they found the bullet riddled body of Slapstick slumped against the trash can with an old issue of the Current Sausage stuffed in his mouth.

The eyewitness told police that she saw an unidentified person skipping down the hall wearing a pink alligator shirt, plaid pants and argyle socks.

Police immediately suspected members of the radical left-wing Preppy Panthers terrorist group, but they were all in Syria having an exchange with the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

Campus Insecurity then got an anonymous tip from an anonymous person, saying that they would find the killer and the murder weapon in his dorm.

General Lee obtained the search warrant and stormed Picturebook's room where they found him sticking pins in a Slapstick doll.

Picturebook is being held in lieu of $2 million bond, while prosecutor's decide what kind of sentence to ask for.

Sources close to the case say that District Attorney Owen Marshmellow will probably ask the jury to forego the electric chair, and ask that Picturebook be required instead, to be editor of the Current Sausage for a year.

A spokesman for Picturebook's lawyer, Perry Mason, said that sentence would constitute cruel and unusual punishment, and instead, they will ask for the electric chair.

Ft. Polk Becomes Independent University

NSZoo-Ft. Polk has severed all relations with the Nat-chitoches campus in a surprise move announced yesterday by Ft. Polk campus provost, Dr. Dodger Worst.

Dr. Worst, in a letter to President Dr. J.J. Orgy, announced that since the Ft. Polk campus' enrollment recently surpassed that of the main NSZoo campus, he was going to start a whole new independent college much like the "University of New Orleans did when they broke with LSU."

In the memo, Dr. Worst referred to the new university as the "Commuter State University."

Reports of the planned separation of the two campuses first surfaced last December when it was reported by NSZoo's underground radical newspaper, "The News Bureau Sauce", that 416 NSZoo students were commuting to the Ft. Polk campus to avoid several particularly tough subjects taught by teachers here.

One student, Jack McAbel, said that he was, and still is, involved with the commuting, and will probably enroll at the Ft. Polk campus as a full-time student in the Fall of 1983.

"I had pursued 106 hours here at NSZoo," McAbel said, "but I had only passed 27 hours. At Ft. Polk, I had passed nine out of nine hours and had a 4.0 g.p.a. At NSZoo I had a point sixty-three."

Another NSZoo student, Toucan Sam, had starred as an All-America linebacker at the main campus. However, he will forego his senior year of eligibility in order to be a full-time student at Ft. Polk.

"It got to a point, that I had to choose between getting my degree in "Greek System" and pulling down $50,000 a year as an alumni advisor, or getting drafted by the United States Football League (USFL) and only getting $12,500 a year, getting my brains busted. Hey, I'm getting married soon and I need the cash," Sam said.

NSZoo Students Against Government President Adolph Stameface, himself a regular visitor at Ft. Polk, said that all students wishing to resist this mandate should meet in Room 412 of the Student Union.

DWI Offenders To Face Tough Times

In response to a Louisiana Legislature law regarding penalties for DWI (Driving While Intoxicated), the city council of the city of Nat-chitoches yesterday adopted those measures and added new ones in order to "crack down on the number of college punks who drive and drink," according to NSZoo Chief of Police Harry Kojak.

According to Kojak, penalties for the first DWI offense will be loss of an arm and your first born. "We feel that by taking the DWI offender's arm, it inhibits his/her ability to handle the steering wheel and a bottle at the same time. We see a definite decrease in the number first time offenders breaking the law for a second time," Kojak said.

Kojak went on to say, "If the fool decided to break the law again, he or she will be neutered, and this will be done without an anesthetic."

"Of course," Kojak went on, "there will be some jerks who just can't get enough, and if they're caught a third time, it's the electric chair."

... Killer Ducks ...continued from page 1

(Floosie) and I were just sitting there gettig a tan, when this big green-headed duck came up like he wanted us to feed him. I didn't realize that he took that literally."

Wildlife officials have placed high level calls into the local cosa Nostra extermination society to find a skilled person to rid NSZoo of the problem.

But even this solution meets with big objections. Said Dr. Vegetablegarden, "What we need is to shoot them with tranquilizers, and take them into our laboratories and study them and find out exactly what the problem is."

"We don't need more killing," Vegetablegarden said, "what we need is to find out what is making these ducks so vicious and work together to find the problem."

Dr. D. Mannd Curve, Noted Economics Prof Expires From Oxygen Loss

Dr. D. Mannd Curve, NSZoo's noted professor of economics, died yesterday morning at 8:45 following his explanation of the "Equilibrium Unemployment Level in Non-Consolidated Consumer Households as Opposed to the Private Sector Income of Non-Conglomerated and Socially Independent Laboratory Mice."

Dr. Curve had been speaking to the 38 member Economics 287 class for 45 non-stop minutes until his oxygen supply was depleted and his lungs collapsed.

Dr. Curve was rushed to the NSZoo infirmary but frantic attempts to rescue him by Nurse Hott Tange and Dr. Marcus Welby M.D. proved futile.

NSZoo President Dr. J.J. Orgy declared this Saturday to be an official day of mourning and dismissed all classes.

Vice-President of Finance E.T. Trite Confiscates Funds

"Shocked!", was the response Student's Over Bored President Hanes Breefs had to Vice-President of Finance E.T. Trite's seizure of S.O.B. student-assessed fees to help pay the university's bills.

A spokesman for Trite's office said, "Trite was upset to find out that the students who ran S.O.B. were able to keep their books balanced."

Trite was unavailable for comment, but Clark Smith, a graduated assistant doing a practicum for Trite said that Trite was out foreclosing on students who were late on their dorm rent.

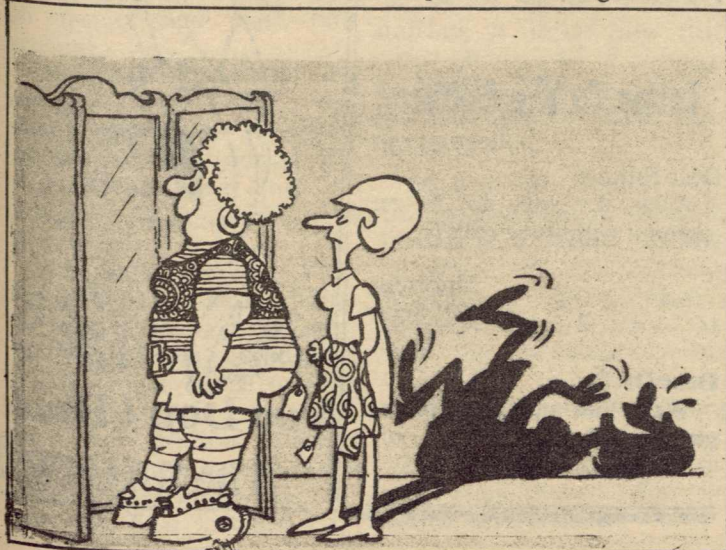

Bob Willy Gonzalez, Director of Student Activities and owner of the world famous "Taco Heaven" franchises, said he was prepared to negotiate with Trite. Gonzalez claimed that he offered Trite a 50-50 partnership in his Taco Heaven franchise. Trite turned down the offer.

Gonzalez said Trite did accept his offer to a "winner take all" golf match. According to the agreement, if Trite were to win the match, the university would seize the student funds for a period of three years. If Gonzalez were to win, the students keep the money.

Gonzalez said that he was not afraid to play Trite. He added, "E.T. was apparently unaware when he signed the match agreement that I had built the Wreck Complex golf course near my home so I would be able to play golf alot.

He further added, "I have been trying to get out of the office for weeks but my secretary keeps finding things for me to do. At least I can claim this as a business meeting.

students who have been infected with that horrifying new disease, Red Herpes. (NSZoo photo by Lisa Syffullu.)

New Mystery Disease Mysteriously Afflicts NSZoo

State Health Department officials from across the state were buzzing the NSZoo campus this past week as well as several other college campuses across the state, including our neighbor to the north--La. Disco-Tech, in a effort to halt a potentially fatal outbreak of a new strain of disease--Red Herpes.

As of Press time, the major outbreak was reaching epidemic proportions, but Health Department officials had been only partially successful in quarantining off most of the victims.

A college co-ed at an unknown Baptist University in the west somewhere, was subjected too, and eventually contacted this new strain of Herpes when she ws a guest at a party somewhere on the campus of her college.

A week later, before the symptoms appeared, she was at a party thrown by members of a local sorority at NSZoo, at a retreat just outside of Natchitoches somewhere in the woods.

When she returned to college back west, she became sick and developed numerous red spots all over her face, and especially around the mouth area.

It was at this point that State Health Department officials were called in, and when they diagnosed the problem, they alerted officials here at NSZoo to the problem.

However, things only worsened when officials discovered that shortly after being exposed to this new strain, the members of the local sorority had an "exchange" with a local fraternity, and at least 50 more cases were reported within a week.

It took State Health Department Officials over three weeks to determine exactly who has ben in contact with whom since the first contact of Red Herpes hit the NSZoo campus.

When officials finally determined exactly who had been in contact with whom--some 712 separate cases at this writing, they got a tip that a case of Red Herpes had developed at La. Disco-Tech.

According to quarantined sources, one of the sorority girls had been in contact with a student from Disco-Tech and thus, had infected him.

Other cases were reported at LSU, NLU, SLU, MSU, ICU, and IOU.

ONE NIGHT IN A LIVING ROOM

Guest Editorial

An old Russian peasant was going along the road one wintry day when he spied upon a bird dead, or so he thought, he picked it up and was about to throw it away when he felt a faint heartbeat. He chanced upon a cow, who, had just left a large pudding.

The Russian buried the bird up to his neck in the hot manure and went away. The trick worked, the bird revived, and started to sing.

A passing wolf heard the singing and dug him out of the manure and ate him up. This is the end, but like all Russian stories there is a moral. 1st- whoever puts you in it, is not necessarily your enemy. 2nd-whoever pulls you out, is not necessarily your friend, 3rd- If your in it up to your neck, Please, Don't sing about it!

Contract Renewed

NSZoo President Dr. J.J. Orgy, looks traumatic moments after the State Bored of Collegiate Trustees extended his contract four more years.

Orgy's Contract Renewed For Four More Wonderful Years

NSZoo President Dr. J.J. Orgy's contract was renewed for four more year's yesterday, despite vigorous pleas against it by the NSZoo head. Immediately after the contract extension, which included a pay raise for hazardous duty, Orgy broke down in front of reporters and had to be restrained from attacking the members of the Bored of Trustees.

Orgy, who has been secretly trying for sometime to get out of his present contract, was reportedly resting comfortably in an undisclosed Baton Rouge hospital.

Orgy was informed earlier this week that he was wanted to appear before the Bored yesterday to discuss his contract.

Confident that he would be freed of his contract, Orgy had planned a victory vacation to the Bahamas with his family.

When the members of the Bored told him that he had done such a fine job saving the state money by cutting all but six of NSZoo's state-funded programs, Orgy broke down and cried.

Knowing that the inevitable renewal was coming, Orgy sat motionless and silent as the verdict was reached.

Attempts to get through to Dr. Orgy today proved futile and the hospital was holding all calls.

NSZoo Announces Record Enrollment

NSZoo Registrar I. Will Fudgeit, announced yesterday that enrollment at the NSZoo-Natchitoches campus jumped to a record 17,806 students, taking the PiPS students and all faculty and staff into account.

Dr. Fudgeit said that the count of over 17,000, was above the previous record of 16,983 recorded during the Fall semester when both the students, faculty, staff were first recorded.

Meanwhile, NSZoo Vice-President of Financial Affairs, Dr. E.T. Trite said that with the increase in enrollment, NSZoo could expect another $1 million dollars in revenues, and that NSZoo students would no longer have to pay to take showers in the dorms. Last fall Trite installed Pay-showers in all of the dorms as a measures to gain some much needed revenues here.

Dr. Trite also loosened measures that previously required all registering NSZoo students to pledge their first born child and a son-to-be named later as collateral in case their student loans were not repayed.

Back in Dr. Fudgeit's office, workers were confidently predicting a record Summer enrollment of almost 10,000 students.

Dr. Fudgeit's secretary, Betty Squealer said that the Registrar's office would then be counting the students that would be coming in to Inside View and the ones who would be enrolling in the new High School for the Gifted and Talented.

"Sex Toys" To Perform Here In Concert As Part of Christmas Festival Activities

The "Sex Toys", punk-dom's newest new wave smash supergroup, has been signed to be the lead act for the 1983 Christmas Festival concert to be held at Rather Coliseum.

Just back from an extended tour in Cuba, Nicaragua, Afghanistan, the Soviet Union, and San Francisco, the Sex Toys are currently in the studio making a follow-up to their recently released triple platinum album, "How To Make Babies Using Whips and Chains."

The supergroup's first album, "Come In Through The Back Door", was hailed by critics as a new breakthrough in musical circles.

Student Union Governing Bored's 2nd Vice-President-in-Charge-of-the-1st Vice-Presidents-Secondary-Duties, Flames Floyd said that the supergroup was extremely difficult to get.

"It cost us over $75,000 to sign them, but they're worth it. Their music appeals to all types of students; Black, White, male, female, and the in-betweens. I think we can all relate to their style," Flames said.

New Health Spa Opens On Banks of Lake

The grand opening ceremony of the new Chaplains' Lake Health Spa and Resort will take place Sunday, April 10 at p.m. near the East end of Choplin's Lake across from menuned housing.

It was decided to turn Chaplains Lake into a health spa after a research of the sludge showed that it was composed of natural ingredients that are helpful to clear, young, healthy skin. The chemical makeup of the sludge was discovered to be 48% aloe vera, 18% vitamin E, 12% animal proteins, 12% natural spring water, and 10% cocoa butter.

NSZoo was offered a mineral rights lease worth 1.7 million dollars from Johns and Johns. They wanted to market the contents of Chaplains' Lake in a skin refreshing cleanser called sludge. Dr. J.J. Orgy refused the offer stating he would not accept less than 4 million dollars for such a lease. He feels NSZoo could possibly lose a great deal of money with an offer of anything less because if any other valuable mineral was discovered they would have the rights to it also. Dr. Orgy also added that had he been able to receive the 4 million dollars he would have liked to have Caldwell Hall rebuilt.

The "Sex Toys", the new wave smash group from San Francisco will perform in Rather Colesium as part of the Christmas Festival concert. (Photo by Melanie Daigle)

leader, Thoushalt Knott said that he is going to start a protest aimed at finding someone else to be the guest's at the concert.

He reportedly has suggested Moon Unit and Dweezil Zappa, children of the legendary Frank Zappa. Moon Unit and Dweezil recently released their smash single,

"My Mother is a Space Cadet-Fer Sure".

"We as students should not be subjected to this kind of immoral abuse from degenerates such as the Sex Toys. I for one, am firmly opposed to this type of entertainment, and I will do something about it," Knott said.

Dr. Orgy announced that he would like to make Chaplains' Lake into part of a large health resort. The slude area would be used as mud baths and a spa. Sailing, canoing, and water skiing will be offered on the upper end of Chaplains' Lake and Lake Sibley. The recreation complex facilities will be used as are, however, a second pool and golf course will be added. The equine science department has offered the use of the stables for the purpose of riding.

Dr. Orgy has been working with city officials in adding the resort to the campus. Nat-chitoches is fully supporting NSZoo and will be resonsible for the building of the second pool and golf course that will be added to the recreation complex. There will also be a new hotel that will be built near Lake Sibley.

Full time students will have access to any of the services offered by the resort as long as they are enrolled. Residents of Natchitoches will be able to receive memberships with discounts for activities. Year-round membership will cost $1,800. A two week vacation at the spa with a full schedule of activities will cost approximately $1200.

Stig Duh Acquires Varnado

The new Chapter of Stigma Duh Gamma President "Snuff" Albarte announced Monday, plans to acquire Varnado Hall from NSZoo-Stigma Duh Gamma was able to obtain the dorm under the homestead clause in the 1803 Louisiana Purchase Agreement. In the document, a clause exists that allows any non-profit organization that has resided on Government property for 50 years to acquire any structure they have occupied for at least 3 years.

Director of Student Services Sam Spade hailed the acquisition as an "excellent way for the university to rid itself of the burden of old dorms."

Stig Duh's future plans for the dorm consist of having members live on its east side. As a way to finance the costs of maintaining Varnado, the fraternity will open a brothel on the west wing of the dorm. Future plans also include expanding the downstairs basement of the dorm into a casino.

Stigma Duh gamma has been without a house since 1980 when they sold the structure they owned on Pine Street.

McFine McNamed McSistant McCoach

NSZoo Athletic Director I.M. Powerful announced the hiring of a seventh assistant football coach for the 1983-84 year. The coach, Buxom McFine will be in charge of physical conditioning for the NSZoo football team.

Miss McFine was previously coaching at Playboy State University in Las Vegas, but left the staff for personal reasons.

Demon A.D., Powerful, said he saw her in the latest issue of PLAYHOUSE, a football magazine for "that coach who wants to know all the plays."

Powerful said that he was inspired by her background and her knowledge of physical conditioning. He placed a call to her Malibu beachhouse, and flew out there the next day with a contract.

Several NSZoo football team members were a little cautious at the signing of the new assistant coach. One, senior offensive lineman Spike Grinnart that he was kind of "apprehensive" of the new coach.

"She has kind of a tough reputation," he said, "I really don't know if any of us will be able to handle her, and her training regimen."

McFine will reportedly come to NSZoo after the first of June, to start the NSZoo football team on their conditioning. Powerful is expected back in two weeks.

NSZoo Whips USC Behind Shutout Pitching And Two Key NSZoo RBI's

Three NSZoo pitchers limited the University of Southern California (USC) to two hits en route to a 2-0 NSZoo win over the No. 1 ranked team in the NCAA.

Starting pitcher and winner, Spike Vienna went five innings giving up only one hit, but gave way to Scott Muskrat after walking the first two batters in the sixth inning. Muskrat retired the side, but he was lifted after he walked the first batter in the seventh and the next batter added a double to put men in scoring position.

Kevin Forewarned then came in to get the final outs to earn the save against the USC ballclub.

NSZoo opened the scoring in the bottom of the second when second baseman Steven Billygoat singled and advanced to second on a wild pitch. Centerfielder Gil Hernia added a single that brought in Billygoat with the games first run.

In the fifth, first basemen Lane Stupo lined a double down the right field line and

Stupo, Oliver-Smith Power NSZoo To Defeated of Undefeated UNO

Lane Stupo hit a grand slam home run, and Diamond Jim Oliver-Smith added three doubles and five RBI in his first game since coming off a near career ending injury, to propel the NSZoo baseball team to its 20th straight victory, a 14-5 shellacking of previously undefeated and 12th ranked University of New Orleans.

NSZoo plays 9th ranked Oklahoma State in a doubleheader tomorrow afternoon.

Stupo's home run came with catcher Sower Grapes slapped a single to center scoring Stupo.

Win the win, NSZoo moves to 32-2 while USC, suffering its first loss, drops to 35-1.

one out in the fifth inning and the score tied 5-5. Moments later, with two out and runners on second and third, Oliver-Smith lashed a 3-2 fastball to deep centerfield and the score ws 11-5, NSZoo.

Oliver-Smith added two more RBI in the top of the seventh with his third double, this one to right field, to finish the scoring.

NSZoo's starting pitcher John Barnyard went the distance striking out nine and allowing just three earned runs.

NSZoo Refuses NCAA Bid, Opts To Play Philadelphia 76ers In Superdome Showdown

The NSZoo Demons today refused a bid by the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) to play in the 1983 basketball tournament which will determine the No. 1 ranked team in the United States.

The NSZoo squad, coming off a 31-0 year, and defeating the University of Arkansas-Little Big Horn 108-63 in the finals of the Trans America Athletic Conference (TAAC) basketball tournament, have instead accepted a challenge to play the Philadelphia 76ers in the New Orleans Superdome in a charity game that will also determine which team is really the best team in America.

NSZoo basketball coach X. Proe, said that 76ers President Newton Feldmen called him last week and challenged him to the game. According to Proe, the challenge came just moments after the 76ers had defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 119-87 to sweep their best of seven NBA Championship series 4-0. The 76ers finished the regular season with a 70-12 record, and didn't lose a single game in the playoffs.

Proe said that he discussed the situation with his players and they all agreed to play the 76ers.

Junior center Redwood Tree, who is declaring hardship this year and jumping to the pro leagues said that this game would be a good test for the NBA players to get ready for him when he is drafted.

"I want to be fair to them," Tree said, "They won't know what to expect if I just bounce up there without giving them a chance to see what they can do to stop me."

The three time All-American went on to say that everyone else on the NSZoo team echoed his sentiments in on form or another.

Skenny Male, NSZoo's shooting guard who averaged over 47 points a game as an NSZoo basketballer also said that it was time to show the pro's what to expect from this year's crop of college basketballers.

"I hate to be immodest about it," Male said, "but I might as well."

"We are the cream of the college crop. We are probably the best group of basketball players ever assembled, and I think our record proves it. I don't think that UCLA, back when they had Jabbar, Walton, and the rest could even compare to us."

One member of the NSZoo squad who was not so outspoken, the usually quiet power forward Robin Redbreast, was a little more cautious in his outlook.

Redbreast was asked if he thought that NSZoo could beat Philadelphia and he just smiled and said, "I don't know."

Moments later he was asked if he thought that NSZoo could have won the NCAA tournament and gained the No. 1 national ranking, and he answered, "I don't know."

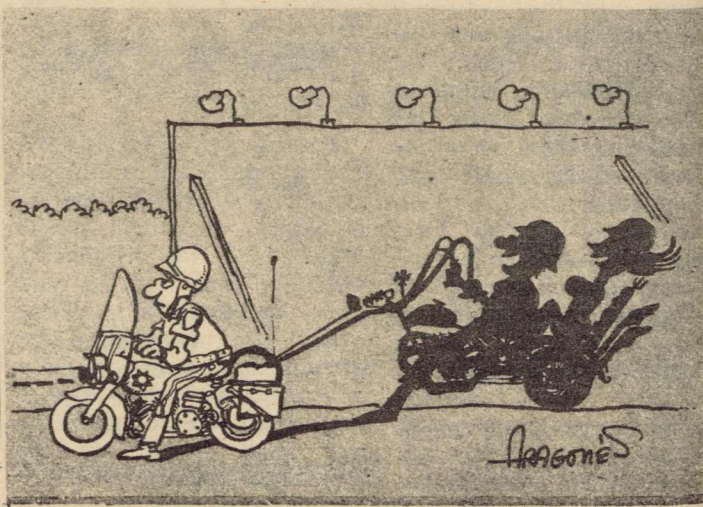

But when he was asked if he thought NSZoo was a Top Twenty team, he said, "I don't know."

NSZoo assistant coach Wayne Gunn, NSZoo's all time leading scorer, and a consensus All-American in his two years here (he transferred to NSZoo from a Shreveport junior college) answered questions on NSZoo's chances in the game.

"Gosh, you know, the 76ers have a really good team. I mean, gosh, they have Dr. J. and Moses Malone, and Andrew Toney, and a bunch of other really good players. It would probably take just a terrific effort on our part just to play with them, and then, golly, I just don't know what in the heck we would have to do to beat them."

The game will be broadcast over ESPN, channel 9 starting Sunday afternoon at 2:00, preempting the award winning Australian Rules Football telecast, live from Brisbane, Australia.

Outdoors With Fisch Trappe

The Coach And I Hunted Beavers

'Twas a warm, sensous Saturday night when I, Fisch Trappe, and my close friend and NSZoo athletic coach Jim Jigolo Jones and I went out to hunt that elusive wild game...Beavers.

I picked up Jim at his Dew Drop Inn motel room at precisely 8:30 p.m. We gathered up all the things that we needed for the hunt. Jim and I put on the necessary camouflage outfits, and quickly drove away.

When we got to our secret Beaver hideaway, a sense of eerie calm enveloped the car. Jim and I, Fisch Trappe, were no amateurs in the sport of Beaver hunting.

We got out of the car and walked to the spot where we knew that there would be Beavers. Soft animal noises emitted from the "Beaver's Nest" that we had visited so many times before.

Suddenly, without warning, a Beaver appeared, flanked to Jim's left. He never took his eyes off the Beaver, and it crept warily closer. Jim studied the soft brown eyes and the pert little nose. It kept coming closer and closer, until that unmistakable Beaver smell hit us.

But Jim didn't move. It was then that I, Fisch Trappe learned of Jim's real reason for being here tonight. He was going for a trophy! He wanted a Beaver that he could mount and put up on the wall.

I, Fisch Trappe, decided that I, Fisch Trappe would go for a trophy too.

We waited, passing the time patiently, watching several Beavers come and go, but none were to our fancy. Finally close to midnight, I, Fisch Trappe, saw one that I was sure would be a trophy. Jim motioned for me to take it, so I, Fisch Trappe worked my way close to the Beaver, and patiently waited while the Beaver made its way over to me.

It was only seconds before I, Fisch Trappe, had nailed a beautiful specimen. This Beaver was definitely trophy sized.

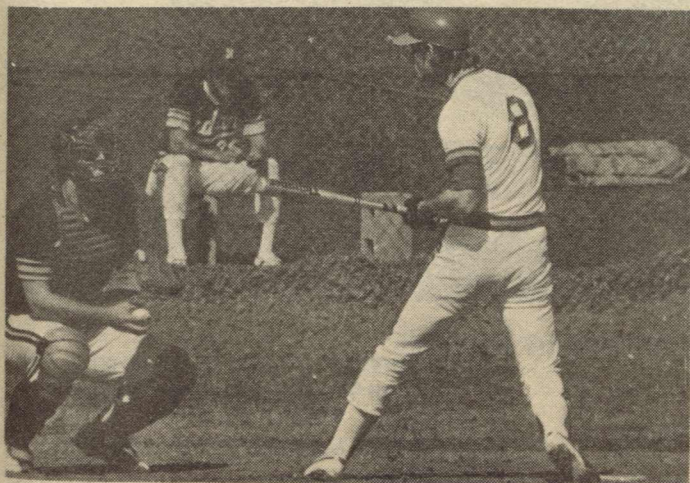

Then, not more than two minutes later, Jim and I, Fisch Trappe, spotted a definite trophy Beaver. It was Jim's turn. And I, Fisch Trappe, could see the intensity in his eyes.

Jim worked his way close to the Beaver, and in just minutes, Jim showed why he was the best at bagging Beavers. Jim and I carressed the soft brown jacket, that was as much a part of the Beaver as our socks were to our feet.

I went back to the car while Jim field dressed the Beaver and slung it over his shoulders for the walk back to the car.

The night was almost over, it had been a success. Both Jim and I had nailed trophy Beavers, and we both knew exactly where to find them again when the urge hits us.

Breaks Winless Streak

Antman Paces NSZoo To Upset Of Oklahoma St. In His First Game Since Being Called Up From Minors

In his first game since being called back up from NSZoo's Triple A farm team, the University of Yang, David Antman slammed two home runs, then hit a game winning double down the left field line to propel the NSZoo baseball team to a 7-6 upset win over 9th ranked Oklahoma State in the first game of a college baseball doubleheader.

Antman, who batted .482 at Yang, and hit 23 home runs in just 35 games, got things going in the first inning with his first round tripper, a solo shot off OSU starting, and losing pitcher, Ralph Flame (5-1).

OSU tied the game 3-3 in the third on a home run by Kevin Corken.

NSZoo shortstop Tex Ritter started the fifth inning with a triple and leftfielder Jerry Showmee, followed that with a single. Antman then hit his second home run of the game to put NSZoo up 6-3.

OSU came back in the top of the seventh to score three runs setting the stage for Antman's heroics.

OSU's ace reliever, Johnny Stopper forced the first two NSZoo batsmen to ground out, but centerfielder Steve Shaft knocked a Stopper fastball to rightfield for a stand up double. Showmee was then intentionally walked, and Antman came up to the plate.

With a full count and the capacity Stroud Field crowd of 19,758 on their feet in a deafening cry, Antman sent a Stopper curveball off the wall in dead center field scoring Shaft.

With the win, NSZoo improved its record to 31-2, and OSU fell to 34-3.

Football Coach Stops Dorm Takeover, Instead Confiscates Holiday Inn

In a suprise move yesterday, NSZoo Head Football Coach Billy Jack Winless announced that he had taken over the Holiday Inn, located on the outskirts of town, and converted it into a new dorm for the football team.

At his weekly press conference attended by over five of the nation's most prolific sportswriters, Winless said that after bowing down to the NSZoo student demands that he not take over Nakattrash dorm, he would instead confiscate the luxury motel.

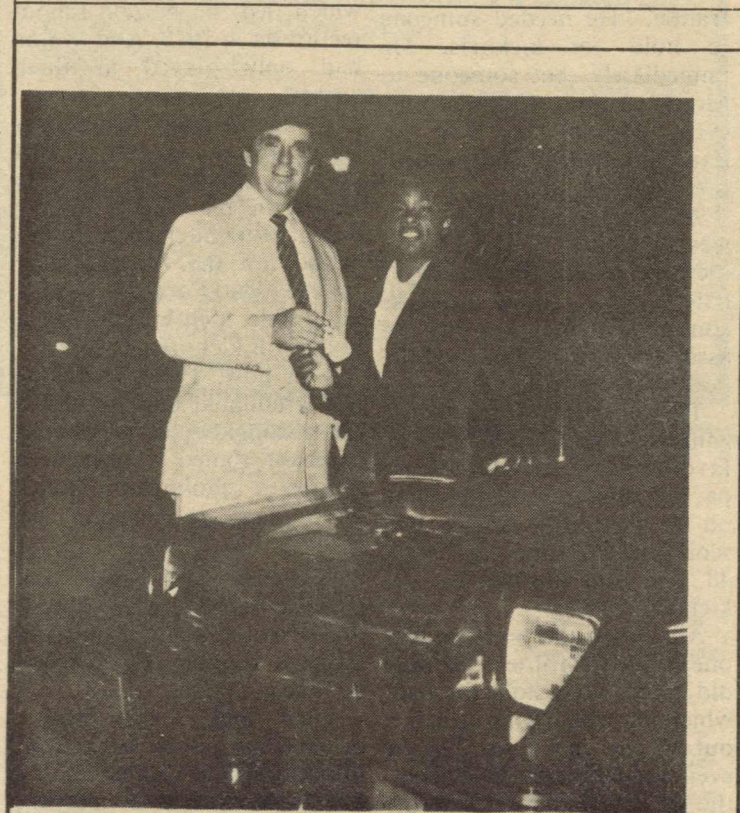

According to confidential sources, Winless has also kidnapped the hired help at the motel and the cooks and turned them all into slave labor. Winless said, "I want my boys to have the best things in life. They practice hard every afternoon and they deserve to be able to go back to a nice place and relax.

"We are trying to build a national championship here," said NSZoo Assistant Coach Bud Underling. We have tried to make it easier for the boys to concentrate on their football by laxing up on the academic restrictions that we had imposed on them earlier. From now on, they are only expected to attend class when they absolutely feel it is necessary, they still must maintain a .65 g.p.a., but we're giving them 12 free hours of P.E. per semester with a gauranteed 'A' in the course. We feel like with the security of knowing that they are here to play football and not to graduate, they will be able to perform better on Saturday nights.

NSZoo basketball coach X. Proe hailed the move by Winless in establishing his own dorm, as trend setting for the rest of the NSZoo athletic department and eventually the entire country.

"I think that what Winless did took guts, and my staff and I have already made plans to take over the El Camino Hotel which is less than one mile from the Coliseum," he said, "and furthermore, it is my understanding that NSZoo baseball coach Herbie Volkswagon plans to take over the Zoe-Jan motel in Campiti so his players will be closer to the Campiti Municipal Baseball Stadium, where they will soon be playing all of their games. It's a good deal for everyone involved."

NSZoo Assistant Women's Basketball Coach Jim Jones hands the keys to a new car to NSZoo's newest basketball recruit Shiralee Jackson, a 5'9" Prep-All-American from Detroit. Jackson reportedly chose NSZoo over the likes of other top schools like USC, UCLA, and the College of the Ozarks.

Spot's Spotlight

By Spot ●

When he came here several years ago as an unheralded assistant trainer from Nakatosh Center Prep School, Henry B. Mojoe figured to go through his four years of college, get his two-year associate degree, and go on to a life as your typical love machine.

But something funny happened on the way to the degree...

Mojoe was out watching football practice one late August afternoon when he decided, "Hey, I can play with those guys."

And play with them he did. Mojoe played with them every single day, Monday through Friday. Unfortunately, on Saturday nights, Mojoe wasn't issued a jersey. He stayed at home and watched "Love Boat" and played "go fish" with his nephew Marvin.

Then, on November 1, 1980, in the ninth game of the year against the University of Yang, NSZoo's regular ballholder for kickoffs, All-American "Fingers" Malone, suffered a freak injury when NSZoo kicker Leon Clemo accidentally kicked him off at the start of the second half.

NSZoo Offensive Uncoordinated Silly Haired, was frantic. He needed someone to hold for kickoffs. He immediately sent someone to Mojoe's house. (Mojoe wasn't even allowed to live in Exasperati Rehab center with the rest of the Jox).

At first Mojoe thought it was the father of the 12-year old he had been with the night before. But when he was convinced that it was just an assistant coach, he opened the door and went with him.

They hurried Mojoe to the game and gave him 69. His favorite number. In a pressure packed situation, Mojoe came on the field after NSZoo had scored to close the gap to 49-48, and held the ball for the kickoff.

And when the pressure was one, so was Mojoe. Not only did he correctly hold the ball, which allowed Clemo to sail it out of the end zone, but he even remembered to pick up the kicking tee on his way off the field. Quite an accomplishment for a kid who'd never played a down of tackle football.

From that impressive start, Mojoe kept on rolling. In his second game of the season, and the second to last game of the season for NSZoo, Mojoe held the kickoff, six times without a mistake. This was just two short of the NSZoo record and only four off the NCAA mark.

In the final game of the season, against La. Disco-Tech in the State Fairy Game, Mojoe was successful on eight of his first 11 attempts. Then, with just 25 seconds left in the game, NSZoo scored to move ahead of La. Disco-Tech, 84-81 in an offensive contest.

With 70-thousand screaming fans on their feet and yelling at the top of their voices, Mojoe came on the field for what would be his biggest moment.

If he held the ball correctly, not only would he have a new NCAA record, but the State Fairy Game would be NSZoo's.

An eerie hush came over the stadium as Leon Clemo walked back 10 steps and set his sights on the pigskin just beneath Mojoe's sweaty palms. Leon approached the ball and swung his mighty leg forward and kicked the ball out of the end zone. Mojoe had done it! The record was his! The game was NSZoo's! And Mojoe was the hero!

For the year, Mojoe was successful on 18 of 21 holdings which tied the NSZoo school record set in 1912. And Mojoe had only played in three games!

By next August, Mojoe was ready for a second record breaking season. His 18 of 21 record in placement holding was good enough to earn him a spot on the All-Louisiana Independent Football Team's honorable mention slot as a holder for kickoffs.

And now, Fingers Malone had graduated and Offensive Uncoordinated, Silly Haired had not signed a placement holder to scholarship. Things were looking bright for Mojoe.

However, just before fall practice started, Mojoe went down to the south Louisiana bayou's looking for crabs. And he got them.

Then and there, Mojoe decided that crabs were more important than football, so he abandoned hopes of playing for NSZoo that fall.

Eventually the crabs novelty wore off. But so did Mojoe's passion for football.

Mojoe came back and is now in his sixth year as a second semester sophomore and hopes to graduate next May with his two-year Basic Studies associate degree.

In Demon Playground action this past week, Billy whipped Bobby in horseshoes, but Bobby told his teacher that Billy cheated and Billy was forced to forfeit, giving him two forfeits on the season, and disqualifying him from further play.

Mikey pulled Debra Sue's hair, but Debra Sue got evened things up by kicking Mikey in the groin. After a time-out, Mikey snuck back around Debra sue and cut off one of her pig-tails.

Jimmy's nose was running down his mouth yesterday, but Mitchell's nose was running faster, and he also had a cough. With the win, Mitchell moves into a first place tie with Sandy for communicable diseases. Sandy just came off a two-week stay in the Infirmary with a case of mono.

Demon Playground

Although most activities were cancelled last week due to bad weather the intramural department did get the co-ed volleyball tournament and the armwrestling tournament completed. 16 teams participated in the volleyball event. Each team consisted of three girls and three guys.

3-V International took top honors with a 15-10, 11-15, 15-6 edge over Sigma Kappa and Los Amigos. 3-V downed Kappa Sig and Phi Mu 15-9, 15-9 in the semifinals to advance to the final round.

The team of Kappa Sig and Phi Mu then went the loser's bracket to play Kool and the Gang. Kool and the Gang then preceeded to win that contest by a 15-11, 15-13 count. In the finals 3-V took on Sigma Kappa and Los Amigos for the first time and won by scores of 15-11, and 15-1.

The women's armwrestling consisted of only 14 participants. In the end it wasn't even close as Sigma Kappa left all competition behind when they took top honors with 18 points. B.S.U. finished second with 3.

In the men's event Sig Tau and TKE tied for first place with 5.5 points a piece while YANG and Kappa Sig tied for second with 3 points. KA finished third in the tournament with 2.5 points.

John Frost of Sig Tau defeated TKE's Ken Foster in the 100-125 pound class. TKE's Robert Berthet then beat Joseph Grappe of Lignite. In the 151-175 pound class Kappa Sig's Ashton Langlais downed KA's Mike Prudhomme.

In the 176-200 pound division Gary Bates faced no competition and was awarded first place. YANG's John Smith defeated Richard Constance of Sig Tau to round out the tournament.

Demons Can't Get Untracked

After a two week layoff, Northwestern had trouble getting untracked as the Demons lost a three-game series at Nicholls State. The Demons were defeated 14-3 on Saturday and then fell 1-0 and 4-1 on Sunday. The Demons are now 14-22 on the season.

On Saturday Nicholls collected 13 hits off four Demon pitchers and the Colonels were also aided by three Demon errors. At the plate for Northwestern Wayne Lupo drove in two runs with two hits and Billy Stevenson had two hits and the other Demon RBI.

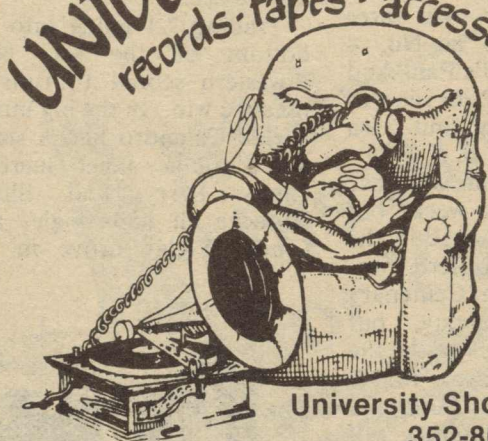

In Sunday's first game Nicholls scored the only run of the contest in the second when it was ruled that Lupo pulled his foot at first base on what would have been the third out of the inning. Northwestern collected just three hits while Nicholls got just five hits off John Barnard.

College of Nursing To Open Three New Courses

The Department of Graduate Studies and Research in the College of Nursing at Northwestern is admitting graduate nursing to three new clinical components which will begin this summer at NSU's nursing campus in Shreveport.

The family nurse clinician, adult primary health care and community health nursing programs are new areas of concentration for the College of Nursing, and each leads to the master of science in nursing degree.

According to nursing professor Dr. Patricia Moxley, the family nurse clinician and adult primary health care components were developed with the support of grants received from the nursing division of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

Graduate nursing students who are admitted for a study beginning in the summer semester of 1983 will be offered specialized courses in advanced clinical content from a curriculum that includes nursing theory and research, science classes and several electives.

Students admitted to the family nurse clinician program will receive advanced preparation in the management of all members of the family, from infants to adults to the elderly. Nursing graduates concentrating in this area will be qualified to work in out-patient clinics, clinics associated with hospitals, in conjunction with a family physician or in their own private practice, which is permitted by law in states other than Louisiana.

The adult primary health care program will train student nurses to work only with the adult population which ranges from adolescents to geriatrics. Upon graduation with a master's degree, nurses will be able to provide health care management services at medical clinics, in conjunction with a physician or as a private practitioner in many states.

Graduate nursing students concentrating on community health nursing will be given advanced training for employment in the classic community health setting, which includes public health services provided within each of the 64 parishes in Louisiana.

High School Scholarships

Twenty graduating high school seniors have accepted $5,000 academic scholarships to attend Northwestern, according to NSU president Dr. Joseph J. Orze.

Students selected as recipients of the four-year academic scholarships at NSU, who will enroll as freshmen in the summer or fall of 1983, will receive $1,250 for each school year if 3.0 academic averages are maintained.

Curtis Wester, Northwestern's director of admissions and chairman of the scholarship selection committee, said several hundred academically-outstanding students were recommended by high school principals and counselors for the academic awards at NSU.

She Knows You, You Better Know Her

If you are a student in the College of Business, you most likely have already become acquainted with her, or soon will. If you plan to be graduating soon, you know that you have been depending upon her a lot. She is Mrs. Jean Marcelli, secretary to the Dean of NSU's College of Business.

A native of Goldonna she is married to Charles Marcelli, Jr., and makes her home in Natchitoches. Mrs. Marcelli has worked in the business building since 1977. Prior to that, she worked for 5 years in Personnel. Beginning in 1957, she was employee in Special Education for 15 years.

Some students say that Mrs. Marcelli is "better than any advisor". "Well I don't know about that", she laughed, "but I have to stay on top of the curriculum." There are currently 1,179 students in the College of Business and that's 108 student folders that have to be finished before those students can graduate this spring.

Her ability to remember people's names has made Mrs. Marcelli all the more popular. "I met her only once", a student said, "and the next time I saw her, she knew me by name."

This talent, she explained, come from training herself over the years to "put a face with a name. I'm pleased with being able to remember people. It's especially easy to remember ones you see often, though," she said, pausing to assist a student who plans to graduate this summer with updating her folder.

With over 1000 students in the College of Business, she has made many friends. A shelf on one wall displays gifts that students have given her in the past many are unusual curios from foreign countries and she knows exactly who each is from.

Her artistic talent for flower arranging and love of gardening has been admired for the past three years of the Walter-Porter Forums. Each year she has made an arrangement that is used at the head table for the luncheon.

Helping people is what she enjoys most. "I love doing for students and trying to help. I like people. I guess that's why I have stayed at Northwestern. If a student comes in here and I have helped him even a little. I'm happy."

Her love of people which has kept her here will keep her here until retirement, she said. "I will not go home and do nothing. I have to be with people."

Positive School Image Conference Set Here

A public relations conference focusing on how to market a positive school image is scheduled for Thursday and Friday, April 28-29, at Northwestern.

The Central Louisiana Professional Development Center at NSU, the Northwestern College of Education and the State Department of Education and the State Department of Education are co-sponsoring the two-day program, which is open to parents, teachers, principals, superintendents and other school administrators.

"We have heard so much in recent months about the marketing concept in relation to education that we believe it is time to do something," stated Mary Lee Posey, the CenLa PDC director. "The goal of this first annual conference is to have each participant leave with a commitment to project a positive school image and ideas to make it happen."

She added, "We should be letting people throughout the state know about the positive aspects of our schools. The public must be told that we are educating all people, regardless of handicaps or age, and that 99 percent of our teachers and administrators really care about educating our students."

McNeill Takes Lead In Production of "Carousel"

Bonnie McNeill of Alexandria was nine years old when she made her stage debut as one of Carrie's children in the Central Louisiana Community Theatre production of "Carousel."

Eleven years later, the Northwestern State University sophomore has grown into a "leading lady" who will star as the pretty, naive and trusting Julie Jordan in the famous Rodgers and Hammerstein musical to be presented April 21-23 at the Grand Ecore Amphitheatre.

Miss McNeill, a sophomore vocal music performance major, will be playing opposite William McGraw, her voice teacher at NSU who has been cast in the male lead role of Billy Bigelow.

"Bonnie is a very fine actress, and she has a lovely voice," said McGraw, assistant professor of music at NSU. "Those are absolute necessities for the role of Julie, a type of people who loves unconditionally."

"I consider myself to be very professional," said Miss McNeill, a graduate of Menard High School in Alexandria. "Working with such a talented man as Mr. McGraw has brought my professionalism to a higher plane."

The NSU sophomore, who studied voice for five years with Emma Rae O'Neal-Petrus of Alexandria, has appeared in several productions for the Cenla Community Theatre.

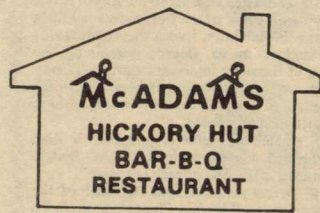

Last year, she was Zaneeta in "The Music Man" and before that were such roles as Maria in "The Sound of Music," Molly in "Girl Crazy," Lady Larken in "Once Upon A Mattress" and Bonnie in "Anything Goes." Miss McNeill also had the lead role of Amelia in the fall production of "Amelia Goes" to the Ball, a comic opera presented by the NSU Opera-Musical Theatre Workshop.

Julie is probably the most challenging role Miss McNeill has ever received.

A Few Quick Notes

In case it somehow slipped past you, advanced registration for the Fall '83 semester officially began last Wednesday when the packets were given out and fall schedules were too. You now have until April 22, (Friday) to make that all important visit to your friendly neighborhood prof so you can beat the crowd and sign up for more schoolin'.

On Monday and Tuesday April 25-26, report to the P.E. Majors Building starting at 12 noon for all of you with a last name that starts with 'D'. Then, approximately every half hour, the alphabet will keep on rolling with E's and F's at 12:30, G's at 1:00 and H's and I's at 1:30, and then the P's and Q's finish up the pre-registration for the day at 4:00 p.m.

At 12 noon on Tuesday, the R's will start, and by 5:30 everyone should have registered.

Then, next fall, all you must do is bring your trial schedule card and pick up your fee sheet and pay your fees.

On a semi-similar note, the financial aid office has posted an update on the "Good Standing and Satisfactory Progress Standards" for NSU. According to the note, to continue to receive financial aid, any returning student must earn a 1.50 gpa for his first semester here and a 1.75 gpa in his second semester. If you last that long, you must maintain a 2.0 for your junior and senior years here.

If you fail to meet these requirements, you can not come back here for the next semester. Furthermore, after you've served your one semester sentence, upon being re-admitted to NSU, you will not be eligible to receive financial aid.

However, after you enroll for the same number of semester hours being pursued during the semester the required gpa was not earned. Then, you must earn the required gpa. One final note on this, a student may only receive financial aid for a maximum of five years (10 semesters) in order to complete a four-year program.

And finally in the world of...Notes from Roy Hall..., our Vice-President of Fiscal Affairs, E.J. Triche has sent a reminder to all students that a $5 service charge will be assessed for each check returned regardless of reason except in the case of a Stop Payment or Closed Account in which the charge will be $10. The note goes on to say that an individual who stops payment of a check is circumventing the refund policy of NSU. There, (thankfully) will be no charge for bank errors.

Check privileges will be cancelled for anyone who has had checks returned for the following reasons: three Insufficient Funds checks, one Account Closed check, and one Stopped Payment check.

Any check or checks returned must be paid within 10 days after the date of written notification, or the matter will be turned over to our infamous judicial system.

And that's that. Joe Cunningham

You need energy to get a job!

Industry and business need customers to buy the products they make. They also need energy to produce those products. In order to supply the needed energy, utility companies must take advantage of the most up-to-date technology and make full use of every available energy source including nuclear power and coal. The failure to utilize these two sources of energy along with others available could seriously jeopardize the industrial and economic growth of our entire area. And growth is what provides jobs. Energy. You need it to get a job.

Players are asked to fill out a small form stating their name, phone number, handicap, sex, and their estimation of the quality kind of player that they are (A,B,C,D).

All entry forms should be turned into David Stanton, the acting NSU golf coach and this year's tournament director by Friday. You can reach Stanton at his office in Prather Coliseum or by calling 357-5891.

This tournament will be an annual one held each year in Roper's honor. Roper was the Demons only member of the Trans America Athletic Conference's All-Conference team last year, while placing ninth in the TAAC tourney.

"We're getting an education to run a filling station."

So ran the words of an old song popular during the Depression. No, we're not in a depression, but if our energy sources dry up so will our jobs. Industry and business depend on energy to survive. And to supply that energy, utility companies must make full use of today's technology and of every available energy source including nuclear power and coal. The failure to utilize these two sources of energy, along with others available, could seriously jeopardize the industrial and economic growth of our area. And growth is what we need to provide jobs.

Goodwin Sees Good Things In Demon Scrimmage and Spring Practice

After two weeks and one full scrimmage, Northwestern football Coach Sam Goodwin said the effort his Demons put out during the scrimmage was one of the most positive things that he and the Demon coaching staff has seen so far.

"Our effort was real good," commented Goodwin about the Northwestern scrimmage. "The kids were aggressive and really getting after it on both offense and defense. It seemed like it was the best effort of the spring, but we still have to get a better effort from everybody on every play to be where we want to be."

During the first scrimmage four touchdowns were scored and the defense came up with a safety on a tackle by sophomore James Hall. The scores came on a two-yard pass from Stan Powell to LeRoy Ellis, a 27-yard run by Kenny Mosley, a 7-yard run by Mark Leonard and a 22-yard pass from Leonard to Terry Joe Ramsey during the two-minute drill that ended the workout.

"I thought we had a real big day from the running backs," added Goodwin. "They ran hard and showed us some good things plus in the offensive line John Smith had an outstanding day and Rickey Ainsworth (center) and James Hashert (guard) also played well."

Sophomore running back Mike Cottone led the Demon rushers with 86 yards on 12 carries and Ellis was right behind with 85 yards on 10 carries. Mosley, converted from the defensive backfield, carried just four times but picked up 60 yards.

"Right now our main drawbacks are in fundamentals in blocking and tackling," said Goodwin, as the Demons near the midway point of spring drills. "We have to get better as a group on both offense and defense in basic, fundamental football. To be successful we are going to have to have more discipline, be more intent and just get better on our fundamentals on both sides of the football."

The intramural department held the weight-lifting and tennis mixed doubles competition last week, but were unable to complete the final games of the softball regular season.

Only nine people entered the men's weight-lifting competition, which consisted of three events: the squat, the bench press, and the deadlift. The Untouchables easily took top honors with 30 total points. Kingpins finished second with five points and YANG took third with three.

John Williams placed first in the third division with a combined weight of 1000 pounds. Brian Childers took second for YANG and Mike Prudhomme finished third for KA.

The Kingpin's won the division four title as Ahmmad Shorara lifted 555 total pounds in the three events. In the 186-200 pound class Mike Robinson was uncontested and went on to score a first place finish for the Untouchables. Division six winner, Joey Caleyto lifted 1300 pounds as he added another victory for the Untouchables.

Leo Clement was the only entry in the 221-250 weight class and won the competition with a total weight of 1280 for the Untouchables. The Untouchables also took division eight as John Smith recorded a combined lift of 1385.

In the last division, the 301 and up weight class, Fred Galloway compiled a total lift of 1485 pounds as he squatted 600 and deadlifted 500, while bench pressing 385.

The women's tournament saw a much bigger turnout, as they had 20 people enter the respective divisions. Sigma Kappa took the title with 37 total points and Phi Mu finished in second with 13 points.

In division two competition Donna Box combined for 140 total pounds to finish in first, and just ahead of her teammate Angela Chamption for Phi Mu. Sigma Kappa's Jenny Johnson defeated Debbie Gardner and Angela Lasyone to take first place in the 111-125 weight class.

Brenda Foster gave Sigma Kappa another victory as she out-lifted Jo Tatum and Lynn Nicole. Sigma Kappa's Gina Rousseaux took top honors in the fifth division over Rosemary Brent and Paula Simmons, with a total lift of 340 pounds in the three events.

Jody Werfel of Sigma Kappa won the 157-170 pound class, and Beth Sandiford lifted 340 pounds to take the title in the 171-186 pound division for Sigma Kappa. In the final division, the 187 and up class, Margaret Ducote took another victory for Sigma Kappa.

In the tennis mixed doubles tournament Parker Thompson YANG and Angela Lasyone of Phi Mu won the championship over Joe and Rowena Beinvenu, who were also playing for YANG and Phi Mu. Tony Thompson, another YANGster and Julie Wendt, also of Phi Mu finished in a tie for third with Frank Silva of Kingpins and Margaret Ducote of Sigma Kappa.

Lady Demons Sweep Doubleheader From McNeese

Northwestern's Lady Demon softball team increased its winning streak to five games here Tuesday, defeating McNeese State 4-0 in the first game and winning the second contest by a 5-1 score. The Lady Demons are now 14-5 on the season.

Northwestern opened the scoring in the first game in the second inning when Julie Robinson singled and ater scored on a single by Renee Richard. The Lady Demons added two runs in the fifth on RBI singles by Carla Peters and Sherri Brooks and ended the scoring in the seventh when Brooks drove in her second run of the game.

In the opener Richard, Brooks and Berry all led the 10-hit attack with two hits each. Sydney Forrester picked up the win on the mound, allowing just three hits and collecting three strikeouts.

In the second contest Forrester was just as tough, allowing the Cowgirls only four hits as McNeese could only score one unearned run in the sixth inning.

In the second inning Richard doubled to drive in two runs after Annette Manuel, Robinson and Cindy Wigley had all singled. In the third inning Wigley, Richard and Peters all had singles to drive in runs.

In the second contest Richard again added two hits, one of those a double, while Wigley added a pair of hits, Robinson had three hits and Cindy Berry reached base three times.

Drunk Driving Deaths Major Problem

By Tammy Lafleur and Anna Hill

Shocking figures obtained from state records proves that Natchitoches Parish has the highest fatality rate in the Troop E area and the second highest of all parishes in the state. There was a total of 38 deaths in Natchitoches Parish last year, 90% of which were directly related to drunk drivers.

The state recently passed new DWI laws which came into effect during January of this year. These laws stiffen the penalties against people who drive while under the influence of alcohol.

The sentence in Natchitoches Parish has been increased from a fine of $328 cash bond to $428 cash bond, two days in the parish jail, and a mandatory attendance of a drug abuse program and driving improvement course at the driver's expense for his first offense. A second offense involves an extended jail sentence while a third offense carries the maximum penalty of one year in the state penitentiary, Angola.

According to Detective Larry Vaughn of the Natchitoches Police Department, a special task force is being commissioned by the state solely for handling DWI cases. The new division will not involve itself in any cases other than those concerning DWI incidents.

In regards to the new open-container law, it requires that all alcoholic beverages in a vehicle be in a sealed container. The main concern of the local police is not so much as to catch drinking drivers as it is to remove drunk drivers from the city streets. Those intoxicated drivers pose the major threat.

Detective Vaughn noted that the majority of DWI offenders includes high school students and individuals over 30. With the new task force and stricter DWI laws, combined with the lowering of the legal prosecution age to 17, the fatality rate in Natchitoches Parish should decline sharply in the future.

Students Sweat; Pianos Keep Cool

By Anna Hill

Students and staff are sweltering in summer heat due to a lack of air conditioning in three buildings on the northeast corner of the NSU campus. Hardest hit are Russell Hall and Louisiana Dorm with Varnado Dorm feeling some effects, also.

The Caldwell Hall fire and an engineering error in the construction of the A.A. Fredricks Fine Arts Center are at the root of the problem. According to Loran Lindsey, supervisor of NSU's physical plant, the pump installed which supplies cold water for the cooling system in the Fine Arts Center is too strong and pulls the water away from the other buildings on the same cooling loop. This problem is compounded by damage caused to the water pipes when the Caldwell fire was fought last October. Lindsey said it is thought that a vacuum was created between the water being pumped to the fire and the cooling pump for the Fine Arts Center. When demand for water at the fire was removed, the water rushed back into the pipe system with a hammering effect. This caused a great deal of damage, rupturing the pipes with enough force to break surrounding concrete slabs.

The residents of Louisiana Hall have been living in muggy, hot rooms for the last two weeks. When no quick solution could be agreed upon, the residents were asked to move to Sabine Dorm.

In Russell Hall, the KNWD staff is battling stagnant air coupled with 100 degree heat by early afternoon. Concerning the use of fans to beat the heat, General Manager Eric Maron pointed out that the air currents created by a fan would result in wind tunnel sound effects when the station is broadcasting.

Loran Lindsey said he began working for a solution to the air conditioning problem this past January because he knew it would take time to appropriate funds for the necessary repairs. The funds are now available from the state and, it is just a matter of having the contracts finalized and getting the new chilled water pump installed. The repairs should be completed before the upcoming fall semester, he said.

A temporary solution was available said sources within the Fine Arts Center. It seems the cooling system in the Fine Arts Center could have been cut back and there would have been enough chilled water to cool Louisiana and Russell halls. However, this solution was not desirable to authorities in the Fine Arts Center because an increase in temperature in the Fine Arts Center would cause the grand pianos to need re-tuning.

Debra Clapper

Appointed Argus Editor

Debra Waters Clapper of Jamestown has been appointed editor for the 1983-84 editions of Argus, the literary arts magazine published by Northwestern students.

The senior botany major was selected Argus editor by the university's student publications committee. Her appointment was approved recently by the Student Government Association at NSU.

Mrs. Clapper served as assistant editor for Argus magazine during the 1982-83 academic year. She also won second place in the formal essay division at this year's Louisiana College Writers Society writing competition.

At Northwestern, Mrs. Clapper is president of Sigma Tau Delta, the national English honorary society, and is also a member of the university's forestry and Wildlife Conservation Club.

Memorial Scholarship Established

The Northwestern Foundation has received a $10,000 investment from Mr. and Mrs. Jack P. McCain Jr., of Natchitoches to establish a scholarship in memory of their two sons who died in separate accidents during the past year.

The memorial scholarship to NSU is in honor of John and Jason McCain, who were students at St. Mary's Junior and Senior High Schools at the times of their deaths.

John McCain was a senior and football team member at St. Mary's High School when he died in an automobile accident in November of 1982. Jason McCain, who died last March in a three-wheeler accident, was an eighth-grade student at St. Mary's Junior High.

The John and Jason McCain Memorial Scholarship will be awarded primarily to a St. Mary's High School graduate enrolling as an incoming freshman at Northwestern. If there is no qualified applicant from St. Mary's, a student may be selected from Natchitoches Central High School or any other school in Natchitoches Parish.

Louisiana School To Open This Fall

The new Louisiana School for the Math, Sciences, and Arts, recently established by the state legislature, is scheduled to open for registration and classes September 6 on the NSU campus.

Attending the school in its first year will be 200 juniors from various parts of the state. The males will be located in Bossier Hall and the females in Prudhomme Hall. Classes are scheduled to be held in Prudhomme Hall and in the newly constructed Center for the Creative and Performing Arts.

In addition to academic work, the students will be involved in their own student activities, including yearbook, honor organizations, and intramurals.

Lesla Hatley In Miss Louisiana Top Ten

Northwestern sophomore Lesla D'Anne Hatley of Natchitoches was one of 10 finalists selected to compete last Saturday during the final night of the Miss Louisiana Pageant in Monroe.

She is the third official Northwestern representative since 1977 to earn Top 10 honors at the state pageant. Cheryl Purcell was chosen in 1977, and Zina Curlee was selected in 1981.

Miss Hatley, who was representing Northwestern's Student Union Governing Board, was among 32 contestants from across the state competing in the Miss Louisiana Pageant, a three-day competition which sends its winner to the Miss America contest in Atlantic City, N.J.

A broadcast journalism major, Miss Hatley won the NSU Student Union Governing Board's Lady of the Bracelet Competition in February to earn the trip to Miss Louisiana.

She has previously won the title of Miss Merry Christmas-Natchitoches Junior Miss in 1981 and was fourth runner-up in the Louisiana Junior Miss Program in 1982.

Stokes Appointed Vice-President Of University Affairs

Dr. George A. Stokes, an academic dean at Northwestern for the past 20 years, has been appointed as NSU's new vice-president of university affairs.

NSU president Dr. Joseph J. Orze said Stokes, whose appointment was approved this week by the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities, will be responsible for all of the support service areas of the university.

Stokes has been Dean of the College of Liberal Arts at Northwestern since 1968. He also served for one year as Dean of Academic Affairs and for four years as Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences.

A native of Winnfield, Stokes has been a member of the NSU faculty since 1949 and presently holds the rank of professor of geography. He is considered an authority on historical geography of the United States, military history, and the history and archeology of the Natchitoches area.

Northwestern's new vice-president received the Ph.D. degree in geography and anthropology from Louisiana State University in 1954. He also earned the master's degree in geology from LSU in 1948 and the bachelor's degree in social studies from Northwestern in 1942.

Stokes' honors include membership in Sigma Xi, Phi Alpha Theta, Phi Kappa Phi, Blue Key, Phi Eta Sigma and the Geological and Mining Society of American Universities.

Blue Key Alumni Chapter Established

An alumni chapter of Blue Key National Honor Fraternity has been established at Northwestern where the men's service organization has been in existence since 1959.

The NSU Blue Key Alumni Chapter was organized this spring in conjunction with the undergraduate chapter's awards banquet on the Northwestern campus.

Leonard O. Nichols, retired dean of men and the NSU Blue Key advisor from 1959 to 1970, was elected president of the alumni chapter.

Vice-president is Dr. Fred C. Bosarge, advisor to Blue Key for the past 13 years. A former undergraduate member of the honor fraternity, Bosarge has been NSU's dean of students since 1974 and also served from 1970 to 1974 as dean of men at Northwestern.

Jimmy Berry, principal of the Northwestern Middle Laboratory School, was elected corresponding secretary, and selected as the alumni chapter's recording secretary and treasurer was Leonard Blanton, an accountant with Western Electric in Shreveport.

According to Bosarge, those eligible for membership in the NSU Blue Key Alumni Chapter are all alumni, faculty and staff members who were Blue Key members while they were undergraduate students at Northwestern.

"This new alumni chapter hopes to provide a link between Blue Key alumni and the university," explained Bosarge. "There is also interest in establishing a scholarship and providing a place of fellowship for Blue Key alumni."

Booster Club Begins Fundraising

Some 300 friends and fans of Northwestern athletics were on hand Thursday night, June 9, for a free barbeque at the Recreation Complex, courtesy of the NSU Demon Booster Club.

According to Nan Holmes, athletics business manager, the Booster Club took in some $4300 in pledges. "Of course this does not include other pledges of unstated amounts", she said. "But we're very pleased because of the positive feedback" the Booster Club received "when it was over".

The event featured not only a barbeque but a band and brief talks by Northwestern coaches, athletic director Tynes Hildebrand, President Joe Orze and Booster Club officials.

Former Northwestern athletes such as Petey Perot, Joe Delaney and Jim Hoops were also present at the fundraiser.

Newly-elected Booster Club President Jerry Markum said that the Booster club wanted to get a "faster start than in previous years" on fundraising. He was especially pleased with the turnout because there were townspeople present that he had never seen before at Booster Club events.

A phone-a-thon is the next order of fundraising business that the Booster Club has planned. Markum explained that during the phone-a-thon, scheduled for June 20-23, Booster Club members and other volunteers will be contacting alumni from all over Louisiana and other parts of the United States to solicit donations for Northwestern's athletic program.

The Demon Booster Club gives support to NSU's varsity sports programs by providing financial contributions to help cover travel, equipment and other expenses. Booster Club members, in return, are offered such benefits as parking privileges, priority seating at games, and newsletters.

Press Preview Marks One Month Countdown Until Folk Festival

A Press Preview held June 16 in Williamson Museum began the countdown of the final month before the 4th annual Natchitoches Folk Festival to be held July 15, 16, and 17 in Prather Coliseum.

The Preview included many performers and craftsmen who will appear at the Folk Festival next month. Louisiana native, Thomas Edison "Brownie" Ford performed his cowboy songs which he grew up with. Craftsmen such as Elijah and Joubert Harris of Washington, Louisiana showed their skills in basket weaving.

Highlighting the Preview was a group of Caddo Indians from Fort Cobb, Oklahoma who performed ceremonial war dances which are a part of their tradition. The Caddos, along with many other performers will display their talents and crafts at the Folk Festival.

The barbeque lunch served at the Press Preview was provided by Grayson's Barbecue of Clarence, Louisiana. Established in the late 1950's by Ollie Grayson, Grayson barbecue is known throughout the state.

Press members from many parts of the state attended the event. Also present were several members of Northwestern's faculty and staff, student leaders, and town dignitaries.

Dr. Donald Hatley, Director of the Folk Festival, felt the Press Preview went off exceptionally well. He feels confident that there will be a turnout of approximately 14,000 people at this year's festival which would be an increase of 2,000 people over last year's festival attendance.

SGA Works For YOU

NSU Art Professor Donates Watercolor

Northwestern art professor Dr. Grady Harper has donated his watercolor painting of the historic Grand Ecore Bluffs near Natchitoches to the Louisiana House of Representatives in Baton Rouge.

The painting was presented last week by Harper to Speaker of the House John Hainkel. It will be displayed in one of the committee rooms of the House of Representatives in the State Capitol.

The watercolor painting by Harper was done at the request of State Rep. Jimmy Long of Natchitoches, who stated that paintings representing geographical scenes across the state are displayed in the various committee rooms of the House.

Harper is a native Louisiana artist whose affection for his home state serves as the prime inspiration for his work. He travels throughout the state, painting and sketching the wide array of local subject matter which is particularly suited to his unique watercolor style.

He has won numerous awards at such art shows as the Melrose Arts and Crafts Festival, Tom Peyton Memorial Arts Festival, the First United Methodist Church Art Festival in Shreveport and the Southern Watercolor Society Exhibition.

Tandy Corp. Donates Computers

The Tandy Corporation of Fort Worth, Texas is providing Radio Shack TRS-80 Model IV microcomputers for microprocessing systems workshops which are being conducted this summer by Northwestern.

More than 290 school teachers, coordinators, supervisors, training directors and other administrators are participating in the three-week workshops which are designed to provide educators with a working knowledge of microcomputer concepts.

The workshop instructor is Dr. Wayne Eirich, assistant chairman of the Department of Management Information Systems in the College of Business and Public Administration at the University of Arizona.

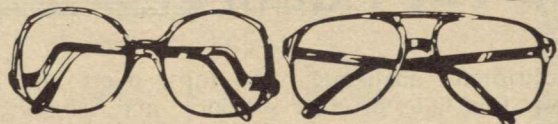

The acquisition of the 35 Radio Shack TRS-80 Model IV equipment to teach educators computer literacy at NSU this summer was negotiated by Dr. Tommy Johnson, head of NSU's Department of Business-Distributive Education and Office Administration.

The Word Is Baby Powder

Summer in Louisiana cannot be compared to anywhere else. Where else can you work up a sweat just trying to dry off after a shower? When else does it take twice the normal amount of time to blow dry your hair? I'd love to see the demand curve for baby powder during the summer months. I'd be willing to bet that sales increase due to folks trying to stay dry and comfy. A sprinkle a day, so they say.

Being at summer school seems only to increase out sensitivity to high temperatures. This summer is no exception but rather, a clear example of proof. For many, Summer 1983 will be especially long and hot.

Normally, we can expect a few machines, etc. to be out of good working order at one time or another. Ironically, an air conditioning pump is working just a little too well and is sucking all the cool air from Louisiana and Russell Halls in to the A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts. As a result the graduate students occupying Louisiana dorm are now living in Sabine, many classes normally taught in Russell Hall are relocated. Unfortunately, the KNWD staff, who can't very well pick up and move their radio station, are sweating over the airwaves, praying for cool weather so their equipment won't die on them.

A new pump is being ordered which will provide a balance of power, enabling the hot buildings to receive cool air. Hopefully, the pump can be installed by the fall semester's beginning.

Many have suggested that the Fine Arts Center lower the air conditioning so that Louisiana and Russell Halls may be cooled. This temporary solution was nixed by authorities in the Fine Arts Center because an increase in temperature would require that the pianos be retuned.

Now don't that beat all? Students are shuffled to the other side of campus, classes are unbearably hot, and office workers must carry on day to day routines in rooms whose temperatures reach the 90 degree mark, all for the sake of keeping pianos in tune? This doesn't make sense.

Meanwhile, many offices in the Fine Arts Center are turning down the air conditioners. It seem they're getting a bit chilly over there.

But for the rest of the campus, it's time to bring out the bottle --of baby powder, I mean. It's going to be a long summer.

The Wonderful World Of Summer

Aaah! Will the fun never end? It is that time of the year again--the sunburn season, or summer, whichever you prefer. The summer, filled with smells of suntan lotions and backyard barbecues; runners are sweating it out in the heat of the day; lakes and pools are crowded with aquatic nuts; an as for me, well, I am content to stay on the fairways, so to speak.

We Americans are really a funny bunch. We have an undying love for the sun, but it was only yesterday that we overheard each other commenting about cooler weather.

What would we do without the wonderful of summer? Go insane I guess. Not only do we have an affair with the sun, but everything that goes with it. Just look around you. For instance, there's probably a container of suntan lotion on a nearby shelf. Maybe there's a fishing rod or golf clubs in the closet. And if you take a look in the garage you may find a boat, some skis, and a bicycle in the corner.

Nature has provided summer for us so we may enjoy its beauty and partake of its many offerings. Just a week ago, however, did I realize that summer was actually here. Early one morning, after struggling to crawl out of bed, I traipsed off to the Recreation Complex for work. After washing the electric carts, I mowed some grass and attacked the weeds with a fantastic machine called a weedeater. Very soon afterwards I was taking out my frustrations on this little, white ball that seemed to go any direction but straight.

By the time I stepped off the last green, I was aging, angry, and hot. The clear, blue water in the pool looked inviting and, naturally, I accepted the invitation. Now laying around and in the pool isn't as easy as it may appear to be. You sweat, you can't reach parts of your back where the suntan lotion is most needed, you swat at the bees and wasps attracted by the smell of the lotion, and the sun hurts your eyes. But, aside from that, everyone seemed to be enjoying it.

Again, I was aging from the sun's rays, angry because of the sunburn in the small of my back that I couldn't reach, and hot. The day wasn't over yet. How I let myself walk on to the tennis court is still a mystery, but I was there, attempting to teach a friend the basics of the game. We finished rather quickly, needless to say, and somehow I ended up chasing a lot of balls.

Finally, hot, tired, and aching from my sunburn, I went home and relaxed with a cool one. Then it hit me, that's when I realized that summer was actually here. Why, all in the course of that day I had cut the grass, played golf, went fishing (for my golf balls), layed in the sun, played in the water, lost to my tennis student, and got a sunburn. And the crazy thing is, I enjoyed it.

Still hot, tired, and aching from sunburn, I began wondering when cooler weather would return.

Besides this being the sunburn season with all its pleasures, the summer is a special time for Northwestern and the Natchitoches area, this being Natchitoches Folk Festival time. We can all look forward to the festival each year, but this year's festival is sort of special as it places the spotlight on the railroad industry and its contributions to our cultural heritage.

Sometimes is the 1880's, a man named Samuel Woods began working for a railroad. Woods later met and married his wife in Centerville, Mississippi, where their first child was born in 1892. The Woods family moved across the state of Mississippi several times during these years, just a part of the demands a section foreman like Woods adhered to as an employee of the railroad.

Around the turn of this century, Mrs. Woods gave birth to a daughter, Ruby, and as the years passed and the family grew in size, the Woods again moved. This time they moved to Dodson, Louisiana in 1918. Samuel Woods now worked for the Rock Island Railroad, and four years later moved to Winnfield with the Rock Island.

Woods made many friends in the Winnfield area, many of whom also worked for railroads. In 1922 he became good friends with a section foreman who worked for the old Tremont and Gulf Railroad, now called the Illinois Central. He and Woods would sit around the house, and probably the front porch, and talk about the railroad business. The man came to know the Woods family quite well, particularly Ruby. He and Ruby were married in 1924. The man was Willie Noel Anderson, my grandfather.

The railroad played a big part in the growth of this nation, its heritage, and in the development of families and communities. It led to the development and growth of my family, so this year's festival is very special to me. Both Great-grandfather Woods and "Papa" Anderson worked for various railroads more than forty years each. The railroad, next to their families, was their life. And with this, the 1983 Natchitoches Folk Festival is indeed a special event for me. It just might be special for you.

Letter to The Editor

Dear Sir:

I want to take this opportunity, a letter to your paper, to tell students and faculty, personally, about the 1984 meeting of the South Central Renaissance Conference. That 1984 meeting next April is scheduled to be hosted by Northwestern, a first for our university.

Attracting students and scholars from over seven states, the SCRC is rather an unique academic organization in that it cuts across the usual and traditional academic borderlines. It includes people from literature, languages, drama, history, art, music, philosophy, architecture, even horsemanship.

Following a suggestion from Dean George Stokes, I am also looking into the possibility of our holding a Medieval-Renaissance Fair--complete with jousts, dancers, acrobats, jugglers, clowns, players, wrestlers, musicians and troubadors, serving wenches and bawds, clerics and fops, poets and ladies, scholars and sinners, ale-sellers and ale-drinkers... Such festivals have been successful in other places, and we can do it here.

Both events, though, will require work and co-operation. If you are interested, please let me know at the Dept. of Languages.

Sincerely yours,
Jos. A. Johnson

Those initiates are Lawson Adams, Perry Anderson, Brian Barrios, Donald Bihm, Scott Burt, Mark Cosand, Jeff Fonda, Jimmy Hartline, Henry Ingram, Timothy Jacobs, Barrett McClinton, Michael Miguez, David Nardini, Leonard Powell, Michael Prudhomme, Jon Robbins, Duke Terrell and Parker Thompson. These persons were chosen through a very selective process. Among criteria for selection were: (1) 2.60 overall grade point average, (2) a member in two organizations, and (3) an officer in one organization. We are very proud to say these men are Blue Key members.

Officers were also selected and are as follows: Stan Powell, President; Ed Dupuis, Vice President; John Williams, Secretary; Robert Breikreutz, Treasurer.

The recent addition of our alumni chapter has each of us very excited. The chapter is expected to be about 150 strong under the leadership of the following officers: Dean (retired) L.O. Nichols, President; Dean F.C. Bosarge, Vice President; Jimmy L. Berry, Corresponding Secretary; L.W. Blanton, Recording Sec./Treasurer.

With this addition there is a strong possibility that our chapter will have the distinction of being Blue Key National's very first national alumni chapter.

The camp staff will include members of the NSU Cane River Belles and nationally-known instructors for Drill Team World.

Return of The State of the Union

By Charlene Elvers
SUGB President

Welcome to summer school? What? You say you are not too excited, maybe even bored? Well, I hate to tell you but you've got no one to blame but yourself. Let's look at the facts: 1) There are 290 students living on campus. 2) There are 1338 students enrolled in summer school. 3) The maximum number of hours you can take in the summer is 12. 4) With a limited number of hours and class meetings every day, the workload should be less, therefore leaving students with more leisure time.

Okay, now we'll start from the top. 1) So there aren't that many students on campus. This should give you the opportunity to get to know everyone and make new friends. 2) Many students who go to summer school live off campus. 3) and 4) Most people have more free time during the summer which can be spent in many ways instead of wasted.

How? Well, to begin with, the Student Union Governing Board has scheduled events and movies every week which we hope will appeal to the majority of students. These events have been printed in calendar form and passed out during registration and in the dorms. Posters are also hung up around campus, the major events will be advertised on the sign across the street from the Union, will be announced over KNWD, and will be advertised in the Current Sauce. Included in these events is the Natchitoches Folk Festival in July that the SUGB donates money to each summer so students may attend free of charge.

Still bored? There's always the Recreation Complex which was planned by the SUGB Representatives. This Complex has 4 tennis courts, a swimming pool, and a golf course with practice areas so everyone can learn to play. The Addition also provides a relaxing atmosphere for students to lounge in between classes and to catch their favorite evening shows.

These things still only take up some of the spare time of the summer school student so why not participate in a few other things? How about playing Intramural sports, writing for the Current Sauce, working for KNWD, or joining an SGA or SUGB committee?

Bored with summer school? Sorry, it's your own fault!

SUGB

The Student Union Governing Board sponsored a Hawaiian Dance Wednesday night, June 15 in the Student Union Ballroom. Entertainment was provided by The Lex Luther Band from Alexandria.

Upcoming SUGB events include a performance by Dr. John's Frisbee Show on June 29 at 2 p.m. on the ROTC field. On July 9, the SUGB will sponsor a trip to Six Flags in Arlington, Texas.

Golf Scramble Continues At Complex

A seven under par captured the winnings in the third week of play at the NSU Recreation Complex Super Scramble held June 13. The winning team of Brian Bonnett, Kathy Levy, Leo Johnson, Tom Fair, Bob Wilson, Chuck Barrios, and Glen Thames hit on a streak of hot putting to win by two strokes.

On the previous week's winning scorecard were Steve Lowe, Randy lucky, Chuck Barrios, Bob Wilson, and bob lckes. Lowe's team won the scramble with a six under par.

Ken Poleman, Grover Bates, Tommy Swacker, David Stanton, and Bob Coleman won the first Super Scramble championship after shooting a four under par on May 30.

Season Ends With 26-30 Record

Northwestern's baseball team ended the 1983 season with a 26-30 overall record, placing fourth in the Trans America conference tournament held in Shreveport.

In the tournament the Demons lost in the first round to Arkansas-Little Rock by an 8-4 margin, then came back to defeat Samford 9-1 and Hardin-Simmons 7-3 before dropping a 6-5 decision to Georgia Southern. Mercer won the league crown.

The 26 wins during the season is the second highest number of wins ever for a Demon team in a single season, second only to the 31 wins posted in 1978. The Demons also turned 30 doubles plays during the season, another second best in school history and the .954 fielding percentage was second only to the 1967 team that fielded .962 during the year.

Senior outfielder Jerry Norvell led the way at the plate, as he hit .320 on the season. Junior third baseman Scott Huseroft was second in hitting at .304 and senior outfielder Steve Graf batted .298.

Graf led the team with 39 RBI's followed by David Reynolds with 34. Norvell had

Each week throughout this summer the NSU Recreation Complex will sponsor a nine hole scramble on Mondays at 5 p.m. A total of 15 scrambles will be held, including the three previous week's, with players needing to enter at least 10 to qualify for the 18 hole Super Scramble to be played in September.

There is a five dollar fee for entering each week, but winnings are paid off in gift certificates from the Recreation Complex. Those who qualify for the Super Scramble will be playing for prizes and merchandise in excess of $1000 to be given away by the Complex and Michelob. The grand prize includes a Michelob Staff bag, head covers, and travel bag cover.

NSU Finishes Third In TAAC Tennis

Departing senior Donny Lovo upset the No. 1 seed in the No. 2 singles division en route to leading Northwestern to a third place finish in the Trans America Athletic Conference tennis tournament.

Arkansas-Little Rock claimed the top team honors with 66 points and they were followed by Georgia-Southern with 62. Northwestern's third place finish (they scored 57 points) marks their lowest finish ever in the league tennis tourney.

Lovo upset the No. 1 seed, Richard Person of Arkansas-Little Rock in the semi-finals and came back to whip Mike Inbornone of Georgia-Southern in the finals in straight sets. Lovo's season ending mark of 16-5 was best on the team.

Not to be outdone, Francisco Acuna and Jorge Salvo teamed up to win the No. 3 crown with a three-set whipping of a Georgia-Southern duo.

Morris Brown won second in the No. 4 singles while Hugo Molina and Lytt Allen both placed third in the No. 3 and No. 4 singles. Jorge Salkeld claimed fourth in the No. 1 singles and Salvo was fifth in the No. 5 singles.

Steve Stockton Selected All-American

Northwestern's Steve Stockton placed second in the nation with a toss of 271-10 in the javelin to gain All-America honors for the second consecutive year and place NSU to a number 25 spot in the nation at the NCAA national track and field meet.

This year marked the lowest finish in the last three years for the Demons, but still established the school as one of the major powers in men's track and field competition.

Stockton's school and state collegiate record toss, marked the third straight year in which NSU has placed either first or second in the country in at least one event.

While Stockton was doing his thing in the field, Northwestern's 400-meter relay team (consisting of Wilson Brown, Edgar Washington, Mario Johnson, and Percy McGlory) was placing 10th in the national competition. Washington and Johnson earned All-America honors last spring as part of the 400-meter relay team that took first place in the NCAA meet.

Stockton's new school record broke the mark of 260-

11 that he had set earlier this year in Baton Rouge. It also broke the Louisiana collegiate mark of 269-3 that was set by LSU's Demon McNabb in 1967.

After the Demon relay team had qualified for the national meet just a few days before the start of the national meet, Coach Leon Johnson was more than happy with the time of 39.93, their best time of the season. Of those four runners, Johnson is a junior, Washington and McGlory are sophomores and Brown a freshman.

Prior to the national meet the NSU relay team qualified at the Rice Meet of Champions by winning the event in a meet record time of 39.94.

"Winning at Rice and setting that record was something we dreamed of," said Coach Johnson. "Although we were only 10th at the nationals, Percy pulled a muscle and wasn't running full speed at the end. I was very happy with the way our relay team ran over the final few weeks of the season."

Of Stockton's record setting throw, Johnson said he felt it could happen all along and Stockton showed that by placing second in the qualifying early in the meet. "Steve has always been a warm weather thrower who has progressed with the year," noted Johnson.

"Ever since Steve was in high school, he has thrown well at the big meets, he is just a heck of a competitor," added Johnson. "He has made some adjustments, but I would say the main reason for his improvement this year is that he is physically stronger."

While the NCAA meet ended the year for most of the Demons, Stockton and Schweitzer will compete later in the month in the TAC Nationals. Stockton will compete in the javelin competition at the TAC meet in Indianapolis, Ind., June 17-19.

Schweitzer, who was redshirted this year and is competing unattached, will compete in the TAC decathlon competition in Los Angeles June 21-22. Schweitzer placed 11th in the nation at the NCAA meet last year and will be a Demon senior in 1984.

Golf Team Finishes Sixth In TAAC

Northwestern's golf team ended the season with a sixth place finish in the nine team Trans America Athletic Conference's tournament held in Shreveport. Georgia-Southern won the tournament followed by Houston Baptist.

Joey Brown, who led the Demons all year, again paced the linksters in the tournament with a 233 total for 54 holes. He fired a closing round 73. For the year Brown had a 79.2 average to lead the Demon team.

Like Brown, Demon golfer Eddie McDugle was the Demons second lowest golfer in the tourney as well as the season. In the TAAC tournament McDugle shot a 239 with a low score of 79 on the second day of the tournament. For the year McDugle average 83.1 strokes per round.

First year player Joe Bienvenu, who until recently, had never seriously played golf, was the Demons No. 3 man with an 88.8 average, including his season low of 80 at the TAAC tournament. The Demons had five of their six golfer record season lows at the TAAC tourney.

Danny Nolan averaged an even 90 shots per round to finish fourth on the golf team and Bobby Critselous and Dwayne Mitchell averaged 91.4 and 89.0 for the year.

The Demons competed in four tournaments during the year with their highest finish being third in the La. Tech Triangular meet at the Pine Hills Country Club in Calhoun, Texas.

NSU Inks Distance Runner, Jumper

A distance runner from Lake Charles and a jumper from Lafayette are the latest track and field recruits to sign with Northwestern. Demon track and field Coach Leon Johnson announced that Ricky Fuller of LaGrange High School and Paul Francis of Northside High of Lafayette have both signed to attend.

Fuller is a distance runner who will also compete in the Fall for the NSU cross country team. Fuller has a best of 9:54 in the two mile and during his senior year was a cross country district champion.

Francis won the state AAA state championship in the long jump for Northside High and has a best effort in the event of 23-8. Johnson feels both of the most recent signees can help the Demons immediately.

"We are very happy to have these two sign because they can help us in areas where our track team needs help," said Johnson. "We need good quality distance runners for both cross country and Spring track, and Ricky can help us right away in both areas."

"Paul can be an outstanding college jumper," added Johnson about the Northside product. "He is a hard worker who will improve as he gains more maturity. We were looking for help in our jumping events and Paul is the type of athlete who will help us right away."

Fuller and Francis join a list of Northwestern track recruits that includes hurdler Dennis Hill from Texarkana, sprinter Cedric Evans from Alexandria, distance runner Micky Billings from Alexandria, quarter-miler Donald Toussaint from Opelousas and hurdler Gerald Henry from Sunset High School.

NSU Represented At Rodeo Finals In Montana

Four students are representing Northwestern this week at the College National Finals Rodeo in Bozeman, Mont.

Brian Thomas of Natchitoches is competing in steer wrestling as the Southern Region champion. He was tied for seventh place in the national standings going into the week-long CNFR, where last year he won the second round of team roping.

Telena Hines of DeRidder is representing NSU in the Miss College Rodeo Queen competition. She was the sixth-place barrel racer for the 1982-83 Southern Region season.

Shawn Frey of Eunice and Jeb Barney of Beckville, Tex., were selected by team roping qualifiers from other schools to be their roping partners at the CNFR, which is sponsored by the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association.

NSU Finishes Fourth In TAAC Baseball

five triples, Reynolds six home runs and Billy Stevenson 10 doubles. Reynolds is a freshman shortstop and Stevenson a freshman at second base.

Norvell and Graf both had 178 at-bats during the season, tying a single season record that was set by Curtis Ardoin in 1978 and tied by Chris Marshall in 1981. Norvell also set a school record for 57 hits in a season, breaking the old mark of 56 set by Ardoin in 1978.

Norvell also tied one other school record by collecting five triples, that tying the mark set by Ardoin during both the 1976 and 1978 seasons. The team total of 14 triples also set a new mark, breaking the old record of 12 hits during the 1978 season.

In the pitching department, junior right-hander John Kowalski established new Demon records in three categories. Kowalski appeared in 22 games, breaking the old mark of 18 set by Don Shields in 1967.

Kowalski also was on the mound to start 15 games, bettering the old mark of 14 set by Woody Schick set in 1971. The 10 losses recorded by Kowalski is also a new record, topping the old record of nine set by Dennis Choate in 1975 and Kevin Stagner in 1977. As a team the Demons established a new record for a pitching staff by collecting 245 strikeouts, the old record being 216, which was set in 1978.

The Demons will lose five players to graduation, those being Norvell, Graf, catcher David Grappe and pitchers Brent Trimble and Mike Vienne.

"I was encouraged by the way we played at the end of the season and think it gives us something positive to look forward to next year," said Demon Coach Herbie Smith.

The Demons won 12 of their final 20 games after the Easter break and Smith said several young players played well late in the season. Along with that, 15 of the 30 Demon losses came by either one or two runs.

"We had a stretch during the middle of the season where we lost several close games because we did not get the big hit at the right time," pointed out Smith. "That's something that will happen to a young team. By later in the season we were getting those hits and scoring the big runs.

"The encouraging thing is when you look at our youth," added Smith. "We have a solid foundation to build from in the kids we will have back. But, we will miss the seniors we had this season. Jerry, Steve and David were all great for our team this season and Brent had a solid year pitching.

Tollet, Aud End Season With 15-7 Records

Lady Demon netters Kim Tollet and Pam Aud both ended the season with identical 15-7 records to pace the Lady Demons to an 11-11 dual match record for the Spring season.

The Lady Demons, who were 11-6 not counting a mid-season slump in the NLU Invitational tennis tournament in which they lost five straight at one point, reeled off five straight dual match wins.

Carmen Sierera was the only other Lady Demon to finish above .500 in match records as she posted a 2-0 mark. Liliana Isaza, Mara Salano and Begona Fabregas all finished with 9-13 records and Karla Tubbs dropped to 6-16.

In doubles, Fabregas and Tollet led the way with a 7-4 record and Aud and Tubbs posted an 11-11 mark while Sierera and Tollet won five times in nine matches.

Isaza and Salano and Sierera and Fabregas had 9-13 and 0-1 marks.

The young Lady Demon team fared alot better than most had expected, since the majority of the team were first time players, and Lady Demon coach Johnny Emmons sees nothing but good things to come in the future for the Lady netters.

Holmes Promoted In Athletic Department

Nan Holmes, formerly the secretary to the business manager of athletics at Northwestern, has been named manager of internal operations for the athletic department at the Natchitoches school.

Holmes has been employed in the NSU athletic department for eight years and in her new position will work with the Northwestern athletic director in day to day operations and game management.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J.L. Rogers of LaPlace, Holmes graduated from Leon Godchaux High School and later received her bachelor of science degree in business from Northwestern State in 1980.

Diverse Musical Traditions To Be Featured At Folk Festival July 15-17

French, Anglo-American and blues are three dominant musical traditions in Louisiana which will be presented July 15-17 during the fourth annual Natchitoches Folk Festival in Prather Coliseum at NSU.

Wide variances of these musical traditions can be heard on the festival's Friday and Saturday night music shows.

Four French music groups are being featured at the festival, but 'What we have done is brought together the different aspects of traditional French music. We've done the same with our blues and Anglo-American musical traditions.'

French music at the Natchitoches Folk Festival will be provided by Cush Cush, a traditional four-piece band with accordion, triangle, fiddle and guitar; Walter Lee and His Cajun Band, which does not use the accordion; Hadley Castille and the Cajun 'Grass Band, which incorporates mountain bluegrass and western swing sounds; and John Delafosse and the Eunice Playboys, a zodiac group whose music reflects strong rock-n-roll and Caribbean influences.

Blues music ranging from the most sophisticated to the very basic is much a part of the Natchitoches Folk Festival. 'Nobody in the state presents the variety and the development of the blues like we do,' says Hatley.

Representatives of the festival's blues segment are the Baton Rouge Blues All Stars, a group which plays the more modern national sound; the Natchitoches Bluesmen, a strong small-town rhythm and blues band; Hezekiah and the Houserockers, a Delta club group incorporating country blues, ragtime, jazz and riverboard sounds; and Clifford Blake Sr., who clearly demonstrates a relationship between worksong and blues traditions.

The largest group of musicians performing at the Natchitoches Folk Festival participate in the Anglo-American musical tradition.

Preston Steadman and Friends play the fiddle, guitar and upright bass and is a simple three-member barn dance band. Tex Grimsley and the New Red River Ramblers increase the instrumentation to include two fiddles for the twin-fiddle sound and the piano, which comes from gospel influences.

Arkansas Slim's honky-tonk piano is the lead instrument in a group also featuring guitar and drums. Traditional bluegrass--with the dobro, mandolin, rhythm guitar and upright bass--will be represented by the Loggy Bayou Misfits. Classic bluegrass will come from Dick Alexander and the Red River Boys.

Al Ferrier and the Showtimers will take visitors back to the 1950's when the rockabilly blues had taken the country by storm. This group's distinct sound comes from the addition of the drums and heavy electrification of the bass guitars and two lead guitars.

Brownie Ford, one man playing the guitar and singing, goes way back to the hard working cowboy songs and the ballads that were brought to this country from England.

Gov. Jimmie Davis, who composed 'You Are My Sunshine,' represents a marriage of the pure mountain country sound, modern gospel sound and the heavy Jimmie Rodgers blues influence.

'From Preston Steadman to Jimmie Davis to Al Ferrier,' states Hatley, 'we are showing people the progression of Anglo-American music.'

Full-time NSU students are admitted free to all shows by presenting their NSU ID cards.

Joe Delaney Dies A Hero

Joe Delaney, Northwestern's former two-time All American running back and track star, drowned last Wednesday while attempting to save the lives of three young boys in Monroe.

His unselfish personality was recalled by A.L. Williams who coached Delaney during his career at NSU.

'I recruited him myself and I was very, very close to him. I recruited him as a wide receiver and we used to talk about how his best shot at pro football was at receiver. But someone got hurt at running back and Joe came to me and said, 'Coach, if I can help the ballclub, I want to switch to running back.' He was so unselfish. Everyone respected him and loved him.'

While at Northwestern, Delaney became the only player in NSU's history to rush for more than 3,000 yards. He also was a member of the 1981 NCAA championship 400-meter relay team.

Joe Delaney's jersey bearing the number 44 was retired in 1982. Since then, it has been hanging in Northwestern's Athletic Field House as a reminder of NSU's success in athletics and as a symbol of motivation for the future. But now, the jersey bears more than athletic meaning; it is an example of just how far the human spirit can go.

Northwestern's Summer Enrollment Largest In History

Northwestern State University's enrollment of 5,576 this semester is the largest summer term registration in the university's history and is a 23 percent increase over the summer session of 1982, according to NSU president Dr. Joseph J. Orze.

Enrollment figures released this week by Northwestern Registrar Dr. Austin Temple show that enrollment is up by 1,055 students over the final registration count of 4,521 for last year's summer semester.

The previous enrollment record for a summer term at NSU was 4,689 in 1981.

NSU's College of Graduate Studies and Research reported

3,372 students this summer, a 32 percent increase over the 1982 enrollment of 2,204 this summer.

In announcing the registration figures, Orze said, 'The record summer semester enrollment is extremely encouraging because there are increases at both graduate and undergraduate levels. We are especially happy with the significant increase of new freshman students.'

He added, 'The large summer enrollment reflects the increased emphasis that has been directed toward student recruitment at Northwestern over the past year, and we feel that enrollment will continue to increase.

Applications for new students for fall is up 30 percent at this time over last year.'

All seven of the university's colleges reported increases over last year. In addition to the College of Graduate Studies and Research, the Colleges of Business, Liberal Arts, Education, Nursing, Science and Technology, and Basic Studies and Academic Services reported increased enrollment.

Enrollment in the College of Liberal Arts increased by 18.5 percent, from 163 in 1982 to 193 this year. The College of Basic Studies and Academic Services had a 17 percent increase, from 363 to 426, and the College of Business is up 15 percent, from 484 to 556.

The College of Nursing had an enrollment this summer of 443, a 9 percent increase over the 406 in 1982. The College of Education had a 6 percent increase, from 259 to 275. The College of Science and Technology reported an enrollment of 311, a 5 percent increase over the 1982 count of 295.

A breakdown of the summer semester enrollment figures shows that Northwestern has 1,934 men enrolled for an increase of 28 percent over last year and 3,642 women, a gain of 21 percent since 1982.

Freshman and sophomore classes showed increases in student registration. The university has 868 freshmen this summer, which represents an increase of 22 percent over last year. The sophomore enrollment count of 410 is up 25 percent over 1982. Junior and senior enrollment of 353 and 560 respectively declined by 2 percent.

In the College of Graduate Studies and Research, there are 769 more students enrolled in the master's degree programs than in 1982, a 31 percent increase from 2,452 in 1982. The specialist degree program enrollment increased 24 percent, from 53 to 66. The doctoral degree program enrollment is up 13 percent, from 45 to 51.

A Different Kind Of Summer Vacation

If Barrett McClinton or David Rogers are asked to write about the way they spent their summer vacation, neither should have a hard time thinking of things to write about.

Both McClinton and Rogers are second lieutenants in the Louisiana Army National Guard and were among the more than 3,000 citizen-soldiers who trained for two weeks in the pine forests of Ft. Polk this summer.

McClinton, a computer science major at Northwestern who works for campus security, concedes that it wasn't all that easy.

The Guardsmen made their way across the state to the site of their summer camp as temperatures reached into the 90s. The soldiers' canteens were very much in evidence as they tried to beat the heat.

The clouds passing overhead were welcome relief from the hot afternoon sun, but things began to get worse as heavy rains greeted troops arriving at the post.

The citizen-soldiers, members of the 256th Infantry Brigade, had a tough time maneuvering their heavy trucks and jeeps down mud roads that quickly turned into quagmires.

This year's annual training was conducted with special emphasis on realism.

"It was real tough, that's for sure," said McClinton who joined the Guard because as he says, "My whole family is military oriented."

The soldiers tested and improved the skills learned and practiced during drill weekends throughout the year.

The training included firing weapons, tactical maneuvers and field exercises.

"Long hours and too little sleep made it difficult to maintain poise," confessed the 19-year-old officer in charge of an eleven man platoon.

McClinton and Rogers both serve with the Guard's 415th Maintenance Company based in Winnfield. As Guardsmen they are able to attend college tuition-free.

Rogers, who is married and lives in Natchitoches, says that is just one of the benefits he enjoys as a part-time soldier.

"It's total learning experience," he says.

The men and women of the 415th are the repair specialists. An old Army saying goes: "If it doesn't work, it must be broke." And when it is, it's the 415th to the rescue.

The emphasis in this year's training was placed on realism. As the unit performed its mission in the field, they were constantly subjected to attacks by other Guardsmen acting as the "enemy."

"It's enlightening to experience the actual hardships you would encounter in a battle field situation," said Rogers whose responsibilities included maintaining alarms on the perimeter of the encampment to alert the unit in case of "enemy aggressors."

There may be other ways to spend two weeks but one thing is certain; these two students won't be at a loss for words when it comes to describing their summer vacation with the National Guard.

Guard's tuition program helps him attend college at Northwestern University. Rogers and some 3,000 guardsmen of the 256th Infantry Brigade attended two weeks of Annual Training recently at Ft. Polk. (LAARNG Photo by SSgt. Kevin Gibson)

NSU To Host Renaissance Conference

Northwestern officials are preparing to host the 33rd annual meeting of the South-Central Renaissance Conference, which will be held in Natchitoches on April 12-14 of 1984.

The organization includes members from colleges and universities in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Tennessee and New Mexico. It is an interdisciplinary conference which includes representatives from such areas as literature, history, drama, art, religion, economics, philosophy, music, ceramics, military science, sociology and equine science.

Joseph A. Johnson, associate professor of English and chairman of local arrangements for the conference, said that in addition to the scholarly papers that will be presented, plans are also being made to include events that will be of interest to the general public and non-specialized students.

Such events, he stated, are a forum on the origins and nature of humanism, a musical or vocal concert of Renaissance music, a theatrical production or a movie presentation, and an art exhibit.

Johnson said, "Our guiding principle here is that since the Renaissance itself was not the sole property of any one group, especially not of stuffy specialists, neither should meetings on the Renaissance be limited only to academic specialists."

Johnson, Department of Languages chairman Dr. James Bartholomew and others at Northwestern are also exploring the possibility of conducting a Medieval-Renaissance Fair similar to programs currently held in Texas, California, Alabama and Connecticut.

"Proceeding from the philosophy that learning can be a community endeavor," said Johnson, "we would like very much for such a fair to be held in Natchitoches, either in conjunction with or separate from the South-Central Renaissance Conference."

The NSU associate professor added, "An occasion for merriment and festivity, it would represent and attempt to re-create a distinctive part of an era. Such events allow participants and spectators to learn about and enter into the spirit of an age, a world quite different from their own."

According to Johnson, the Medieval-Renaissance Fair that Northwestern officials are considering "would abound with jousts, dancers, soldiers, acrobats, jugglers, fools, players or actors, clowns, wrestlers, craftsmen and apprentices, musicians and troubadours, explorers and pirates, serving wenches and bawds, clerics and sinners, fops and cut-purses, constables and rogues, poets and ladies, ale-sellers and ale-drinkers, cake and orange and meat markets."

NSU Graduates Fare Well On NTE

Ninety-two percent of Northwestern's spring semester education graduates who have been administered the National Teacher Examination achieved passing scores on the tests.

Statistics compiled by the State Department of Education's Bureau of Higher Education and Teacher Certification also revealed that the other eight percent of NSU students scored within 10 percent of the state-established acceptable score.

Dr. Thomas Paul Southerland, vice-president for academic affairs at Northwestern, said all of the Northwestern students are now eligible for certification as public school teachers in Louisiana.

The bureau's statistics were based on the scores for 26 NSU students who were administered the examination, which is required for teacher certification in Louisiana. Twenty-four of the graduates passed the examination, and two others scored within 10 percent of the state-established score, becoming eligible for temporary certification.

Barron, Bienvenu Promoted To New Positions

By: Kathy Jenney

July first usually marks the beginning of the new fiscal year, but for two doctors on campus, it marked the beginning of new careers at NSU.

Dr. Bennie Barron, who has been with Northwestern since 1967, added to his position as Professor of Elementary Education the new title of Dean of the College of Basic Studies and Associate Degree Programs.

His department will assist in helping students who enrolled with undeclared majors choose their fields of specialization.

Under his direction, the College of Basic Studies will service all freshmen and assign them to Basic Studies, oversee the General Studies Program (including the Baccalaureate and Associate Degree Programs) and further develop the Social Degree Program. Said Dr. Barron, "We will actually create a community college (on campus)... to enhance the Associate Degree Program."

Dr. Barron acquired his new position as Dean by submitting an application. It was then reviewed by a committee and President Orze made a recommendation on the appointment.

"I'm very excited about it (the new position). I feel it's an opportunity to assist Northwestern," the new Dean commented. Dr. Barron will continue to teach education courses on a part-time basis. His office has been relocated from the Teacher Education Center to the present site of the office for Basic Studies, located in the Old Trade School.

Another change of duties is underway for Dr. Millard Bienvenu, head of the Sociology and Social Works Department, who has been appointed the Director of the University Counseling Center.

He commented on his appointment as director by explaining that he had always been a counselor in private practice (marriage and family as well as individual counseling). "So when the reorganization came about...I began thinking about other possibilities, and that (counseling) was one that interested me...that opportunity arose and they were interested in me getting the job."

Dr. Bienvenu, who has been head of Sociology at NSU since 1969, his second year with the college, will still teach one course a semester on the Natchitoches campus and one graduate course on Stress Management in Alexandria.

As director, Dr. Bienvenu will act as the chief and sole counselor. He will be responsible for the administrative details pertaining to the center, and in the future, hopes to incorporate the abilities of student personnel to assist him. At the same time, they will be earning practicum experience.

The main service of the center will be individual and group counseling for students, but telephone counseling, crisis intervention, consultations with students' families when necessary and faculty and staff counseling will also be available.

Dr. Bienvenu plans on offering programs and lectures in dormitories and auditoriums around campus pertaining to test anxiety, communication skills, stress management and self-hypnosis.

The center, which is located on the first floor of Kyser Hall, will also work closely with the College Success Program, Testing and Guidance Center and Career Planning Center. "There are times when a student can use all three of our services, so they'll all be tied in some way," he commented. The center will also be there for students in need of help with personal difficulties as well as those facing obstacles in academic performance.

Dr. Bienvenu summed up his attitude toward his new position in the center in the following way: "I think everybody runs into times in their life when they don't feel on top of it...they may struggle and get by, but sometimes it's just so much easier to talk to someone. It doesn't have to be a big problem to benefit from talking about it."

Gymnastic Clinic To Be Held At NSU

The National Gymnastics Institute's fifth annual summer gymnastic clinic at Northwestern began Monday, June 27, in the Physical Education Majors Building on the NSU campus.

Former University of Oklahoma gymnast Jeff Martin was the head instructor for the clinic, which continued through Friday, July 1, under the sponsorship of Northwestern's Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation.

Any boy or girl seven years of age or older attended the clinic at Northwestern, and no previous experience was required.

Dr. Gordon Coker of NSU said students who were 10 years of age or older could register as either resident or commuter students. Students who were between the ages of 7 and 10 registered as commuter students unless special permission was given by the National Gymnastics Institute's national office in Dallas, Tex.

The girls' training program included instruction of the high bar, vaulting, floor exercise, pommel horse, parallel bars and rings.

Jane Few Marx Memorial Scholarship Established

Friends of the late Mrs. Jane Few Marx of Campiti have established a memorial scholarship in her honor with contributions to the Northwestern State University Foundation.

The Jane Few Marx Memorial Scholarship will be awarded to incoming freshmen majoring in elementary education. A committee of faculty members in the Department of Education will select the recipients.

The scholarship is valued at $400 a year for four years or $200 a semester for eight semesters for a total value of $1,600.

Mrs. Marx, who died in February of 1983, was the wife of Paul C. Marx Jr., who taught health and physical education at Northwestern from 1939 until his retirement in 1971. He is now a professor emeritus at NSU.

At the time of her death, Mrs. Marx was a retired bookkeeper who had been employed for many years by the Trinity Episcopal Church and several businesses in Natchitoches.

Mrs. Marx had earned a lifetime teacher's certificate and taught second grade at Cypress. She also worked as a substitute teacher for the laboratory school at Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge.

Mrs. Marx worked for several years at Northwestern before becoming a self-employed bookkeeper. She was a staff member in Watson Memorial Library, manager of the Student Center and Restaurant and also served as an employee in the payroll clerk's office.

She typed and edited master's theses for a number of years for graduate students enrolled at Northwestern.

For additional information on the Jane Few Marx Memorial Scholarship, call 318-357-4414 or write the NSU Foundation.

The Word Is Cross-Ties

In the years past, when the first railroads were built across the country to accomodate a growing U.S. population, there was a great demand for railroad crossties. These ties were not just cut from a log on an assembly line at a sawmill, but were instead the product of an artist's laboring skill with wedges, gluts, a broad axe, and a log. Cross-ties were not cut; instead, they were "hewed" as the artists like to call it. As the years went by and the demand for hand-made cross-ties diminished, hand-made cross-ties became relics of the past as saws took over the job.

Back in high school, I located one of these cross-tie artists just hollering distance from my own home. Mr. Clarence Bagwell learned to make cross-ties by watching his father make them. In Mr. Clarence's youth, he hewed enough ties to make 20 cross-ties in one day's time!

It was a laborious job making cross-ties by hand. There aren't many cross-tie hewers around anymore. Mr. Clarence died not long after I interviewed him on hewing cross-ties. And with his death went a whole host of history that many people had never asked him about, that is now gone forever.

The preservation of folkways that are quickly becoming things of the past is mainly what the Natchitoches Folk Festival is all about. This year, the festival's emphasis will be on the railroad industry and its contributions to our country's growth and development.

That day when I held in my hand an axe that had once hewn hundreds and hundreds of cross-ties, I became a part of history -- a living bond between things gone and things yet to come.

Experience it. Lisa Williams

July 4th--- More Than A Celebration

It seems that "good ol' Northwestern" is not the only state university that suffers from strained relations between students and administrators over the placing of certain students in certain dormitories. Louisiana Tech is being sued by the American Civil Liberties Union. The ACLU, acting on behalf of some 600 foreign students, accuses Tech of discriminating against the international students by segregating them in one dormitory.

Oh! You haven't heard about it? The foreigners are saying that they came to the U.S. to study, and at the same time to learn our culture, and in turn have them learn ours. The Tech foreign students complain that they have no chance to relate to the Americans because of this sticky controversy.

The suit says that segregation violates the 14th Amendment, which calls for equal protection under the law for everyone, regardless of race, creed, or color. It also says that it violates the 1st Amendment right to free association. A Tech foreign student told the SHREVEPORT TIMES that the dorm "fosters a climate of prejudice that forces the foreign student to 'sit almost totally by themselves.'"

Isn't there some correlation to our recent dispute of displacing Natchitoches Dorm residents to place the football team there? Are we denying the right of the athletes to live and associate with the general student body? Haven't they the same right to apply for and request the roommate and dorm of their choice? If they choose to do so, of course.

It's something to think about.

Now that the 4th of July has passed and all the "hoop-la" has ended...but, why does it have to end? Of course, Independence Day is, and should be, a time of celebration and thankfulness, but we could be thankful year round.

We take many things for granted, if you think about it. We live in freedom we have grown accustomed it, we are taught at the earliest age of freedoms of democracy. Everyday we can speak out against our leaders, and what they day and do. We protest, demonstrate, lobby, travel with ease, attend the worship service of our choice, and I write this without fear of censorship.

Imagine the hardships the people of Poland are going through. I am sure that they are not only thinking of their want of freedom, but are concerned for their children, and their children's children. Our freedoms have been threatened many times, in times of war and in times of peace. Sure, our system has its problems, its inconsistencies, but we are free to come together and solve them.

Our forefathers debated, fought, and combined ideas to create what we now have. Ours now is what we want it to be, and how we would have it to be. Our Constitution allows for this change. The French thinker, Jacques Rousseau, once wrote, "Men...do not govern themselves by abstract views; one does not make them happy except by forcing them to be, and one has to make them feel happiness in order to make them love it. There is a job for the talents of the hero..."

This is what I am thankful for, the heroes. Those heroes that have worked, compromised, and those that have died for my freedom. Much "blood, sweat, and tears" have gone into building this country. All we have to do is keep the spirit that the Forefathers passed on to us--the Spirit of Freedom.

As Daniel Webster, the great 18th Century statesman, said in one of his many speeches, "I shall stand by the Union...with absolute disregard of personal consequences....Let the consequences be what they will, I am careless. No man can suffer too much, and no man can fall too soon, if he suffer or if he fall in defense of the liberties and Constitution of his country."

Who's Coming To Dinner?

Don't you love the way Americans are always trying to impress each other?

When your boyfriend is coming over, the new towels go out in the bathroom. When the Big Date is coming up, the car gets washed. And when company's coming, dinner is nice.

So...who's coming to dinner at the Union? Evidently the PFM contract.

PFM is really putting on the dog for us this summer. I had a chef salad today that I couldn't even finish. It was filled with eggs, tomatoes, bacon, ham and other goodies. What happened to the bygone days of bologna and lettuce salads with soggy croutons for $2.15?

Dollar signs do strange things to people. The fear of losing the contract has apparently changed the perspectives of those in charge. Mysteriously, some of the prices of popular items have dropped. Generally when demand is high so are prices; but at PFM, cookie and brownie demand has brought prices down. Cute.

It's really kind of funny to watch the program radically improve for the summer. The health inspector didn't bring about this much improvement after his visit.

But keep up the good work, PFM!! Radical Rag loves those piled-high plates of chef salads.

The questions being pondered by NSU students now is: how much longer will we be having company for dinner?

Area Museum Preserves Cane River Country History

By Tammy Lafleur

The Bayou Folk Museum located in Cloutierville, Louisiana, houses a piece of history that the people of the area are proud to have as their heritage.

The Louisiana plantation-style house is located a short distance off Highway 1 on the town's main street.

The museum, which is owned by Mrs. Mildred L. McCoy and the NSU Foundation is an authentic restoration of the house which well-known writer Kate Chopin and her family once lived in.

Kate Chopin, her husband Oscar, and their six children traveled from St. Louis to Cloutierville in 1880. In 1882, Oscar Chopin died and Kate took over responsibilities of running the plantation. Then in 1884, Kate and her children returned to her native home in St. Louis.

The museum takes its name from the title of a book written by Kate Chopin, BAYOU FOLK, which includes a collection of her short stories. One of the original copies of the book can be found in the museum. Other interesting artifacts are featured in the museum as well.

Just a few of the many museum relics that one might see include: a large collection of antique furniture, clothing from the pre-Civil War period, and many old dishes and kitchen utensils.

Located directly behind the museum is a Blacksmith Shop. The building is over 100 years old, and was originally situated on a nearby plantation. It presently houses a large collection of agriculture tools that are more than a century old. To the left of the Blacksmith Shop is a building that served as a doctor's office. It was built in the early 1930's and contains furnishings and equipment that was used by doctors who served the plantations in Cane River Country during their lifetime.

It is interesting to note that visitors from more than 20 foreign countries have toured the Bayou Folk Museum.

The museum hours are: June 1-August 15, Tuesday through Sunday: 10 a.m.-5 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday: 1-5 p.m. In the fall and spring, the museum is open Saturday and Sunday from 1-5 p.m. During the winter months, the museum is closed, except for the first weekend in December.

Bayou Folk Museum is housed in a building that stands on property acquired by Alexis Cloutier in the late 1700's from Spanish Land Grant No. 1701.

Upstairs parlor with furnishings of mixed periods found in various homes in Cane River area. The focal point is the 1892 red velvet sofa that opens as a bed.

Behind the Museum is a Blacksmith's Shop containing farm tools and equipment dating from the 1800's. Original edition of Kate Chopin's BAYOU FOLK accompanied with other personal effects of the Chopin Family are seen in the Kate Chopin display case.

Return of The State of the Union

By: Charlene Elvers
SUGB President

The student union seems to be in a state this summer; sometimes a state of confusion and other times a state of calm. However, no matter what the state may be, the Student Union Governing Board still remains active.

The SUGB has sponsored a luau, movies, videos, a frisbee show, a 4th of July BBQ, not to mention the upcoming trip to Six Flags on July 9, and the Swim-a-thon on July 20.

Yet, one of the largest SUGB-sponsored events is right around the corner. Believe it or not, the Nat-chitoches Folk Festival is partly sponsored by the Union Board since $500 is donated to the Festival so students may attend free of charge. This event, which takes place July 15-17 in Prather Coliseum, is not only rich in culture but also one in which people of all ages can enjoy.

The Festival kicks off with a Friday night concert and continues all day Saturday with a concert at night and then all day Sunday.

Now I figure ya'll can look at it as a cultural event, a fun-filled weekend, or getting the most out of your activity fee, but at least try to take a look at it.

Author To Appear At Children's Book Festival Friday

Mary Alice Fontenot of Lafayette, an authoress best known for the children's series, "Clovis Crawfish," will be one of the featured speakers at Northwestern's first annual Children's Book Festival on Friday, July 8.

The Department of Elementary Education at NSU is sponsoring the Children's Book Festival in the A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts.

Mrs. Fontenot began the popular children's series in 1961 with "Clovis Crawfish and His Friends." The ninth book in succession, "Clovis Crawfish and the Orphan Zo-Zo," was published this year.

The first six books in the series were printed in black and white, but the last three, including "Clovis Crawfish and Etienne Escargot" in 1982 and "Clovis Crawfish and Michelle Mantis" in 1975, have been published in color.

Other books in the series are "Clovis Crawfish and the Big Be'tail," 1963; "Clovis Crawfish and the Singing Cigales," 1965; "Clovis Crawfish and Petit Papillon," 1966; "Clovis Crawfish and the Spinning Spider," 1968; and "Clovis Crawfish and Curious Crapaud," 1970.

"My motivation for writing about Clovis Crawfish," stated Mrs. Fontenot, "is the preservation of the Acadian French Culture. Each book is a lesson in nature lore. The creatures who meet Clovis Crawfish never get out of their natural environment."

In addition to continuing the Clovis Crawfish series, Mrs. Fontenot has co-authored three major books. One of these, "The Louisiana Experience, an Introduction to the Culture of the Bayou State," will be released in September and will be available at the 1984 World's Fair in New Orleans.

Other books she has co-authored are the two-volume "Acadia Parish, a History to 1900," which won the 1976 Louisiana Literary Award, and "The Cat and St. Landry," a biography of D.J. "Cat" Doucet, sheriff of St. Landry Parish.

Joining Mrs. Fontenot for the Children's Book Festival at Northwestern will be Tomie dePaola of Wilmot Flat, N.H., one of America's most successful authors and illustrators of literature for young people, and illustrator Eric Vincent of Houston, Tex.

Sales of books by the featured authors and illustrators and an exhibit of the 1983 Caldecott-Newbery award-winning books are included in the festival.

Highlighting the event will be a children's book characters contest at noon in the Student Union Ballroom. Children dressed as their favorite characters from children's book will parade through the ballroom for judging, and cash prizes will be awarded for the three best costumes.

Golfing is a popular pasttime for many Northwestern students and area residents who take advantage of the sun and 9-hole golf course at NSU's Recreation Complex.

Stockton Qualifies For World Games

Steve Stockton, Northwestern's All-American javelin thrower who recently placed second in the NCAA national outdoor meet, placed fourth in The Athletic Congress (TAC) national meet over this past weekend in Indianapolis, Ind.

Stockton, a junior from Tioga, placed fourth in the meet with a best effort of 263-10. By placing fourth in the TAC national meet, Stockton qualifies for the World University Games, the National Sports Festival and the Pan-American games.

"Steve threw very well and had a very good series," said Demon track and field Coach Leon Johnson. "All of his throws were very close in distance." The 263-10 mark is some seven inches below the school and state record that Stockton set at the NCAA meet in Houston early in the month.

Even though he has qualified for further international competition, one of the first things Stockton will do after returning from Indiana will be to see a doctor for a slightly strained elbow.

"Steve did strain his elbow over the weekend but the extent of the injury won't be known until after he sees the doctor on Tuesday," said Johnson. "The medical report will dictate when and where Steve might throw again. Hopefully it isn't anything too serious."

Stockton's finish this season in the NCAA meet marked the second time in three years that he has earned All-American honors. As a freshman he placed third in the nation and a year ago he was 11th in the national meet.

Dallas Mavericks Select Johnny Martin In NBA Draft

The Dallas Mavericks selected Northwestern's 6-10 center-forward Johnny Martin in the fourth round of the National Basketball Association draft June 29.

Martin, a 22-year old who's been playing basketball since he was four, was the top area player picked in the draft. He was the 79th player selected overall.

"I've played basketball competitively ever since I was in the seventh grade and I kinda feel like I'm a good, decent player now," Martin said after getting the news. "I'm glad I'm getting this chance to play with the big boys."

"This is going to give me an opportunity to show myself."

Martin was unaware the Mavs were looking closely at him.

"I didn't really know who was going to draft me," he said from his home in Grambling. "Dallas called me today at work when I first found out who'd drafted me. They didn't tell me when I'd report to camp or anything. They just said they'd get back to me to talk about the details."

Martin is one of three brothers who played college basketball. His other two brothers, Jack and Terry Lynn Martin, both play at Northeast Louisiana University.

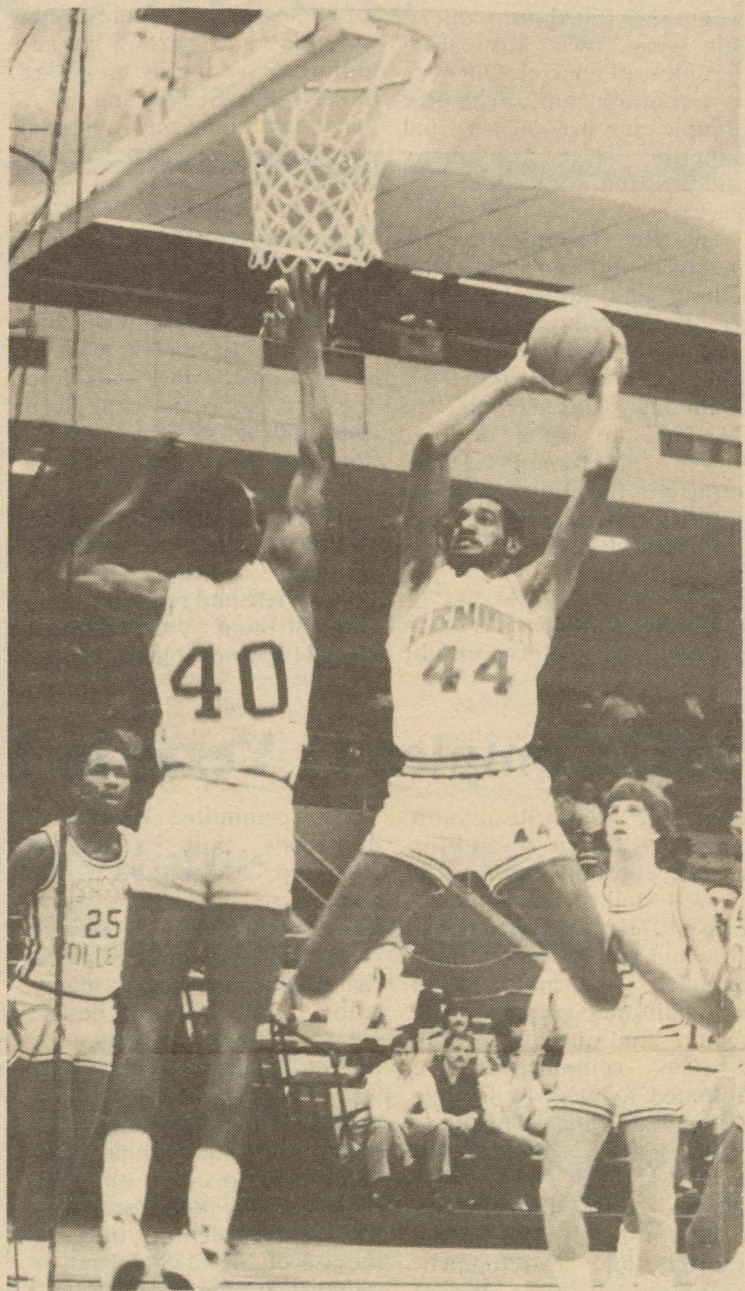

Jack completed his senior year of competition this year, but he wasn't drafted. "I think he's looking to go overseas and play basketball over there," Johnny said.

Terry, meanwhile, still has a year of eligibility left with the Indians.

"I'm glad Johnny got drafted. He's been wondering about it for a long time now," Terry said from his dorm room at NLU in Monroe. "I think he might have gone in an earlier round, like the second if it hadn't been for his surgery."

Johnny Martin had surgery performed for a hernia and he missed about 30 days this past season. "The operation's all healed up now and it doesn't bother me a bit," he said. "I'm just looking forward to playing basketball again."

Johnny, a native of Saline who prepped at Shady Grove High, averaged 14.2 points and 7.9 rebounds for the Demons. He connected on 51 percent of his shots, 73 percent of his free throws, made 53 steals and blocked 95 shots. He was also named to the second-team Trans American Athletic Conference squad.

Johnny Martin goes up for two. He was selected in the fourth round last week of the National Basketball Association draft by the Dallas Mavericks. Martin averaged 14.2 points and 7.9 rebounds for the Demons during his college career.

Northwestern Inks Arkansas' Best Thinclads

Northwestern track and field Coach Leon Johnson has added to his list of recruits by signing Johnny Johnson and Eric Clardy from Nashville High School in Nashville, Ark.

Johnson, a 5-7, 150-pounder, was a standout all-around athlete during his prep career, competing in football, basketball, baseball and track. He was named by the Arkansas Gazette as Arkansas' Outstanding Male Athlete of the Year for his efforts during his senior year.

As a long jumper Johnson broke a 50-year old state record with a jump of 24-5. He was listed as one of the top ten jumpers in the nation and recently placed third in the Golden West prep meet in Sacramento, Calif.

Other than the long jump, Johnson has been timed in 9.8 in the 100 yard dash, has a best of 6-4 in the high jump and has run under 50 seconds in the quarter mile.

Clardy, a 6-4, 170-pounder who was also an outstanding basketball player as a prep, has been recruited as an intermediate hurdler. As a prep he has run a 22.2 in the 200 and a 49.2 in the 400 yard dash.

"We see unlimited potential in Eric," said Johnson. "With some technique work and the strength he gains on a weight problem, he can be a great track athlete."

"Johnny Johnson is one of the top recruits in the South and we are extremely happy to have him sign with Northwestern," continued Johnson. "He can be a national class jumper and he can do so many things for a track team."

NSU's track team has made its mark at the NCAA national meets for the past three years, placing in the top 20 for two straight years and placing in the top 30 in the nation this past season.

Lytt Allen Named All-Academic

Lytt Allen, a four-year letterman on the Northwestern tennis team, has been named to the Trans America Athletic Conference All-Academic team for the 1982-83 year.

The announcement of the academic team was announced by TAAC Commissioner Bob Vanatta after the final selections were made by the conference members' faculty chairmen for athletics.

Allen, a computer science and mathematics major from San Antonio, Tex., placed third in the Trans America Conference tournament this past season at the No. 6 singles position. For the season Allen compiled a 13-5 mark in singles and teamed with Jorge Salkeld in No. 1 doubles for a record of 12-5.

"I think the academic recognition is a great honor for Lytt," said Demon tennis Coach Johnnie Emmons.

"He has been a steady player for us during his four year career and his grade point and academic achievements speak for themselves."

NSU's Recreation Complex : Offering Plenty To Do

What's relaxing, recreational, and a continuous delight all rolled into one? Our very own Recreation Complex, of course! Our very own country club. The Rec Complex has become a virtual gathering place for many students, and what a gathering place!

The Rec Complex is impressive, in its spectacular setting, and diverse, so different from many recreational facilities. Everywhere you look there is activity, from swimming, golf, tennis, to "soaking up some rays." You'll find complete and attractive facilities amid the beautiful surroundings. And, isn't that what summer fun is all about?

The Rec Complex has much more to offer, too. It can be something different for everyone. The Pavillion is often used for organizational meetings and parties, in addition to serving as an eating area. The SUGB and SGA have held numerous functions there, dances, movies, pep rallies, to name a few.

If you want in on the fun, don't worry about having any special skills or expertise. The Rec Complex is here for the enjoyment of the students and the public. It's a great place to meet people. Just walk into the Pro Shop on any given day, and before you know it, someone will have struck up a conversation.

There are so many aspects of the Rec Complex. The staff is there to help create the atmosphere and to please you. But, without you, well...., there is no atmosphere.

NSU Complex 11 Years In The Making

The $1.2 million Recreation Complex is here as a result of years of constant, yet careful research and development. Since 1971, NSU students, staff, and administrators have combined ideas and worked on details to complete the facility. And since its opening in 1976, committees have continued to meet to finalize its completion and set policies.

The idea for a recreational facility at NSU was first proposed to the student body in the spring of 1972 by the Research and Development Committee of the Student Union Governing Board. They had studied the idea to create this unique complex for over a year before its proposal. The committee determined that the facilities available in the Natchitoches area and the university lacked the quality and environment that the students prefer.

The committee conducted numerous polls regarding what type of facilities would be preferred by the majority of the student body. From this poll, the committee decided that quality, landscape, space, color, and interior design would be most important in the total concept. Their goals were simply to establish a student oriented facility to fulfill the recreational and social requests of the students, to develop the policy necessary to insure student priority in the use of the facility, and to establish economic soundness in all areas of development.

At first, the SUGB committee proposed to construct the complex for approximately one million dollars by financing with student fees only, since it had been determined that no federal or state funds were available. They proposed a fee increase of $10.25 and the then existing $1.75 fee for a total of $12.00 per semester per full-time student, and $7 for the summer session.

As time passed, the projection of costs rose sharply. The Research and Development Committee sent a delegation of students and Robert Wilson, NSU Director of Student Activities, to meet with Kelly Nix, then an administrative assistant to the governor. Their purpose was to seek the assistance from the Governor's Office in securing federal funds for the complex. Their proposal was sent on to the Department of the Interior for approval.

Financing for the Recreation Complex finally came in the form of a 50-50 basis. The student fees, which had passed and have been increased again several times, was to pay half the cost. The other half was to be picked up by the Department of the Interior with the agreement that their grant would be repaid by the self-generated funds received from operating the completed complex.

The committee's original proposal included an outdoor swimming pool, a nine-hole golf course with Pro Shop, and space available for outdoor dramas and concerts. The buildings to be constructed was to include a multi-purpose ballroom, a lounge area, and a food area with snack bar. Other features included a TV room, game room, dressing rooms, and meeting rooms.

NSU's Country Club: A Great Way To Unwind

What do you think about the Recreation Complex? Well, the CURRENT SAUCE went there to find out.

Mike Packard, a NSU student, commented that he liked everything, but had something to say about the golf course, "The grass needs cutting, even though I should stay on the fairways. But, it's a great place to unwind after classes."

"I love the beer that's served?" Bobby Waddell remarked in question. "Seriously, the atmosphere is comfortable, but we need lifeguards....and Ernie's doing a hell of a job."

In some short comments Neva Williams had to say, "People are nice." Bogie Patton said, "I love the smell of coconut oil!"

Donna Cox, wife of one of the new football coaches, said, "We just moved to Natchitoches with two teenagers that use it often. It is a great asset to the area."

Lisa Little, a Pro Shop worker, said, "I like meeting new people, primarily from the community. And, it's a great place to take out all your frustrations, especially on the golf course."

Another staff member, Graduate Assistant Ernie Cole, said, "An excellent facility, very few colleges have facilities as such, with this kind of reasonable cost for students and community. It allows for an interaction between student and community people."

Ray Jones, a resident of Natchitoches, summed it all up when he asked, "What the hell would we do without it?"

NSU To Honor Delaney Recreation Complex Hit With Two Burglaries

NSU will honor former All-American Joe Delaney with a Joe Delaney Memorial program during halftime ceremonies of the season-opening football contest September 3 against McNeese State.

Delaney, an All-American in both football and track and field while at Northwestern, died late last month during a rescue attempt in Monroe. The memorial program is under the direction of Chairman Dan Carr and the NSU Athletic Council.

Governor Dave Treen has been invited to present the State Civilian Bravery Award to Delaney's widow Carolyn. Delaney's family, friends, former coaches and former teammates have all been invited as special guests of the university for the memorial program.

During halftime ceremonies, a plaque in Delaney's honor will be unveiled and a Joe Delaney Memorial Scholarship fund is being at NSU.

Delaney ended his career at NSU as the leading rusher in Northwestern history and is the only Demon ever to rush for over 3,000 yards. Delaney earned All-American honors during his final two football seasons.

In track Delaney ran the second leg on the 1981 national championship 400-meter relay team, earning All-American honors in his second sport.

After being drafted by the Kansas City Chiefs, Delaney set Kansas City rushing records in his first season there while earning Rookie of the Year honors. He was the only rookie to earn a starting spot in the Pro Bowl that year.

Two burglaries over a three-day period resulted in losses of about $3,500 in golf equipment taken from the NSU Recreation Complex.

According to the Coordinator of the Recreation Complex, Scott Nalley, last Thursday night the Complex's Pro-Shop was broken into and about $1,500 worth of golf equipment was stolen. The burglar(s) gained access to the building by breaking out a window and entering.

Saturday night or early

Sunday morning the Pro-Shop was robbed again. A door to the building was pried open and about $2,000 worth of golf items were taken.

The NSU University Police and the Natchitoches Parish Sheriff Department are investigating the break-ins. They recovered a set of finger prints as well as a footprint from the Pro-Shop.

Nalley said a security system would be installed in the Shop to aid in the prevention of future burglaries.

Baumgardner Named Registrar

Dr. Ray K. Baumgardner, professor of biology at Northwestern since 1965, has been appointed as the university's registrar, according to NSU president Dr. Joseph J. Orze.

Baumgardner's appointment, which becomes effective immediately, was approved recently by the Board of Trustees for Louisiana Colleges and Universities. He succeeds Dr. Austin Temple, who has been named chairman of the Mathematics Department at NSU.

Baumgardner, who holds master's and doctorate degrees in zoology from Oklahoma State University, joined the Northwestern faculty following completion of a one-year National Institute of Health pre-doctoral fellowship at Oklahoma State, where he also served for two years as a NIH trainee in aquatic biology.

A native of Colorado, Baumgardner was chairman of the Department of Biological Sciences at Northwestern from 1973 until the fall of 1981. He has been a full-time biology professor for the past two years.

Renovations Continue

This upcoming January, NSU students will reach for the stars--on top of Fournet Hall, that is. Thanks to a state capital outlay, the total renovation of the building will be completed by beginning of 1984.

The construction, begun in December of 1982 by McInnis Brothers Construction of Shreveport, includes an extension of the original structure as well as the installation of new hoods and a new heating and air conditioning system.

"Basically, it's a matter of going into the building and taking out everything but the walls," commented Dr. Wayne Hyde, originator of the idea and initial project overseer.

Changes to the building also include new tops on laboratory desks with hoods over individual work areas, re-tiled floors and new carpeting where necessary, and a stabilized observatory near the roof.

The observatory will have a 16 or 24 inch lens telescope for viewing the constellations and galaxies. The facility will be useful to students taking courses in Astronomy, but will not be strictly for their use.

Workshop Presented Tomorrow

A workshop entitled "Studying for Finals" will be held on Wednesday, July 20th, in the Cane River Room of the Student Union. The program will begin at 2 p.m. and will last about an hour.

Two graduate students of psychology, Philip Spoto and Judith Rivers will conduct the workshop which is designed to give students aid in preparing for final examinations. The program will deal primarily with practical applications of compiling organized notes and studying for essay, true or false, and multiple choice tests.

Materials will be given out at the workshop with study and organization suggestions for future reference. After the workshop, further questions may be directed to the Office of Special Services/College Success, room 213 of the Old Trade School, phone number 357-5435.

Hebert Leads Panthers To USFL Crown

Northwestern and Michigan have something in common. Both are proud of Bobby Hebert.

Hebert, former quarterback at NSU and now rookie player with the USFL's Michigan Panthers, completed three touchdown passes and threw for 314 yards to lead the Panthers to the first USFL championship in an exciting 24-22 win over the Philadelphia Stars Sunday night in Denver, Colorado.

Hebert's performance earned him the game's Most Valuable Player award. The Cut Off, Louisiana native ended the inaugural season of the USFL as its leading passer.

Two of his touchdown completions went to Derik Holloway and the one giving the winning edge to Michigan went to Anthony Carter.

The Panthers led the Stars 17-3 midway through the third quarter. But after a 28 yard field goal by David Trout and a 59 yard scoring drive led by Chuck Fusina, the Stars cut the lead 17-14.

Michigan's last score came on the second and ten throw to Carter who took it in for a 48 yard touchdown.

With little time remaining and no time outs left, the Stars closed within two points on a pass from Fusina to Rodney Parker as fans poured out onto the field.

Sibley Attends Conference

Sylvan Sibley, purchasing agent at Northwestern, recently participated in the national conference and seminar of the National Association of Educational Buyers in Kansas City, Mo.

Sibley, who is president of the Louisiana-Mississippi region of LAEB, served on the national nominating and long range planning committees. He also participated in the regional leaders workshop.

In addition to his activities with the NAEB, Sibley is serving as president of the Louisiana chapter of the National Institute of Governmental Purchasing. He has been NSU's purchasing agent for the past 15 years.

Other professional organizations in which Sibley holds memberships include the National Purchasing Institute, National Association of Purchasing Management and the Louisiana-Arkansas chapter of Purchasing Management.

Oral History Recorded

An oral history of the teaching experiences of 95-year-old Alwine Whitfield of Monroe has been recorded and placed in Northwestern's Center for the History of Louisiana Education.

Mrs. Duncan, who will be 96 in September, is one of the oldest living graduates of Louisiana State Normal College which later became Northwestern State University.

She entered the Normal College in 1903 and, upon completing her training, taught in the Iecompte, Donaldsonville and Monroe city school systems.

NSU Music Department Hosts Choir Camp This Week

The third annual Southeastern United States Summer Show Choir Camp will be conducted Sunday through Friday, July 17-22, in Northwestern's A.A. Fredericks Center for the Creative and Performing Arts. More than 120 high school students and choral directors will participate in the six-day program, which will be highlighted July 22 with the performances of three musical variety shows at 3 p.m. in the Concert Recital Hall.

Hosted by the NSU Music Department, the show choir camp is designed to develop entertaining programs of popular vocal music and choreography which may be performed by high school and church groups.

This is the first year that the Southeastern U.S. Summer Show Choir Corporation has conducted its camp at Northwestern. The program has been in Hammond the past two years.

Camp coordinators are Judy Hicks, choral director at Tara High School in Baton Rouge, and Betty Addison, a former music teacher who is now assistant principal at Westdale Middle School in Baton Rouge.

Richard Jennings, head of the Music Department, and Dr. William Hunt, chairman of the Theatre and Media Arts Department, are the local coordinators for Northwestern.

Staff clinicians will be Kurt Chalgren, choral director for Tremper High School in Davenport, Iowa, and the Kids from Wisconsin statewide show choir; Tom Terrien, director of dance at Madison Area Technical College in Madison, Wis., and for the Kids from Wisconsin; Tom Brown, vocal director at Woodlawn High School in Baton Rouge, and Manami Terrien, assistant choreographer for the Kids from Wisconsin.

Guest clinicians will be former Louisiana Gov. Jimmie Davis and NSU dance professor Dr. Collen Lancaster on Sunday; choreographer Vickie Edwards of the Baton Rouge Little Theatre on Tuesday; Six Flags Over Texas entertainment director Mark Brymer, costume designer Jeanie O'Neal of Baton Rouge and keyboard specialist Drew Shaw of Baton Rouge on Wednesday, and New Orleans career consultant and educational consultant Sam Hicks on Thursday.

During the week-long camp, the visiting high school students will be preparing 20 musical numbers, complete with choreography, which they will perform Friday afternoon. Popular music from the 1920's through the current hits have been selected for presentation, and the numbers range from "big band" to rock 'n' roll to vocal jazz to Broadway to patriotic.

Camp participants, who will be entering the 9th through 12th grades, will learn choreography and vocal techniques while at Northwestern.

Lawrence Receives Marx Scholarship

Mary Ann Lawrence of Coushatta has been selected as the first recipient of the Jane Marx Memorial Scholarship to enroll this fall as a freshman elementary education major at Northwestern State University.

The scholarship recipient, who was chosen by a committee of faculty members in the university's Education Department, is the daughter of Mrs. Sammie M. Lawrence. She is a 1983 graduate of Martin High School.

An honor student, Miss Lawrence served last year as president of her senior class, the Future Homemakers of America and the Student Council at Martin High School. She also received her school basketball team's scholastic award and was an alternate to Louisiana Girls State.

Other honors for Miss Lawrence include her selection as Miss Martin High, most popular and tri-captain of the school's varsity women's basketball team.

Friends of the late Mrs. Jane Few Marx of Campti established the memorial scholarship in her honor with contributions to the NSU Foundation.

The scholarship is valued at $400 a year for four years or $200 a semester for eight semesters for a total value of $1,600.

Nursing School Offers Clinic

Northwestern's College of Nursing will conduct a workshop on the physical assessment of the adult client Aug. 6-12 at the Central State Hospital in Pineville.

Jennifer Creswell, assistant professor and coordinator of NSU's registered nurse baccalaureate outreach program, will be the workshop instructor. Classes will meet daily from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The purpose of the workshop is to assist the registered nurse in the development of physical assessment skills to be used with adult clients in assessing responses to illness and treatment.

By completion of the workshop, participants should be able to complete a patient history matching data from simulated or real situations to components of the data base, identify the methods of physical assessment and match methods of basic physical assessment to body systems and observations made.

Workshop topics will include data base and skin, Aug. 6; eye, ear, nose, throat, neck and head, Aug. 7; abdomen, breast, axillae and musculoskeletal, Aug. 8; respiratory, Aug. 9; cardiovascular, Aug. 10; neuro, Aug. 11, and practice laboratory, Aug. 12.

Northwestern Parasitology To Offer New Conference Special Ed. Degree

A new Specialist in Education degree program with emphasis in special education begins this fall at Northwestern State University to offer training to general and special educators which will increase achievement in leadership, research and service.

The specialist-level program, administered by NSU's Department of Special Education, will provide a plan of organized advanced study for practitioners in the field of special education who wish to develop a higher level of competence.

Graduate students admitted to the program may choose to enroll in one of five emphasis areas within the field of special education. The areas are special education administration and supervision, assessment, speech and language, gifted and talented, and master teacher.

"Based on statistics supplied by the Louisiana Department of Education," stated Dr. Hurst Hall, professor and chairman of the Special Education Department, "area school districts and institutions of higher learning need advanced specialists in special education to work as trained administrators and support personnel. Certified assessment teachers are also needed desperately."

Hall added, "The new Specialist in Education will open university programs for social workers, psychologists, speech and language specialist and other related personnel."

According to Hall, the graduate course requirements for the degree will include a minimum of 39 credit hours in special education and related area courses, such as computer competency. Additional hours of credit must be earned in educational psychology, research and statistical methods, and in thesis, field study or internship.

"The degree program has been planned according to the interests and professional needs of each student," said Hall.

He stated that Louisiana State University in Baton Rouge is the only other university in Louisiana offering graduate students a Specialist in Education degree with a special education emphasis.

Northwestern's parasitology conference Wednesday, July 20, will feature David Anderson of Houston, Tex., in a presentation on technological advancements in parasite control.

Anderson, a pharmaceutical specialist for Pioneer Veterinary Supply, will discuss the principles of both internal and external parasite control. He will also demonstrate the use of new and improved products which are currently on the market.

Sponsored by the NSU Agriculture Department's veterinary technology program, the parasitology conference begins at 3 p.m. in Room 108 of Williamson Hall.

It is open without charge to veterinary technology and pre-veterinary students as well as the general public.

City Hosts Police Conference

The annual meetings of the Louisiana University Police Association and the Louisiana University Police Secretary's Association will be conducted Wednesday and Thursday, July 20-21 in Natchitoches.

The Northwestern Police Department is hosting the annual meetings, which will be attended by some 75 university policemen and secretaries from throughout the state.

Highlighting the event Thursday will be the presentation of the LUPA Officer of the Year Award to Mike Ginn of Northeast Louisiana University in Monroe and the installation of Northwestern police chief James K. Lee as president of LUPA.

Registration for the annual meetings begins at 2 p.m. Wednesday, and the executive committees of the two associations will meet at 3:30 p.m. A dinner, featuring NSU assistant to the president Jerry Pierce as guest speaker, is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. for association members and guests.

The keynote speaker for Thursday's program, which begins at 9 a.m., will be Mary M. Voswinkel of Rice University in Houston, Tex. She is secretary of the Texas and New Mexico Association of College and University Police Departments.

Presentation of the LUPA Officer of the Year Award and installation of officers is slated for the business session at 10:45 a.m. Thursday.

Charles Goen of McNeese State University is the outgoing LUPA president, and Carol Blake of McNeese State is the outgoing LUPSA president.

Mrs. Cockerham, who was assisted in the recital by Linda Higginbotham at the piano, is a voice student of NSU's William McGraw and Dr. John Taylor. She is a candidate for the Master of Music degree.

The NSU graduate student performed vocal works by Gaetano Donizetti, Vincenzo Bellini, Gabriel Faure, Carlisle Floyd, Johannes Brahms and Samuel Barber.

Well, Northwestern, we have made it, for the most part, through Summer Session 1983.

When I moved in last month I had no idea that each morning I would fight a seemingly hopeless battle with an air conditioner determined to keep my floor filled with what looked like water. It got to a point where I was ready to stop using all my good towels to wipe up the mess, and instead, let it collect, move the furniture, and give swimming lessons. (Thanks, Housing, for getting it fixed; the Complex is much better.)

The responsibilities of this job hit me when I opened the SAUCE office door last month and saw a box full of 3 weeks' accumulation of mail. Things started falling into place thanks to enthusiastic support from staff members and friends.

One of the main reasons for this falling into place is our summer advisor, Dr. Dennis Oneal, who for the past three years has been head of the Department of Mass Communications. He was appointed to advise the SAUCE this summer during the absence of our regular advisor, Mr. Franklin Presson. Dr. Oneal's enthusiasm more than made up for any of his confessed lack of newspaper expertise. He has put in many long hours with us at The Natchitoches Times office, helping us to publish three papers. At times, I dreaded seeing that piece of paper next to an article pointing out all the misspelled words or grammatical errors. But I knew that he really was proud to be our advisor or he wouldn't have taken so much care to see that things were done correctly.

Dr. Oneal didn't have to accept the position of advisor. He could have headed on up to Tennessee where his new job awaits him, but he stayed here and has given us nothing but his 100%. For this, we thank him. Northwestern is losing a valuable member of its faculty.

Traditionally, one of the first columns a new editor writes is similar to a call to arms, so to speak. Well, this is one of those columns.

We always, always, always welcome new writers, photographers, etc., who are interested in joining our staff. You DO NOT have to be a journalism major. You SHOULD be conscientious, creative, and dependable.

To get involved with the SAUCE, just come by our office on the second floor of Kyser Hall (the Arts and Sciences Building) and say so. It's just that easy and I promise you that you'll be most welcome.

This job is like new topsiders. When you first try them on, you aren't sure about the fit. But, since you like the shoes, you go ahead and make the purchase. For awhile, your feet are uncomfortable wearing them; painful blisters develop. Later on, corns replace the blisters as the shoes conform to the shape of your feet. All it took was a little wear.

We still have a few blisters...

Stuff

by Joe Cunningham

On special assignment in northeast Denmark, SAUCE columnist Joe Cunningham filed this report. This is the first of a planned 2-part story written exclusively for the CURRENT SAUCE.

...Just a few quick thoughts as I finally realize that I am the only one wearing anything on this beach. I should have brought my camera with the zoom lens...

Denmark is a beautiful place. Its people are free (just look at the beach) and the air is clear. The still quiet allows you to sit back and think freely as you watch the strange birds struggle against the ever present North Sea winds in the town of Høstebro.

Time literally stands still here. It doesn't get dark until midnight and daybreak is 3:30 a.m. During the ever increasing lulls in my stay, I find myself thinking a lot more about Natchitoches and good ole NSU.

You begin to think about all the things you take for granted...your family...your friends...your ducks...your accent...You know you will be home soon, but you still miss them all.

You also realize that life goes on without you. The trash still has to be taken out in the morning...Antoon's still rocks on the weekend...Mojoe is still "The Doctor"...James Smith is still a legend in his own time...and regardless of whether you're there or not, it still happens.

All of this may sound too deep, or too weird, especially for the beloved SAUCE, but the fact remains that it sometimes takes a month in isolation, half a world away from anyone you know, to make you appreciate what you have.

Don't take your family or friends for granted. Think about how you have treated them. You don't think much about the Golden Rule until you think about how you left your friends. "Did I treat them better than I treat myself?"

The answer invariably is no. I really think it's time we took the other person's interests first. Most of us can deal with minor setbacks, but can we deal with betrayal. Especially from a close friend.

That happens, and unfortunately, all too often when we put our feelings first and those of our family and friends last.

That may sound too mushy for a bunch of mature college people, but the fact remains that we are on the brink of facing a real cutthroat world out there, and if we honestly try to make things easier for someone else, they might try to make things a little easier for us.

But don't take my word for it, try it yourself. Play the "Get ahead at all costs" game and see how it works. Then try and think about how much you take for granted. Think about how you have treated others and how you deserve to be treated.

It sometimes takes 10,000 miles to realize how you should treat people. It sometimes takes 10 minutes.

As a wise man once said, "People judge you by your actions, not your intentions...You may have a heart of gold, but so does a hard-boiled egg."

Archie Anderson's Bits N Pieces

Northwestern's summer enrollment is the highest ever! And that included a record amount of incoming freshmen. NSU projects that fall enrollment will be up by some 25%. Fantastic!

It's about time that our enrollment figures began to take an upward swing. Recruiting efforts are great, but the major goal in recruiting is to get the student here. Now, the key is keeping those freshmen here for four years. You got it...RETENTION!

There is just so much that recruiting can do. What we have to concern ourselves with now, (and what we seem to have neglected in the past) is student retention. Every year the dropout rate among freshmen and sophomores is tremendous. What's the problem here? Everyone on this campus plays a part in student retention, whether they realize it or not. From the President on down to the lowest classified staff members. Maybe we sometimes forget the reason we are here.

As soon as a student steps foot into the Northwestern arena he is run through the mill. Either he can't find his professor or advisor during their office hours, or he is neglected when he tries to ask directions, when all an office worker has to do is if he or she doesn't know the answers is to at least try to find out. That's what it's all about, isn't it?

This is not intended to be an attack on any certain department or any individuals, but we all do it. Yes, even we students. Surprised? I have done it myself, and all because I am too busy, or as staff members might say, "It's not in my job description." Bad attitude, we all have excuses, but excuses don't alleviate any of our problems.

In these times of economic trials and tribulations when NSU desperately needs students, we need to stop talking about doing something about student retention and do something about it. It really doesn't have to take drastic changes, just a little change day by day. It could be something so simple as accepting the students as they are when they get here. People are not going to change that fast.

It is very easy for us to get in a rut and once there, it's difficult to change. Let's try not to make the students adapt to our ways and accommodate us, but let's try to adapt our ways to accommodate them and make it worth their while. We might very well find that it will be worth our while.

Letter To The Editor

I read with interest the lead article in the recent issue of the Current Sauce concerning the air conditioning in the Center for Creative and Performing Arts. Some of your information is incorrect--

If the "cooling system could have been cut back" in the Fine Arts Center, we were not aware of this alternative. Furthermore, a decision to "cut back" or "not to cut back" is not ours to make. This is a Physical Plant decision, and the "authorities" in Fine Arts Center only give input like everyone else on campus to problems such as this.

Highness or lowness of temperature is not the critical issue in the maintenance of piano tuning. Constancy and humidity are the important factors, so temperature adjustment is possible.

Letter To The Editor

Center "nixed" any solution to the air conditioning problems on campus. No one, to our knowledge, has spoken to you or Miss Hill.

Please "look before you leap," or better still, "check the equipment before you turn on the switch."

Sincerely,
John E. Taylor, Director

and Performing Arts

Editor's Note: Timely, relative news articles, such as the one on NSU's air conditioning problems that appeared in the June 21 issue, are usually researched by more than one person. This insures accurate and complete coverage.

The June 21 story was a collaborative effort by KNWD General Manager Eric Maron and SAUCE Reporter Anna Hill. Eric spoke with someone in the CPA Center concerning the issue. Anna and he interviewed other campus sources as well. Anna compiled the information and wrote the article.

The CURRENT SAUCE stated in the story that the CPA Center was concerned about the cutback in cooling. The ultimate decision to "cut back" or not was that of the head engineer.

As a pianist myself, I am aware that a constant temperature is a primary factor in a piano's tuning, not the temperature itself. However, you must agree that a temperature increase of 5 to 7 degrees would require the retuning of the pianos and would therefore be a concern of the CPA Center.

We have subsequently learned that the building engineers have informed Director of Physical Plant Loran Linsey that a cutback in cooling to the AA Fredericks Building could not guarantee the cooling of Louisiana and Russell Halls. Now, the hope is that the new pump ordered will be installed and working properly by the Fall semester.

Radical Rag

Inside View, as it exists today, has got to go. Not only is it demeaning, but it is also an embarrassment to Northwestern and an insult to the intelligence of NSU students, past, present and future. It is anything but, as the brochure states, "...designed to acquaint you with the University and the opportunities for intellectual, social, and personal growth." It seems instead, to have been designed to entertain and amuse a child, with its silly skits filled with cheap, naughty jokes aimed not at the college level adult, but at a child. The ultimate embarrassment occurred during the July 9th session when an incoming freshman attending Inside View, having already paid her housing fees and planning to become a member of the Lady Demon basketball team, walked into the Housing office and asked for a refund on her room deposit. She is now planning to attend Tech in the fall. Her reasons for changing her mind were that the programs of Inside View were childish with too much emphasis on the party and not enough on the education. She felt that the skits were too dirty and not directed at the level of college students. Now I hope she realized before that college is a blend of academics and play, but apparently she did not feel that Inside View was stressing the same blend. There must be something said when all the programs that Northwestern has to offer can attract a student to attend NSU and then one program can convince a student to seek an education elsewhere. She did not feel that the Inside View program was aiming for the right student, and there are plenty of examples to support her "inside view."

Following the opening song and dance, Dr. Bennie G. Barrow, Dean of Basic Studies, spoke and talked to the new students about how they were "...leaving high school behind and entering the adult world...where you will be expected to act as adults..." Too bad nobody told Inside View they were dealing with adults. Instead of mature programs, the new students were treated to what should have been informative skits, but were actually littered with cheap, dirty jokes. The jokes were too simple. One example of the jokes was during the Residence Hall Capers. During a skit explaining the campus, the "driver" of the 'auto' had to 'use' the bathroom. To be cute, he ran up to a vacant wall and 'relieved' himself, complete with a couple hops for effect. Simple humor, easy humor, childish humor. Everybody likes a good joke, but the key word there is 'good.' To be obvious and crude is easy. Pre-teens do it all the time. This is college.

The program was supposed to inform the new freshmen of the rules of NSU. These rules were discounted almost as quickly as they were told. The students were told "NO DRINKING", but were also told to "...keep it in a bag..." "...don't be obvious..." and one Insider even told a group where the alcohol can be purchased. In other words, "We have rules, but..."

The new students were also told how to be disrespectful to Dorm RA's and Campus Police. During the skits, the RA explaining the rules was constantly interrupted and ignored. When one student in the skit was about to get a parking ticket, he got out of it by cutting off the officer by interrupting with, "Shut up, cop!" Yes, we all must respect the rules, ...sometimes. Otherwise, don't worry about it. Apparently, the lessons in disrespect had been picked up by some of the new freshmen. During the Cabaret program, some new students were rude by constantly talking during performances, walking in and out and being distracting. I guess the adult took the back seat to the child when the childish programs reinforced the past high school era attitudes.

The exercise in Elementary Education did not end there. During the Cabaret, the students sang such pre-schol hits as "On Top Of Spaghetti", "You Are My Sunshine" and "Pop Goes The Weasel." Adult world? Well, maybe someday.

The touch of the 'childs' world begins with the Inside View stationary. On every piece is a little Smurf-like character, very popular, as one instructor put it, with "...the pre-teen crowd." NSU is an institution of higher education, not a day care center. We must demand quality from our students. If we want adults, we must treat the student as an adult. Inside View does not reinforce the adult in the new student. It seems that the original purpose of Inside View has drifted and it is time to return to a program of orientation.

My apologies to any and all Insider that is personally offended by the statements written here. You worked hard and you did what you were supposed to do well, or in other words, you did what you were expected to do: amuse the freshmen. Next year, demand quality and produce quality.

Return of The State of the Union

By: Charlene Elvers
SUGB President

How many places do you know of where you can go bowling, get your hair cut, watch TV, listen to music, study, read magazines, play pool or video games, find job possibilities, eat a hamburger and buy books and t-shirts all in one building. Well, I don't know where you're from, but in Natchitoches there's only one place that offers all of this and that place is NSU's Student Union.

You know, when you think about it, the Student Union really is the center of campus activities. Every student on campus goes through the Union at least once a semester, if only to buy books. Housed in the Student Union are the Housing Office, Placement Office, Dean of Students, Food Service, Director of Student Activities, SGA and SUGB offices. Aside from these are the Bookstore, Games Area, Cafeteria, and the Addition which is an area where students can watch TV or listen to music. The Union also contains many other to be rooms--some for studying, some for meetings, but all for the students.

Now I've been on alot of campuses which had bigger and more impressive Union than NSU's, but they also had bigger budgets. The Union here at Northwestern fulfills many of the student needs and the SUGB is always looking for ways to improve it. For instance, the Addition originated from the representatives of the Union Board as well as their latest project called Union Station. Construction on Union Station is already underway and the Board plans to design it as an oncampus pub or lounge where students may go in the afternoon and evenings to tal and listen to various coffehouse acts.

The Student Union Building not only contains all of these services under its roof but also keeps the master calendar of events for the whole campus. So, for any information, services, studying, or just relaxing, the Union is the place to be.

The shortcomings of the first cycle of Inside View did not go unnoticed. Many faculty and staff were very disappointed in the program. There were changes made for the second cycle, and the July 17th program went much smoother and with less controversy. Some, but not enough, of the simple jokes were removed and even some real humor was included. However, there must be some changes. Inside View should become a part of High School Relations and Admissions. These are the people who recruit the new student and they should continue to escort the student through orientation. They know the new student and the work it took to attract the student. Also, the program should be reduced from three days to just two days. This would leave plenty of time for testing and counseling and an introduction to NSU. After all, isn't that what Orientation is all about? Let's get control of Inside View again and redefine the goals of Inside View. The childs play must end.

There is hope for Inside View. The program now is ridiculous. Can you say Ridiculous? Sure you can. Can you say Quality. You must.

Demons Sign Baseball Recruits

Three junior college baseball players from the Midwest, including two outfielders from Iowa and a catcher from Illinois, have signed to continue their college careers at NSU.

Those signing with Demon baseball Coach Herbie Smith include outfielder Gary Rodgers from Iowa City, IA, outfielder Gary Friess from West Des Moines, Iowa, and catcher Terry Winkelhake of Arlington Heights, IL.

Rodgers played baseball at Muscatine (IA) Community College the past two years, earning All-Sub regional honors this past season. This past year Rodgers batted .266 for coach Dave Huckaberry, hitting 11 home runs and ranking third in the state with 34 runs batted in. Rodgers is 6-0, 170 pounds and bats and throws right-handed.

Rodgers graduated from West High School in Iowa City, where he helped his prep squad to the state semi-finals as a senior. West was 20-16 during Rodgers' final year when he hit .309. As a junior Rodgers was first team all conference in the Mississippi Valley and after earning All-Conference honors again as a senior he was named to the All-State fourth team.

During his final two years of high school, West High posted a record of 40-26 under the direction of Coach Ted Chambers, and for the past two years, Muscatine has compiled a record of 58-41.

Friess has played the past two years at Iowa Western Community College in Council Bluffs after a prep career at Valley High in West Des Moines. Friess, who bats and throws right-handed, is 5-11, 180-pounds.

This past season, Friess led the Iowa junior college ranks with 51 runs batted in while helping Iowa Western to a 31-22 record. Friess batted .418 for the season and also had nine home runs and was named to the All-Sub regional team.

At Valley Friess closed out his prep career with a .350 batting average while earning All-Metro honors in Iowa's capitol city as Valley posted a 20-6 record. Along with baseball, Friess also lettered twice in football and earned three letters in wrestling.

Friess played his high school baseball for Valley Coach Steve Moore and at Iowa Western played under Coach Mike Woulbecker.

Winkelhake has played for the past two years at Harper Junior College in Palatine, IL for Coach Wally Reynolds. This past season he batted .278 with one homer and 34 RBIs. As a freshman Winkelhake hit .310. For the past two years, Harper has a record of 63-16.

While attending Rolling Meadows High School, Winkelhake helped his team to the city championship as a senior when Rolling Meadows was 28-6. As a prep senior he hit .383, earning All-

Conference and All-Area honors and playing in the state All-Star contest. Winkelhake played prep baseball for Coach Al Otto.

Following his past season Winkelhake was drafted in the 28th round by the Chicago White Sox.

This past season the Demons started two seniors in the outfield and had a senior catcher, leaving Smith some holes to fill. "I think these kids are the type that can come in and help us right away," said Smith. "We should be solid with the players we have returning in the infield and on the mound and these recruits will have the chance to help us right away in the outfield and behind the plate."

The Demons posted a 26-30 mark this past season, placing fourth in the Trans America Conference. Twice during the 1983 season Northwestern defeated teams that later advanced to the NCAA Division I playoffs.

Stanton Resigns Coaching Position

David Stanton, an assistant basketball coach and the head golf coach at Northwestern for the past year, has resigned, according to an announcement made by NSU head basketball Coach Wayne Yates.

Stanton, who came to Northwestern after receiving his degree from Monmouth college in his home state of Illinois, has accepted a position with the Hilton Hotel corporation and will serve as assistant innkeeper at the Hilton Hotel in the Chicago suburb of North Aurora, IL.

Formerly a graduate assistant with the Northwestern basketball program, Stanton became a fulltime assistant and took over as golf coach prior to the start of the 1982-83 basketball season.

"David did an outstanding job for us while he was at Northwestern State and we certainly hated to lose him from the staff," commented Yates. "But he had the opportunity to join a business he was interested in at an increase in pay and we certainly can understand that. We want to wish him the best of luck in his new field of employment."

During this past season Stanton handled all travel arrangements for the basketball program, along with assisting in recruiting, on the floor coaching and all other aspects of the program, while also being in charge of the Demon golf team.

Stanton is a native of Pinckeyville, IL.

Jerry Pierce Honored With LSWA Award

Jerry Pierce, Assistant to the President at NSU and the co-chairman of the Louisiana Sports Writers Hall of Fame, was honored with the first annual Mac Russo Memorial Award at the Louisiana Sports Writers Convention held here recently.

The award, given in honor of longtime member Mac Russo, will go each year to the LSWA member who "Contributes to the progress and ideas of the LSWA." Pierce is a very active member in the LSWA who each year is in charge of the Hall of Fame ceremonies held in Natchitoches.

Russo was an active member in the LSWA organization. A native of Morgan City, Russo was the sports editor of the St.

Mary Journal in that city at the time of his death.

"This award was established this year in honor of Mac," said LSWA President Ted Lewis. "Mac was a very much respected and popular member of the organization and one of the most active members. We all feel Jerry is a very deserving choice as the first recipient."

Pierce, a native of Springhill, is a graduate of Northwestern. Pierce joined the NSU staff as sports information director in 1965 and two years later was named as director of informational services. In August, 1982, he was appointed by NSU President Joseph J. Orze as Assistant to the President for External Affairs.

Northwestern Inks Golf Recruits

Kendall Acosta of Menard High in Alexandria joins two golfers from the state of Indiana and one from Illinois as recent signees to attend Northwestern.

Those joining Acosta at NSU in the Fall will include Sam Carpenter and Mark Chamberlain of Brazil, IN and Van Craig from Pinckeyville High in Pinckeyville, IL.

While at Menard Acosta lettered in golf four years, helping his prep team to four straight district titles. This past season Menard won the regional tournament and placed fourth in the state.

Acosta averaged 79 strokes per round during his final season while also winning top honors at the DeRidder-Leesville tournament. Acosta also claimed the district individual title.

Craig participated in golf, basketball, and track at Pinckeyville High, helping his prep golf team to two conference championships. Craig claimed the conference medalist honor in 1981, was all-Southern Illinois in 1982, was named to the Evansville Courier All-South team in 1982 and was team MVP for four straight years. Chamberlain graduated from Van Buren High School in 1981 after playing on the golf team there for four years and also participating in cross country and basketball. He was named Most Improved Golfer in 1979 and earned MVP honors in both 1980 and 1981.

Carpenter attended Brazil High School and also graduated from there in 1981 after lettering three times in basketball and four times in tennis and golf. In golf, he helped his team win the regional tournament and advance to the state meet while winning team MVP honors for two years.

Fournet Hall ...

The telescope has yet to be installed, but when functioning, will be used "so the (Astronomy) student can actually see a star instead of talking about it," Hyde said.

Those students wishing to use the telescope may contact the Chemistry and Physics Department and make prior arrangements.

The extension to the building will house an elevator so that handicapped students may fully utilize all that Fournet Hall has to offer.

Reorganization Begins

At last the reorganization of the various departments and staff positions of Northwestern State University is complete. Departments have been streamlined, combined, and face-lifted to produce a cost-efficient, workable system of education.

Changes are liberally spread throughout the system, leaving few departments untouched.

The chief academic officer of the University, responsible for coordinating and directing academically oriented programs and services of NSU is Thomas Paul Southerland, the Vice President of Academic Affairs.

The office of the Vice President for Fiscal Affairs has been divided into the Vice President for Fiscal Affairs, Ernest J. Triche, and the Vice President for University Affairs, George Stokes. The student affairs division of the campus has seen some title changes. The Director of Student Services is now the Assistant Dean of Students/Student Services, Sam Smith. Robert Wilson, the Assistant Dean of Students/Student Activities, holds the position of what was the Director of Student Services.

These new titles are made to "more accurately delineate the responsibilities and functions of the offices and people involved," said President Orze in his reorganization plan.

The Office for Institutional Research is expanded to become the Office for Institutional Research, Planning, and Sponsored Programs, directed by Otis Cox. The director of this office will have the responsibility for the Computer Center.

The intercollegiate athletics department is considered as external affair activities of NSU. Title changes within the athletics department include the former Head Coach of Women's Basketball which is now the Assistant Athletic Director of Women's Athletics, Patricia Pierson. The Head Coach of Football, Sam Goodwin, and the Head Coach of Men's Basketball, Wayne Yates, are given the additional titles of Assistant Athletic Directors.

NSU's six colleges have been condensed into five. Although some academic programs and courses of study have been shifted within the colleges, none have been "arbitrarily eliminated." This redistribution of courses will help to eliminate duplication and triplication of the courses taught under the guises of different departments, and will make academic strengths and weaknesses readily identifiable.

The College of Arts and Sciences will now contain the former Colleges of Science and Technology and Liberal Arts.

Within the College of Arts and Sciences, the Biological Sciences Dept. will now be what was once the departments of Biological Sciences and Microbiology and Biochemistry and the Division of Allied Health.

The History and Social Sciences Dept. now contains the former History, Social Sciences, and Sociology and Social Work Departments.

The Dept. of Language Arts contains courses that deal with communication skills. Among them will be English, Foreign Languages, Speech, and Journalism.

The Department of Chemistry, Physics, and Geology will house the academic studies of Chemistry, Biochemistry, Physics and Geology.

The School of Creative and Performing Arts is reorganized into three departments. The Dept. of Art will endeavour to teach photography, drawing, painting, sculpture, design, crafts, and art education. The Media and Performance Dept. houses the Theatre, Dance, and the Television and Cinematography areas. The Music Dept. remains as it has been.

The College of Business and Applied Science includes the Home Economics Dept. along with its Business, Accounting and Computer Information Systems Dept., the Agriculture and Animal Sciences, and the Industrial Education and Technology Departments. The Aviation Science Program will be a feature of this College.

The College of Education and Behavioral Sciences contains the Dept. of Psychology and Counseling. The departments of Education, Special Education, and the Dept. of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation are within the College's sphere.

The only change in the College of Nursing is that the title of its graduate department is changed to the Department of Graduate Studies and Research.

Some of the University's most distinct changes are found in the College of Basic Studies and Associate Programs. The support areas of Admissions, Financial Aid, and High School Relations are moved out of the College and into the jurisdiction of the Vice President for University Affairs. Now the College will concentrate on the studies which include development of the associate degree programs of NSU and the development of a community college division. One of the most important responsibilities of this College will be to coordinate all freshman studies and to work with the students to improve their chances of success.

The administrative and departmental changes were a result of a "study of the University, its assets and potentials, its areas of strength and weaknesses," said President Orze's Plan.
